Will Get Reports On Wilson Murder

Organizers Hold First Parley on Crime Control Board.

Developments yesterday in the District Crime situation were:

Chief of Detectives Frank S. W. Burke agreed to withhold his proffered application for retirement after Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen had assured him of his confidence in Burke's administration.

The District grand jury returned indictments for violations of the gaming laws against Sam Beard and 13 other alleged operators and employes of gaming establishments.

Rivalry among "numbers" racketeers was blamed by State's Attorney Stedman Prescott of Montgomery County as the motive for the attempted ambush of Mickey McDonald, which resulted in the fatal shooting of a newspaper route agent.

Inspector Frank S. W. Burke, head of the Detective Bureau, yesterday decided to withhold his proffered resignation or retirement, after Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the Board of Commissioners, and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, had assured him of their confidence.

Hazen announced that the special detective detail assigned to the Allen B. Wilson murder case would report to Inspector Burke as well as to Maj. Brown so that the chief of detectives would remain in charge of the investigation as heretofore.

Meanwhile, the organization group named by the committee of 40 of the District Bar Association held its first meeting and discussed candidates for the permanent committee on criminal justice.

More than 100 persons were considered at a three-hour session, but no selections were made. F. Regis Noel, president of the bar association, was elected chairman, and another meeting was scheduled for this afternoon.

Noel Confers on Personnel.

Noel said he had spent the day conferring with District law enforcement officers, judges and lawyers regarding the personnel of the committee.

The organization group, though unlimited by the bar association resolution, decided to limit the permanent committee to seven or nine. Both lawyers and laymen will be selected in the recommendations to be made to the committee of 40.

Inspector Burke's decision to remain on the job came after two conferences yesterday morning, brought about by the publication in The Post that he was considering retiring in order not to embarrass his superiors.

Burke Upheld by Hazen.

Maj. Brown was first closeted with his aid, after which the two of them met behind closed doors with Commission Hazen, who is directly in charge of the Police Department.

Following this session Hazen summoned reporters and announced that he has implicit confidence in Burke, that the assignment of a

Store Bombed, Woman Killed

Many Hurt at Havana; Company's Other Shop Target in August.

Havana, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—A woman was wounded fatally and many others suffered injuries when a bomb exploded in a large department store here tonight. Margarita Andreu died of her wounds while undergoing an operation at Emergency Hospital.

A police cordon was promptly thrown around to prevent anyone leaving the store, which was crowded during the peak of the shopping hour with customers and employes.

All the wounded were customers.

Detectives believed an employe placed the bomb, which exploded in the towel department. Show cases were shattered and merchandise scattered by the blast, which pitted columns and the ceiling.

The Casa Grande is owned by the same company which owns the Galianost Encanto department store across the street, where a bomb killed 2 persons and wounded 14 others August 17.

Both stores have been guarded closely since by armed soldiers and sailors. All persons entering with packages or large purses have been examined carefully.

$50,000 Prize Won by Treasury Employe

Bewildered by an incredible turn of events that made her one of four persons in the United States to win $50,000 on Highlander in the Irish Sweepstakes, Mary Hunter Booth receives the congratulations of friends in her office in the Treasury Department.

3 New Yorkers Get $150,000 'Sweep' Prizes

Carpenter, Candy Maker, Chemical Worker Find Rainbow's End.

New York, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Wychwood Abbot, racing to victory in the Cambridgeshire Handicap today, won $150,000 each for three New Yorkers, but the trio stayed at their jobs.

In all, holders of Irish Sweepstake tickets in the New York metropolitan area won $950,000.

Peter Dolan, aged dock carpenter employed by the city, dropped his tools for a few minutes when he learned his horse had won. But he finished his day's work and will work again tomorrow.

Father to Quit Work.

Nineteen years old, a candy maker, Koss has been buying tickets for several years. He refused the offer of Sidney Freeman, jr., representative of the British syndicate, held on to his ticket and tonight was planning to use his $150,000 in giving his father, Peter Koss, a long-earned rest.

Mrs. Amelia Lenz, notified that her husband was one of the $150,000 winners, cried out in her happiness:

"Now my husband can retire. And all the stock and bond salesmen had better stay away."

Mary Hunter Booth awoke yesterday to find her wildest dreams come true. Ahead of her lay incredible, fairyland things. She won $50,000 in the Irish Sweepstakes.

At first she was dazed, incredulous. She couldn't for the life of her imagine what she was going to do with so much money, she, Mary Booth, who had worked so many years. She guessed she'd keep right on working.

Mrs. Booth, a young and pretty widow, works in the Comptroller of the Currency division of the Treasury Department. Her boss, Carroll Pierce, jr., was the first to tell her that Highlander, the horse on which she and three other people in the United States held tickets, ran third in the Cambridgeshire Handicap.

"I couldn't believe I'd won so much money," she said. "I was so excited I couldn't speak."

Worried at Delay.

But when the early excitement had died down, when most of the newspapermen and photographers had left, Mrs. Booth returned to her typewriter, worried lest delay in the normal processes of her routine had annoyed her boss.

She didn't want to be interviewed during Treasury hours. She was afraid the comptroller would hear about it.

"In a few years," she said, "I might need a job."

As a matter of fact, Mrs. Booth has agreed to share her winnings with her father, Sergt. Maj. H. S. Remington, an orderly in the office of Navy Secretary Swanson. She expects to keep her bargain. Furthermore, the Bureau of Internal Revenue, which is a branch of Mrs. Booth's Treasury Department, said it expected to take about $10,380 in taxes.

Uncle Sam expects to take a total of $400,000 in taxes from sweepstake winners, the Treasury Department estimated. The holder of a $150,000 ticket, who has no depend-

Kingsford-Smith Set For New Flight Today

Honolulu, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith said today he and Capt. P. G. Taylor probably would take off for Oakland, Calif., soon after noon tomorrow, continuing their flight from Brisbane, Australia. If the fliers maintain the 128-mile-an-hour speed they averaged in the 3,197-mile flight from Suva to Honolulu, they would reach Oakland in about 19 hours. The aviators were unconcerned about the remaining 2,408 miles to Oakland.

Roosevelt Will Honor Harding With Wreath

Marion, Ohio, October 31 (A.P.).—A wreath from President Roosevelt will be placed on the tomb of the late President Warren G. Harding here Friday, the anniversary of his birth.

Col. Royden E. Beebe, of Fort Hayes, has been designated by Maj. Gen. Albert J. Bowley, commander of the Fifth Corps Area, to place the wreath.

Supply Concern and an Officer Indicted on NRA Charges Here

Charged with having worked two of its employes an average of 12 hours a day for a week, the New England Auto Supply Co., 2000 M street northwest, and Russell F. Barrett, an officer of the company, were indicted by the District grand jury yesterday in the Government's first recourse to the criminal courts to punish disobedience to the NRA.

The indictment accuses the company and Barrett of violating both the NRA code and the petroleum industry code. In the case of the company, which, of course, can not be put in jail in the event of conviction, the law permits only the levying of a fine.

Two filling station attendants, Marvil C. Spicer and Hiram Stickle, were required to work 84 hours each during a week, the indictment alleges, while the maximum number of hours per week permitted under the code is 48.

Assistant United States Attorney John J. Wilson, who drew up the indictment, said a complaint had come to his office and had been forwarded to the Department of Justice for investigation. Both attendants have given statements to the Government in connection with their alleged "overwork."

Under the code penalty, the maximum sentence is a possible $500 fine.

Britain Plans Arms Inquiry, London Hears

Held Based on American Investigation and Parley Deadlock.

London, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—The British government has decided to establish an inquiry into the private manufacture and sale of war materials, it was stated in political quarters tonight. Official confirmation, however, was lacking for the present.

The Daily Mail said the government's decision was partly a result of the Senatorial inquiry of the United States at Washington and also partly because of a deadlock in the disarmament conference.

It was believed the government also would propose other nations join a conference to discuss the manufacture and exportation of arms with a view to obtaining a convention establishing international control.

Such a conference, it was suggested, might take the place of the disarmament conference.

The announcement these steps have been determined upon, it was stated, will be the Government's answer to labor's demands in the House of Commons and today's suggestion of the admiralty for an independent inquiry into the placing of contracts for naval construction.

The suggestion in the House of Commons came from Sir Bolton Eyres-Monsell, first lord of the Admiralty. It concerned an independent investigation and followed his denial of reports that Vickers-Armstrong, the armaments and shipbuilding firm, had "a friend in the admiralty."

Discussing letting of contracts by the admiralty, Sir Bolton told the House, "I have satisfied myself by a complete inquiry for myself" that no favoritism existed. Then he went on:

"I offer to the House an independent inquiry as to how we place our contracts. I do not think I can do more than that."

Bank Billions For Industry Is New Plan For Recovery

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Rapidly entering a new phase of activity, the Roosevelt Administration yesterday drove steadily ahead on a vast National plan for the social and economic advancement of the country and intensified its efforts to put credit to work by relaxing bank regulations.

Under new rules promulgated by the Treasury, banks are permitted to make industrial loans of more than 10 per cent of their capital and surplus, provided the excess is guaranteed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or the Federal Reserve.

Obviously stirred by the slowness with which loans are being made to industry by these two quasi-governmental agencies, officials announced this latest move in a new effort to coax lazy millions out of the Nation's huge bank accumulations and into constructive channels.

Like segments in a gigantic jigsaw puzzle, other plans and reports, covering almost every possibility, are pouring into the White House, adding their mite to the Administration's program for the future. Upon the President—and him alone—rests the responsibility for fitting them together.

In a move to simplify the machinery directly beneath him, Mr. Roosevelt yesterday abolished the Executive Council, merging its functions and personnel with the National Emergency Council. This is the agency, headed by the suave labor lawyer, Donald R. Richberg, that coordinates all activities of the New Deal.

Both the RFC and the Federal Reserve banks are authorized, under legislation adopted by the last session of Congress, to make direct loans to industry and to participate with banks in such loans. But of $580,000,000 available through these two agencies, only about $8,000,000 has been actually disbursed.

It was this situation, which has puzzled some financial officials, that actuated the Administration to modify the bank regulations restricting loans to any one individual or corporation to one-tenth of a bank's capital and surplus. The change is considered an outgrowth of the recent convention of bankers.

With $300,000,000 earmarked for industrial loans, the RFC has "authorized" loans of about $19,500,000, but only $3,000,000 has been drawn. The Federal Reserve System, with a fund amounting to $280,000,000, is reported to have done only

Two Smugglers Slain On Mexican Border

El Paso, Tex., Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Two men, described as veteran smugglers and identified by officers as Manuel Patino, 32, and Tomas Popez, 34, were killed today by border patrolmen. An inquest found the men "died while resisting arrest" after they had crossed the Rio Grande with contraband liquor.

The killings marked the first fatal border battle since April 27, when patrolmen engaged a gang of smugglers in the sand hills west of El Paso. One smuggler was killed and another injured seriously.

Anti-Sinclair Coercion Laid to Movie Barons

Katharine Hepburn Is Cited by Democrats as an Example of Employe Warned to Vote Republican Ticket.

San Francisco, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Motion-picture magnates were charged tonight with intimidating workers against voting for Upton Sinclair, Democratic candidate for Governor.

David Sokol, an official of the State Democratic campaign organization who raised the charge, cited Katharine Hepburn, screen actress, as "an example of an employe so threatened."

The accusation came on the heels of a State Supreme Court ruling which blocked a legal move toward disqualification of alleged graudulently registered voters in Los Angeles County, center of Sinclair's overwhelming strength in the primary election.

Headquarters for Sinclair in his campaign against Acting Gov. Frank F. Merriam, Republican, and Raymond L. Haight, Progressive, said their leader was "very pleased" with the court decision; that he had been "confident of election all along," but regarded the ruling as "enhancing Democratic chances."

Sokol, an attorney, writing on stationery headed "the Law Enforcement Committee of the Democratic Party," asked the Los Angeles district attorney's office for grand jury investigation of alleged threats that movie studio employes would be dismissed if they voted for Sinclair.

Sokol asked that Miss Hepburn and the heads of the eight large studios be summoned. He also said he would ask later for subpenas for Douglas Fairbanks, Clark Gable, Will Rogers and other screen personages. He alleged studio employes earning more than $100 a week had been asked to give a day's pay each to the Republican campaign fund.

The studio officials named were Winfield R. Sheehan, Fox; B. B. Kahane, RKO; Carl Laemmle, Universal; Louis B. Mayer, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Darryl F. Zanuck, Twentieth Century; Emanuel Cohen, Paramount; Harry Cohn, Co-

Roosevelt to Restore Full U. S. Pay July 1; Sees Sharp Price Rise

White House Exorcises Central Bank Specter

By Elliott Thurston.

The hobgoblin of an inflationary central bank hovered over the White House for an hour or so late yesterday until exorcised by the joint efforts of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and White House Secretary Early.

Former Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, founder and head of what he calls the Sound Money League, came to the White House to deliver his lecture on how to restore prosperity by setting up a central bank, which would "buy Government bonds in sufficient quantity to furnish all the money necessary." Trailing him into President Roosevelt's office were Mr. Morgenthau, Mr. Morgenthau's assistant, Jacob Viner; Acting Governor J. J. Thomas, of the Federal Reserve Board, and Dr. E. A. Goldenweiser, director of the Reserve Board's division of research and statistics.

It was explained, meanwhile, by the White House, that this was not a conference but a hearing for which the former Senator had long been pleading. At the end of an hour or so, the hearing broke up.

The former Senator emerged from the Presidential office, seated himself in an outer lobby chair and, surrounded by a battalion of newspaper reporters, repeated the highlights of the lecture. Most of the reporters had heard it before, so they were chiefly interested in finding out what Mr. Roosevelt had said.

To this inquiry Mr. Owen replied with a smile that they ought to know by this time that he never repeats what a President says.

Whereupon the scene shifted to Mr. Early's office, where Mr. Morgenthau lingered. And in answer to the same query, the reply was:

"The President listened politely and said nothing."

The central bank specter and the interest began to fade and just about vanished as Mr. Morgenthau added:

"He (meaning the former Senator) has had an opportunity to tell

Securities Act Section Called Market Block

(Post Staff Writer).

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Oct. 31.—Promising cooperation with the Roosevelt Administration in hastening recovery and announcing drastic steps to police the investment business and purge it of sharpsters and frauds, the Investment Bankers Association today completed its twenty-third annual convention in a happier frame of mind than had been noted previously among its members.

A few minutes after his election as president of the organization, Ralph T. Crane, vice president of Brown, Harriman & Co., Inc., announced his intention to name a committee to serve in a liaison capacity between the Roosevelt Administration and the investment bankers. The I. B. A. board of governors quickly approved his plan.

Meanwhile, members of the investment bankers NRA code committee revealed plans for a Nation-wide drive against violators of fair practices and ethics established by the code, and against those seeking to defraud the public. Francis Bonner, vice chairman of the code committee, said several prosecutions would become public in a short time nad that a New York case might be "sensational."

Home Loan Bond Inquiry.

Incidentally, members of the committee also revealed that distribution of the recent $50,000,000 issue of Home Owners Loan Corporation bonds was under inquiry to learn whether any of the 1,200 dealers handling the issue violated the fair practice standard. Complaints of improper concessions by some dealers in this Government

A.&P. Officers Fail to Agree On Reopening

New York, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Directors of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co reached no decision on the proposed agreement for reopening the firm's stores in Cleveland and announced another meeting would be held later in the week.

A statement issued in behalf of the board declared the company's supervisors in the Cleveland district had been summoned to New York to give the directors information which they regarded as essential before reaching their decision.

The supervisors were ordered to report here tomorrow and Friday and the company stated another meeting of the directors would be called when the necessary data had been assembled.

Workers Are Cheered.

Cleveland, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Hopes of the more than 2,000 former employes of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. in Cleveland for a reopening of its 300 stores and warehouses here brightened tonight as officials of the company and of organized labor studied a proposed plan of settling their differences.

Although neither the company officials in New York, nor the delegation of the Cleveland Federation of Labor in Washington would say whether the peace plan would be approved, the optimism of the discharged employes mounted.

The company kept some workers engaged today in moving merchandise from its warehouses to other cities.

Another chain of groceries in Cleveland was beset by minor trouble today. Plate-glass windows were smashed in six stores of the Fisher Brothers Co.

Union officials said, however, there had been no labor trouble with the Fisher Stores, and police investigated the possibility the win-

Mrs. Vanderbilt Breaks Down After Day of Denying Charges

New York, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt denied in court today that she is an unfit mother for her child, and then collapsed. She broke down after a day on the witness stand in the supreme court room, where she is fighting for custody of her daughter, Gloria, 10, heiress to $2,800,000.

For 20 minutes after adjournment she remained slumped over one of the counsel tables while her brother, Harry Hays Morgan, and a nurse tried to cheer her. Later they and other relatives and witnesses almost carried her to her car.

"She's very ill," said her attorney. Mrs. Vanderbilt is understood to be suffering from a heart ailment.

Mrs. Vanderbilt had spent the entire day in the witness chair, denying the testimony of witnesses that she had been intimate with Prince Gottfried zu Hohenlohe, that she drank too much and treated her child like a "poor orphan."

The witnesses, from Mrs. Vanderbilt's own mother to former servants, were there at the behest of Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, her sister-in-law, who seeks custody of Gloria on the ground that the child's mother is an unfit guardian.

Press and public were still barred from the courtroom, but Supreme Court Justice John F. Cafew said later that Mrs. Vanderbilt, in tears, denied being intimate with the prince. The prince, who came from Germany to testify, also has denied any intimacy. They were engaged, he said, and the pajama costumes noted by servants were beach pajamas, worn most of the day at Biarritz.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, 29, widow of Reginald C. Vanderbilt, denied the other testimony of the servants concerning drinking, and that of her mother, Mrs. Laura Patrick Morgan, about her supposed neglect of her child.

Instead, she declared that September 21 her child was "spirited away" to the apartment of Mrs. Whitney after little Gloria had said she "wanted to see the pigeons in Central Park."

Workers Aim Now for Increase Beyond 5 Pct. Return.

Two Federations Launch Campaigns

Differential Doesn't Now Justify Jan. 1 Boost, Says President.

By Robert C. Albright.

Not satisfied with 100 per cent pay restoration promised yesterday at the White House, a campaign for Government salary increases all along the line was ordered here last night by organized Federal workers.

The President's announcement of plans to return the remaining 5 per cent cut on next July 1 did not come as a complete surprise to employe organizations, who already were advised that budgets for the next fiscal year are based on full pay.

Instead, there was a note of disappointment tempering early rejoicing, after it was learned yesterday's White House declaration failed to assure restoration on January 1, when the next six-month pay adjustment period under the economy acts falls due.

Sees Sharp Price Rise.

Forecasting a sharp rise in prices before the next fiscal year, President Roosevelt told reporters restoration of the pay cut is only half the story. An increase in prices means also an increase in values, he said, lessening difficulties in payment of debts which have a fixed value.

The White House announcement quickly drew fire from the Republican National committee, which charged another attempt at "vote buying." Holding the announcement "mum" to gain the utmost effect in the approaching elections, the Republican statement said:

"The Administration has done everything but hang a sign on the White House, 'Votes Bought Here.'"

Hope for Better Times.

With the same general objective, the National Federation of Federal Employes threw machinery into action for reclassification of present salaries, so that thousands of employes may receive compensation commensurate with higher salary grade work they are doing. This announcement was made by Miss Gertrude McNally, secretary of the National Federation, in the absence of President Luther C. Steward.

Despite claims of both organizations that restoration should be made more promptly on the basis of rising commodity prices, news of the President's statement spread fresh hopes for better times through the government departments, where employes gathered in excited little groups discussing the development.

An average individual increase of $70 a year is no inconsiderable item to the 32,557 workers in Washington, and the 585,000 in the field. The prospective $7,000,000 addition to

13 Believed Dead As Ships Founder

St. Lawrence Tossed by Worst Storm in Years.

Clarke City, Quebec, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Thirteen persons were believed tonight to have lost their lives in the foundering of two vessels in the lower St. Lawrence River during week-end storms, the worst here in many years.

The St. Roi David, 87-foot motorship out of Quebec, and a schooner from St. Pierre and Miquelon were lost. Capt. Nichols of the schooner landed at Pigou with four of his crew on rudely constructed rafts. Two members of the crew were lost, he reported.

The St. Roi David, Capt. Joseph Brie, of Quebec, was believed to have carried five or six unidentified passengers in addition to her crew of five. She was believed lost in a blinding snowstorm and thick fog Sunday night or Monday morning. Reports from Seven Islands said part of her freight had been washed ashore there.

Twin Girls Are Born In Rare Operation

Santa Monica, Calif., Oct. 31 (A.P.).—An operation rarely successful was reported by Santa Monica Hospital today in the presentation of caesarian twins to Mrs. Max Curtis. The operation, performed a month before the births were due, was made by Dr. Charls H. Lewis. A spinal anaesthetic was used.

Both babies were girls, the smaller, 3 pounds 15 ounces, being the most lively, outdoing its 5-pound 2-ounce sister in lusty cries. The twins and the mother were doing fine.

Business Gains In Department Stores of Nation

(Associated Press.)

A rise in the value of department store sales to the highest point in three years was indicated yesterday by Federal Reserve Board figures for the first nine months of 1934.

That did not necessarily mean, it was pointed out, that a larger volume of goods was being sold because prices also were higher than at any time since 1931.

The value of sales for the nine months was 75 per cent of the 1925 average, compared with 66 last year, 72 in 1932, and 96 in 1931. Prices in the last named year were close to those obtaining today, private compilations showed indicating a drop in sales volume since then.

Value of Sales Gains.

For September alone, the value of sales was also 75 per cent of the 1925 average, as against 70 a year ago. It was believed by statisticians that this represented some actual gain in volume, as the rise in prices had been somewhat less.

The index of sales value for September, 1932, was 68, a drop from 85 in 1931. Prices in 1932, however, were much lower than those existing today.

Although conclusive figures were not available on the rise in retail prices, the gain in value of sales in areas benefiting from Government farm payments has been so large that it was conceded to represent a substantial increase in volume also. This, however, was balanced by declines in three of the four most important industrial areas.

In the Dallas Federal Reserve district the value of sales for September was 35 per cent more than a year ago, and for the first nine months the increase was 25.

The increase at Atlanta was 18 per cent for September and 29 per cent for nine months. St. Louis followed with increases of 21 and 18, Kansas City reported 19 and 17, Chicago 11 and 19, Minneapolis 13 and 14, Richmond, which includes Washington, 9 and 17, San Francisco 4 and 8, Cleveland 1 and 19.

A decrease of 8 per cent was reported for Boston in September, accompanied by declines of 2 per cent in New York and Philadelphia. For the nine months these districts showed increases of 6, 6 and 10 per cent, respectively.

Inflation Specter Is Driven Away

everybody in the Treasury his story. We have listened respectfully—and done about our business."

White House Wary.

What did impress the reporters as rather novel was the care taken by the White House to head off, if possible, any more scary deductions. The White House has been wary ever since the recent visit of Prof. Warren, which came after Mr. Roosevelt had casually talked about price raising, and was followed by Senator Bulkley's unguarded remarks on the possibility of another cut in the gold content of the dollar. Some of the press jumped at inflationary conclusions then. They might have jumped at more of the same conclusions last evening except for the extra precautions of the White House.

It so happened that Mr. Roosevelt had referred only yesterday morning in his regular press conference, to higher prices. In connection with restoration of the remaining 5 per cent of the Federal pay cut, he remarked, casually enough, that he expected prices and values to rise by next July 1. Inflationary deductions might have been drawn from that, the more so if the Owen visit had gone unexplained—assembling, as it did, such an important official array.

However, it seems the hobgoblin of Mr. Owen's inflationary central bank is no more substantial than the specters which Prof. Warren's visit conjured up. Wall Street journalists departed, calmed and quieter, after something of a Hallowe'en scare.

300 Collegians Fume At Radicals' Plight

San Francisco, Oct. 31 (AP).—Collegians at Stanford and California Universities fumed today against the suspension of five students at the University of California at Los Angeles for alleged radical activities.

Three hundred of the 12,000 enrolled at the University of California, in Berkeley, voted in favor of a one-hour protest strike unless the five are reinstated. Some Stanfordites circulated a protest petition and the Stanford Daily printed an editorial berating the U. C. L. A. faculty's attitude. Provost Ernest C. Moore of U. C. L. A. said the agitation resolved into the question of who was running the university.

Tennessee Boys Don't Like USDA On Auto Licenses

"United States Department of Agriculture," said the flustered engineer.

The pistol disappeared and the man on horseback apologized:

"I'm sure sorry I bothered you. I thought them letters stood for United States Dry Agent."

Between You and Me

Reed and Guffey Close Friends; It's Their Backers Who Are Slinging the Mud.

By Raymond Clapper

FRIENDS of Senator David A. Reed report that they expect him to carry Pennsylvania by anywhere from 50,000 to 250,000. A 50,000 margin, in a State like Pennsylvania, would be a hairbreadth escape, but it would be sufficient to shove Senator Reed to the front as a potential Republican candidate for President in 1936.

Although the Pennsylvania Senatorial campaign has been marked by unprecedented bitterness, Senator Reed and his Democratic opponent, Joseph F. Guffey, have treated each other with the utmost courtesy. That is because of the close personal relationship which has existed between them in the past. Both were Princeton men. It is well known that Guffey was an usher at Senator Reed's wedding. It is not as well known that Senator Reed's father, who was a noted lawyer in Pennsylvania in his day, took Guffey under his wing and handled his legal matters.

It would be difficult for Senator Reed to become personal at any time. It is impossible for him to do so regarding an opponent who has come as closely into his personal life as Guffey. The dirty work is coming from the zealous supporters of the two friendly enemies.

Considerable anxiety prevails within gold bloc nations as to how long they can resist the economic forces which are tending to push them off of gold, as the situation is understood here.

These nations—France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Switzerland and Italy—conferred recently over defensive measures. It appears they sought to support each other's currencies. Their action was a defensive combination against the dollar and the pound.

Belgium, particularly, is said to be making a hard fight to maintain the belga at its present gold value. She has devalued her coinage about 80 per cent since the World War and does not want to have to do it again. Her government is conservative and is seeking to keep her internal budget balanced and to hold down both wages and prices. Her policy in this respect is the opposite of the American policy. Departure from the gold standard would involve a reversal of the Belgian recovery policy.

As the situation stands now, Belgium may be able to remain on gold. But if the British pound should go up very materially or the American dollar be devalued by the remaining 9 cents which is permissible under the present law authorizing a total devaluation of 50 per cent, Belgium and some other gold bloc countries would have to leave gold.

If they could be sure the dollar and the pound would remain at aproximately their present levels, they would feel able to ride through safely. That is why they are so anxious for the United States and Great Britain to reach a stabilization agreement. They recognize there already is de facto stabilization—that the dollar and the pound have settled down into a fairly steady relationship to each other. What they want to see is an agreement that would fix this permanently.

No such agreement is likely in the near future.

President Roosevelt's big laugh yesterday came when he was questioned by a newspaper reporter about future prices.

"Do you think the figures for the first three weeks in October, which have been going down, will turn upward?" the reporter asked.

"What chart are you using?" countered Mr. Roosevelt doubtfully.

"The Fertilzer Association's," replied the reporter. As soon as Mr. Roosevelt could stop laughing, he asked what the perfumers had to say about it. Nobody knew.

Tales of boom prosperity among North Carolina tobacco farmers, arising out of current high prices, are coming back to Washington.

Some of the farmers can hardly believe it's real money they're getting. One old tobacco grower, incredulous over what seemed fabulous prices, was hustling a load of leaf to market when he passed a neighbor on the road.

"I'm in a hurry," he shouted: "I want to get this load to town while the buyers are all drunk."

Frank L. Scheffey, deputy managing director of the national code committee and managing director of the New York regional code—the most important segment of the organization—expressed determination to enforce the code provisions, which in some respects are more sweeping than the requirements of the 1933 securities act or the stock market control act. The campaign will be launched not only against bucket-shops but against any banking house that "cuts corners" in its business or fails to take proper precautions to prevent manipulative or other illegal practices.

The national code committee will meet in Washington tomorrow to set in operation the fair trades practices complaint machinery of the code. The investment bankers code is the only NRA code dealing solely with ethical practices. It applies to the 6,000 investment bankers in the country. Of these, 2,900 have registered under the code, agreeing to abide by all decisions of the code authority, which is empowered to enforce its findings by suspension of members from registration and by fines up to $500 for each violation. Failure to pay the assessed fines subjects bankers to jail sentences under the NRA.

Tradition Shattered.

"Regional committees will deal leniently with inadvertent violations, provided those guilty sign a statement promising not to repeat the offense," Mr. Bonner said. "But willful violators of the code will get the works."

It was made clear that the investment bankers had abandoned the old tradition that it was not cricket for the reputable members of the business to bring to book persons engaging in unethical or shady transactions. A committee in each section of the country is now charged with exposing those operating below standards, and close cooperation with State blue-sky authorities was urged on all members of the IBA.

Mr. Crane, after the convention adjourned, was vague on the purpose of the new committee on cooperation with the administration and governmental agencies. This gesture of peace with the New Deal followed on the heels of the truce reached last week by the American Bankers Association and President Roosevelt. Mr. Crane contended the investment bankers always have been and are now ready to cooperate in every way to restore the flow of capital issues. Consequently, it was presumed part of the committee's function would be to encourage cooperation from the Administration.

Blame for Slow Market.

Mr. Crane said the "one reason" for the sluggish condition of the capital issues market was the inability of many corporations to comply with the requirements of schedule A-1 of the securities act. This section, he pointed out, was a blanket provision detailing the information issuers of securities must give in applying for registration.

He contended that Congress, in an effort to formulate provision which would apply to all issuers, made the requirements "all too embracing and an excessive burden on many industries." As a result, he added, unless corporations had a real need for money, due to maturing obligations, contemplated financing was being postponed.

The new president explained that the Securities and Exchange Commission had authority to modify this "shotgun" schedule by breaking its requirements down by classifications of industries. He said he understood the commission had started work along this line. Earlier in the day Mr. Crane told the convention the securities act, since last spring's amendments, was "workable, but imperfect," and that the IBA must devote itself to making the law "more workable."

Revision of the securities act, would not result immediately in calls for millions of dollars, he said, but such action would help the situation. He said he thought bankers were more willing to lend than industries were to borrow funds and added he saw signs of some improvement in capital flow as new issues "trickle through."

Mr. Crane declined to enumerate other reasons for the stagnation of the capital issues market, obviously wishing to avoid any criticism of the Roosevelt Administration and mar the present love feast. Leaders of the convention have been singularly successful in keeping down hostility to the New Deal.

Outside Criticism.

The only criticism directed at the New Deal policies came from speakers not connected with the IBA. Prof. Edwin Kemmerer, of Princeton, was critical Sunday of the Roosevelt monetary policy, while Wendell L. Wilkie, president of Commonwealth & Southern Power Corporation, attacked the TVA experiment. In each of these cases, however, the speeches were delivered behind closed doors and the IBA failed to take any action concurring in such criticism.

Nor was there a word of criticism in any of the committee reports. Only one resolution, aside from the routine resolutions always adopted, was passed by the convention, and that requested the Farm Credit Administration to publish more detailed information on the exact condition of joint stock land banks. Privately, however, the investment bankers were emphatic in stating the general uncertainty over monetary moves and the mounting Government deficit was the major cause of the stagnation of the capital market. It is true, they explained, that many directors of corporations refuse to sign registration statements under the securities act because of the fear that when they indorse the volume of required information they unknowingly may be subscribing to some small, incorrect detail and thus jeopardize their liberty and property.

But many more boards of directors, the bankers explained, have postponed new financing to see whether the dollar will be further devalued and whether the Government's unbalanced budget will require the use of printing-press money. Under such conditions, it was pointed out, it is impossible for business to plan ahead and make long-term contracts.

All talk of capital being on strike, it was added, is absurd and is controverted by the selfish interests of investment bankers who can make money only by putting money to work. As a result of the barriers set up by Roosevelt policies, it was argued, men of the type of one here who a few years ago offered Henry Ford $1,000,000,000 for his business, can not make a dime now.

Congress Faces Dollar Attack By Oklahoman

Thomas Plans Fight for New Cut, Acquiring of Federal Reserve.

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Oklahoma City, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—Three further monetary reforms of revolutionary nature are going to be the big problem of the next Congress, possibly blocking all other legislation until they are accomplished, Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, said tonight.

Enumerating the measures he will introduce, "and fight for until they are passed," Thomas predicted:

1. The Government will take over the Federal Reserve System, purchasing the $187,000,000 Federal Reserve stock now held by other banks.

2. Further devaluation of the dollar to the legal limit. This would mean removing an additional 10 per cent of the gold content, or cutting the dollar to 11-plus grains of gold.

3. Calling in all of the nine separate kinds of money now in circulation, and issuance of one kind of paper money against the metal, gold and silver reserves.

Charges Domination.

"As the Federal Reserve System now exists," Thomas said, "it is a failure. It has been dominated in its policies by the big bankers. Three banks in New York—the Chase National, National City and Guaranty Trust—can almost dominate its policies.

"They have run it to their own advantage, practically cornering the money power. Congress is going to break this. We are going back to the Constitution, which gives Congress sole authority to coin money and regulate the value thereof.

"When the Government takes over the Federal Reserve, and it will be done, we will seek to have it administered by a nonpolitical board, comparable in wisdom and authority to the United States Supreme Court. It will be the supreme court of money.

Further Devaluation.

"Regarding further devaluation, I can force it, and I certainly am going to do it, regardless of how the President stands, the bankers or big business. The President was mistaken when he tied the dollar to 15 grains of gold last summer.

"Prices are still too low. If the further devaluation to 11 grains does not cause prices to rise where interest and debts can be paid from earnings, I want the dollar cheapened still further. So do the masses in this country. However, I don't think further devaluation will be necessary.

"The moment I hit Washington, I'm going to renew this fight, and I don't care who opposes it. This is going to be the big battle in Congress, before all others."

Huey Long to Offer Bonus Measure Again

New Orleans, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—Senator Huey P. Long said tonight he would reintroduce the soldiers' bonus bill at the next session of Congress.

"Not so much to help the soldiers, but because we need more money in this country," the Kingfish said. "The best thing we can do is to issue more money. If we're going to spend our way out of the depression, the bonus is as good a way as any to get at it. However, I don't think we can spend our way out."

Mill Deputy Indicted After Strike Slaying

Greenville, S. C., Oct. 31 (AP).—R. L. ("Bob") Putman, Duneau mill deputy, was indicted in the Court of General Sessions here today for the slaying of John Black, at Duneau mill on September 6.

Black, a part-time junk dealer, was killed by Putman while the textile strike was at its height. Putman said he warned Black to stay off the mill premises and that he fired in self defense when Black was "running on" him.

slightly better, dispensing about $5,000,000.

As he announced the revamping of his advisory councils, the chief significance of which is the continuance of Mr. Richberg in one of the most influential posts of the Administration, the President cautioned against speculation on the size of the recovery-relief program he will submit to the approaching Congress.

The question of additional taxation is blended insolubly with plans for relief and the economic development of the Nation, and neither has yet been decided, he declared. Nor will they be determined until th convening of Congress forces the projection of a definite program:

Amount Not Disclosed.

Since the decision is entirely the President's, reports ranging up to $12,000,000,000 as the amount he will seek were characterized inferentially as idle. Mr. Roosevelt has noted these reports, he said, including one to the effect that he planned a 120-year program of self-liquidating public works.

Partially, at least, this is true, the President remarked, for black walnut trees have been planted in some cases, and they will require 120 years to mature.

The consolidation of the Executive Council and the National Emergency Council brings into one group all members of both agencies, with two additions—the acting governor of the Federal Reserve Board, J. J. Thomas, and the chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, Joseph P. Kennedy.

New Advisory Group.

The new advisory group, composed of all the Cabinet officers and 22 others, is indicative of the growth of the New Deal's alphabetical setups. Subordinate to the council will be the industrial emergency committee, policy-making board for the NRA, which is also headed by Mr. Richberg.

In his executive order making the changes, the President extended indefinitely Mr. Richberg's leave of absence as general counsel of the NRA and continued his $12,500 salary. As his first step under the new arrangement, the amiable council director issued a new set of regulations for State directors, and announced that meetings will be held with the President on alternate Tuesdays.

Illustrative of the character of reports that come before the council, Mr. Roosevelt made public at his press conference a statement by Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, explaining the huge purchasing operations of the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation. Chief activity now is the "canning" of 6,800,000 head of cattle purchased by the AAA in the drought area, for which 58,254 tons of tin plate will be required.

"In addition to removing the surpluses, protecting the cattle feed supplies, paying the farmers $127,000,000 for the products they produced, and feeding the unemployed," Mr. Hopkins reported, "the Government is giving $137,000,000 in commercial contracts to purchase, process and transport foodstuffs, fuel and other commodities."

Huge Farm Loan Total

Another member of the council, Governor William I. Myers, of the Farm Credit Administration, declared yesterday that 1,400,000 loans advanced by his organization have virtually stopped farm foreclosures, which were at their peak when the FCA was set up in May, 1933. The loans since then have totaled $1,960,000,000, he reported.

While these operations signallized achievements to date, there was every evidence that the Administration, shortly after the November 6 elections are out of the way, will enter a new phase by perfecting legislaiton of a permanent, as opposed to emergency, nature to carry on the social and economic National planning to which Mr. Roosevelt is already committed.

He is looking to the National Resources Board, headed by Secretary Ickes, for recommendations on the development of power and flood control projects, reforestation, the prevention of soil erosion and other kindred problems. The board has been conducting extensive surveys throughout the Nation, which it has divided into 11 districts, by means of boards set up in 41 States.

Seeks Planned Program.

In general, it is the aim of the President to persuade Congress to approve a planned program of expenditures for these purposes, in place of the age-old practice of adopting a helter-skelter rivers and harbors bill. Although the resources board division of the United States conforms as much as possible to the major watersheds, its report will not recommend this form of development exclusively.

The President's Committee on Economic Security, headed by Secretary Perkins, has called a conference for the middle of this month on social legislation, which includes unemployment insurance and old-age pensions. Mr. Roosevelt is looking to this group to recommend means of lessening the hazards which the depression has served to emphasize.

Plans for the gradual abandonment of direct relief are going forward on yet another front. The relief administration, with three rural-industrial communities under way, is planning 12 others in the immediate future. This form of relief, together with slum clearance and subsistence homesteads under the PWA, is sure to have an enlarged place in next year's program.

Mrs. W. G. McAdoo, Jr., To Sue for Divorce

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—The Daily News says Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, jr., will file suit for divorce against the son of the California Senator when she returns from a trip to England in December.

"We have settled everything amicably," the paper quoted her. It said she would sue in California on grounds of desertion and incompatibility. McAdoo, an airplane salesman, was reported by the News to be in Washington. Mrs. McAdoo will sail for her native London November 19.

Iron-Eating Woman Undergoes Operation

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 31 (AP).—A woman patient at Columbus State Hospital complained of pains. An X-ray examination and operation were ordered. Here's what the surgeon, Dr. George Peters, found in her stomach:

Three spoon handles, 10 parts of bed springs about 3 inches long, 23 nails of different sizes, some 2 inches long; 3 good-sized safety pins, 4 hairpins, a piece of string a yard long, and many small pieces of iron and pins. Except for an infection in the abdomen, the woman's condition was reported as good by hospital attendants today.

Mrs. J. W. King, 74, Dead at Biloxi, Miss.

Biloxi, Miss., Oct. 31 (AP).—Mrs. J. W. King, 74, widow of J. W. King, former Illinois legislator and former superintendent of the Government Pension Department at Washington, died here last night. She had been here about two weeks with her daughter, Mrs. J. G. Fisher, of Jackson, Miss.

Mrs. King was a native of Eddyville, Ill., but had lived in Washington since 1910. The body will be sent to Washington for burial beside her husband in Arlington Cemetery.

Huge Coal Shed Razed By $100,000 Blaze

Fall River, Mass., Oct. 31 (AP). Fire in a huge storage shed of the Staples Coal Co., on Globe Wharf, this city, early today caused damage estimated at $100,000.

Sparks whipped high by a strong wind that swept across Mount Hope Bay for a time threatened the residential district. Within an hour the wooden shed was destroyed, removing the danger of spreading, but the great piles of coal were burning briskly. Expensive hoisting machinery at the end of the dock was included in the damage.

Leavenworth Admits Humphries, Lickwala

Leavenworth, Kans., Oct. 31 (AP). Murray Humphreys, public enemy No. 1 of Chicago after the fall of Al Capone, and Edward Lickwala, 20, who confessed recently to an attempt to extort $5,000 from Russel Ford in Detroit, were among two contingents of prisoners brought to the main Federal and Federal Annex Prisons here today from Chicago and Detroit.

Man Injured by Auto Dies of Poisoning

Chambersburg, Pa., Oct. 31 (Spl.). John F. Woods, 57, of Shippensburg, died last night at the Chambersburg Hospital from septic poisoning which developed after both of his legs were broken when he was struck Thursday by an automobile at Shippensburg.

The condition of Mrs. Minnie Wadel, Shippensburg, a widow, who was with Woods, was reported by hospital officials as improved. Her legs also were broken.

Machine Guns Keep Strikers Calm in Denver

Police Permit Speeches Protesting Relief Project Methods.

Denver, Oct. 31 (AP).—Relief strike agitators who were dispersed by police at suburban Englewood this morning marched on Denver this afternoon and assembled at Civic Center. The police permitted the crowd, numbering about 200, to gather and listen to several addresses.

Spokesmen said the meeting had been called to protest police action yesterday during the bloody rioting after a mob of about 300 attempted to halt work at a relief project. It had been reported the crowd intended to picket work relief projects in adjoining counties today, after they disbanded at Englewood.

Rapid mobilization of Denver police and machine guns, bombs and other weapons of warfare apparently deterred any plans for further conflict.

The casualty list of yesterday's riot showed one police officer critically wounded, one worker shot, a score of rioters wounded or injured, a demolished filling station and a police car cremated in the filling station blaze. Still cautious, police maintained a guard at all relief projects and cruised the streets in riot cars. Rumors of dynamite and gun movements by the opposition were being checked.

A possible armistice was indicated by a Federal relief allotment from Washington of $2,000,000 for November, announced yesterday.

Dwellings, Store Leveled in Kentucky Storm.

London, Ky., Oct. 31 (AP).—A cyclone which wrecked two dwellings 17 miles north of here tonight caused the death of Mrs. Emma Robertson, 32, and four of her five children. They apparently were burned to death in a fire which started in the wreckage left by the storm.

The children killed were Robert, 12; Vergie, 10; Ralph, 8, and Wilma Jean, 3. All the bodies were found piled on a bed when the fire department of this southeastern Kentucky town arrived.

The storm struck about 6:30 p. m., residents of the vicinity said. It wrecked the Robertson dwelling, leveled a store about 100 yards distant, and blew down the mess hall at the Walnut Grove CCC camp. The terrific wind was accompanied by a heavy downpour of rain.

Pastor, 83, Missing, Found Unharmed

Windsor, Nova Scotia, Oct. 31 (AP).—The Rev. Henry A. Harley, 83-year-old retired Angelican minister, was found today alone in a forest cabin by searchers who had sought him through the dense Chester road woods for more than 24 hours.

Though tired and hungry, the aged cleric appeared little the worse for his two-day experience in the woods. His remarkable vigor had enabled him to stand the rigors of two bitterly cold nights with little ill effect. He has been missing since Monday evening, hours after he left home to hunt partridges.

Coal Miners End Strike.

Katawice, Poland, Oct. 31 (AP).—Sixty coal miners resumed work today at the mines of the Gieche and Harriman Co., after striking because the company had threatened to close the mines. The company decided to continue operations and also to reopen some old shafts.

Fairfax County Residents Get 1934 Tax Bills

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

Residents of Fairfax County, Va., are being mailed tax bills covering this year's levy on real and personal property amounting to $307,316.64, according to Dr. F. W. Huddleson, Fairfax County Treasurer. The bills are payable on or before December 5, after which a 5 per cent penalty will be in effect.

This year's tax is $17,744.22 greater than for 1933, when it was $289,572.42.

For the convenience of those taxpayers unable to visit his office prior to December 5, Dr. Huddleson has arranged to receive payments at certain points throughout the county beginning November 1. They are Clifton Station, November 1; Alexandria, November 3; Lorton, November 7; Herndon, November 9; McLean, November 14, and Falls Church, November 16.

Odd Fellows and members of the Mayflower Rebekah Lodge, of Accotink, Va., will give an oyster supper and entertainment Friday night in the Woodlawn Community House.

J. C. Heitman, of Fort Humphreys, is author of the one-act play "Poo Bah," which will be presented under the direction of Edward Nelson, of Accotink Station.

Bids Will Be Opened For 178 Oak Trees

The Office of National Capital Parks yesterday announced specifications for the furnishing and planting of 178 oak trees in Memorial avenue, between Boundary Channel Bridge and Arlington National Cemetery. Bids will be opened November 14.

Part of the PWA program to develop and beautify the approaches to Arlington, the project calls for the setting out of 67 white oaks in "informal" alignment and 111 white oaks in "informal" array. They will line either side of the avenue.

City Slicker, Curse Him, Foiled; And a Good Wife Remains Good

Grand Island, Nebr., Oct. 31 (U.P.).—The counterpart of the stage plot of a villain who wore riding breeches and mighty near stole away the affections of a good wife and mother with his city ways and wiles was enacted here today. But the play came to a happy ending just when the outlook was darkest for Sam Garrett, the virtuous husband in the case.

Sam, a farmer, and his young wife and their two children were pretty happy on their 80 acres until Earl Johnson came into the neighborhood to sell magazine subscriptions.

Earl stopped at the Garrett house, looked at Mrs. Garrett chucked his magazines into the hog lot and got a job as a farm hand.

The story came out today when Harry Moore, chief of police, stopped Sam Garrett as he drove through Grand Island.

"Who are you folks and where are you going?" he asked.

Garrett tried to explain.

"Why," he said, "it's a kind of elopement."

"Who," demanded the matter-of-fact-officer, "is getting married?"

"Well, Chief," Garrett explained, "it is kind of funny, but my wife, there in the back seat, and that fellow with her, is getting married. I'm just driving them over to Beaver Crossing so they can elope."

Garrett then told how Johnson came to the farm and became friendly with his wife.

"I saw how it was going, so we all talked it over," he said. "Wilma wanted to go away with him, so I borrowed a car and said I would drive them a piece. I still love her, Chief, and thought maybe if I was extra nice and obliging to her maybe she would realize my true worth and come back home with me. That's why I was driving slow through here, giving her plenty of time to think."

Johnson and Mrs. Garrett confirmed the story. Chief Moore delivered an extemporaneous but very moving lecture on the sanctity of the married state.

So Sam and Wilma, crying happily, decided to go home and try again. Johnson was ordered to "get going," and told to stay out of Morrill County.

S. C. Court Refuses PWA Loan Injunction

Columbia, S. C., Oct. 31 (AP).—The State supreme court handed down an opinion today refusing an injunction against a proposed PWA loan to Greenwood County for a $2,767,000 power project on the Saluda River.

The action was brought at the October term of the supreme court by Dr. R. T. Parks on behalf of himself and other Greenwood County citizens seeking to enjoin Greenwood County from proceeding with plans for the project on the ground it would constitute an illegal use of public funds.

FERA Probes Hunger Army's Clash at Albany

Asks State Why Wounded Marchers Had to Sleep on Hillside.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 31 (AP).—New York's hunger march ended in police court tonight, and the Federal Emergency Relief Administration began an inquiry into the marchers' clash with police, who barred them from the city yesterday.

The FERA asked the New York State Relief Administration also to find out why more than 100 marchers, some of them wounded, slept on a windswept hillside all night.

George Clark, district officer of the State FERA, after a telephone conversation with Washington, said he had been asked to make a report on the incident. At least 2 men were beaten, 11 so seriously they were sent to hospitals.

"There will be no more sleeping in the fields," Clark announced.

The marchers who fled from last night's disorders were permitted to enter the city in a long procession late today. Through long lanes of police, about 125 men and women tramped into court. There they saw their arrested companions arraigned on charges of disorderly conduct.

Moving slowly ahead of the procession was a truck carrying 17 wounded men. The truck parked outside of the court with its occupants.

Maj. John A. Warner, superintendent of State police, offered the leaders four trucks to take them back to New York City. Warner said his offer was rejected, and the marchers said they would stay in Albany.

They still intend, spokesmen said, to lay their demands for winter relief before the State.

Albany city officials issued statements saying the marchers started the distrubance and police were justified in swinging their clubs. Spokesmen for the marchers accused police of starting the trouble.

Russell M. Bennett, Pioneer Miner, Is Dead

Minneapolis, Oct. 31 (AP).—Russell M. Bennett, 69, financial and industrial leader more than 40 years, and a pioneer in the Minnesota iron mining industry, died today of heart disease.

As a youth he engaged in cattle ranching near Mandan, N. Dak. His interest in minerals and early discoveries in the iron country led him to form a company with the late James J. Hill and John M. Longyear, of Marquette, Mich., and acquire tracts of iron land.

Receipt of Cash Ransom Denied By Hauptmann

In a statement, made public by Harry Whitney, chief defense investigator, the taciturn German carpenter, accused of the abduction-murder of the Lindbergh baby, denied he was the man who received the $50,000 ransom money and asked Dr. John F. Condon to come to the Hunterdon County Jail again to "give me a chance to talk more to him and prove my innocence."

Dr. Condon identified Hauptmann as the recipient of the money after talking to Hauptmann in his cell here two weeks ago, following the carpenter's formal plea of not guilty to the murder indictment.

"Jafsie identified me as the mysterious John to whom he gave the $50,000," Whitney quoted the prisoner as saying. "He is mistaken and I invite him to come here again and give me a chance to talk more to him and prove my innocence. If he talks to me long enough he can't help seeing that I am not the man he met in St. Raymond's Cemetery."

St. Raymond's Cemetery is the Bronx burial ground where the money changed hands while Col. Charles A. Lindbergh waited nearby. Lindbergh himself has stated that the voice of the man he heard that night, a month after the kidnaping, was Hauptmann's.

Whether Dr. Condon will visit Hauptmann again depends partly on his own wishes and partly on how Attorney General David T. Wilentz, in charge of the prosecution of the case, regards the value of another visit. Whitney himself said today that Dr. Condon had expressed the desire on his previous visit to return here to talk to Hauptmann.

The names of 388 Hunterdon County residents, including 161 women prospective jurors for the trial, were posted in the county courthouse today by Sheriff John H. Curtiss.

Mrs. Hoover Visits America's Little House

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—Mrs. Herbert Hoover had a pre-view of "America's Little House" today. In New York for the day, she went through the model house from kitchen to nursery.

The house, built under auspices of the New York Committee for Better Homes in America, will be opened to the public November 6.

Mrs. Hoover showed keen interest in the plan for accommodating an average family. After her call she visited Girl Scout headquarters.

Sold 26 Separate and Distinct Properties in October

90% Went to Buyers for Investment Only

The amount involved probably equals the combined sales of all Washington real estate offices.

This organization is acutely tensed to serve the buyer with investment properties of demonstrated earning capacity, and to bring the seller into quick contact with purchase-minded, money-equipped investors.

During the month of October, an attorney listed exclusively with us six semi-detached brick dwellings in the northwest section. The listing was made Monday at 4:30. Tuesday morning a force of experienced men were concentrating on their sale. Friday concluded the effort—every house was sold, every contract in, the price acceptable, the transaction complete.

We are interested in properties of the store, apartment house and dwelling type, from $6,000 to $600,000, if rented, or if, when rented, will produce a fair investment return—we have the clients waiting to invest in them.

Call to see Mr. Morton J. Luchs, Mr. Frank J. Luchs or Mr. A. Jasper Moore, Sales Manager, and talk over the disposal of your property . . . Recommendations will be made, based on personal inspection.

Beard and 13 Indicted Here For Gambling

Charged With Setting Up Establishment and Allowing Play.

The District grand jury yesterday joined in the war on crime conditions here when it returned two indictments charging Sam R. Beard and 13 others with violations of the gaming laws.

The indictments were based on what a police raiding squad, headed by Lieut. George Little, discovered when the doors of a suite of offices in the Mather Building were smashed in and alleged gambling paraphernalia was seized.

Among the items found in the place, the police said, were 40 telephones, with 40 connections, thus making it possible to handle 1,600 calls simultaneously. In addition to material that was seized as evidence, the police used their raiding axes upon furnishings.

Beard, said by police to have been operating a "wire service" to places where racing information was wanted, recently served a sentence for violation of the income tax law and paid a substantial fine.

Two Indictments.

The charge in the first indictment is that Beard and the others set up a gaming table, that they set up a place for gaming and that they conspired between them to do both those things. The second indictment charges only the permitting of gaming, which is a misdemeanor.

In addition to Beard, those named in the indictment were William Carroll, James T. Gallagher, Fred H. Beck, George E. Hutchins, Melville G. Jacobs, Sidney Kaplan, Lewis L. Levy, Fred J. Meese, Timothy H. Noel, Joseph A. O'Callaghan, John J. Sortori, William G. Smith and George Harwood.

All except Harwood were arrested in the raid on the G street office. A warrant has been issued for him, but so far police have not been able to find him.

Other Indictments.

Those indicted were:

Malcolm H. Wilmer, nonsupport; David Crompton, Robert Smith, George Williams, Lawrence D. McIntyre and James P. Ruth, joy-riding; Thomas A. Walker and Thomas A. Swann, grand larceny; Waddell Anthony, James Lee, Isaac Patrick, Carl G. Hedges, Eugene J. McGlorick, housebreaking and larceny; Charles H. Howell and John Epps, robbery.

George Greer, Joseph Norris, Harry W. Davis and Whelon W. Lee, assault with a dangerous weapon; William Bobbitt, rape; Thomas A. Swann, violation National motor vehicle theft act; Thomas Cerey, Wylmer Howard Le Duc, Wendell Smith and Joseph S. Bond, violation liquor-taxing act of 1934; Edward G. Bowman and Neilb Hegiman, violation section 851-b D. C. Code; Erastus Jarmon, Steven R. Gates and Charles Edward Young, violation section 73, title, 18, U. S. Penal Code.

G. Duckworth, false pretenses; John J. Foreman, embezzlement; Clide Mullen, Theodore Roosevelt Brown and Gordon V. Williamson, second degree murder; Sam B. Beard, William Carroll, James T. Gallagher, Fred H. Beck, George E. Hutchins, Melville G. Jacobs, Sidney Kaplan, Lewis L. Levy, Fred J. Messe, Timothy H. Noel, Joseph A. O'Callaghan, John J. Sortori, William G. Smith and George Harwood, gambling charges.

Burke Withdraws His Plea to Retire

special detail to the Wilson case was no reflection on him, and that the detectives would report to Burke as well as to Maj. Brown.

Subsequently, Maj. Brown announced that all information on the progress of the Wilson murder investigation would have to come from the Montgomery County authorities rather than the Washington police, because the crime was committed in the Maryland jurisdiction.

Commissioner Hazen assumed full responsibility for the order which induced Inspector Burke to offer his resignation. He denied, however, that any outside pressure had been brought to bear to induce him to remove Burke from the case.

Wants Case Cleaned Up.

Hazen said he made his suggestion at a conference attended by Maj. Brown, Burke and Lieut. George Little, head of the gambling and vice squad, on Monday.

"I suggested that the squad devote its entire energies to this case until it's solved," he said. "I am no policeman and have never worked on a murder case, but I thought that would be a good idea, and so did they. So this squad was set up.

"I have the greatest confidence in Inspector Burke. I do not apologize for him, nobody has to. He not only has my confidence, but the confidence of the community."

The special detail assigned to the Wilson case consists of Lieut. John H. Fowler and Detective Sergts. Earl Hartman, Floyd Truscott and C. E. Strange. Hazen said that he suggested Truscott as the man to head the detail, but Maj. Brown insisted on Lieut. Fowler.

The Burke incident yesterday led observers to recall that a similar attempt had been made to remove the chief of detectives during the administration of Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, but at that time Burke declined to get out. His chief subsequently resigned.

U. S. S. Idaho Off Soon On Shakedown Cruise

Completion of the $8,000,000 modernization job on the battleship Idaho was announced yesterday by Secretary Swanson, who said the ship would leave the Norfolk area November 8 for a shakedown cruise to Guantanamo and the Canal Zone prior to final tests, the Associated Press says.

The Idaho is to rejoin the fleet next spring, after an absence of 14 years. The modernization work provided a stronger defense against submarines and air attack.

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—Charles Hall, 55, of Chicago, an employe of Armour & Co., was found dead today in his hotel room. The hotel physician said death was due to natural causes.

Floodlights Guard Marked Gambler's Home

Knowing he is "on the spot" Mickey McDonald, "big shot" gambler, has installed powerful floodlights on his Takoma Park home, in front of which Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route carrier, was shot to death by ambushed gunmen last week.

Racket Rivalry Is Held Motive Of Gang Killing

Prescott Believes Spread of 'Numbers Play' Led to Takoma Crime.

State's Attorney Stedman Prescott of Montgomery County yesterday declared he believed the slayers of Thomas B. Wilson, of Takoma Park, had been hired to ambush "Mickey" McDonald because he was "spreading out too far" in the Washington numbers racket.

He placed more confidence in the probability that John (Slim) Dunn, said to be a member of the tri-State gang, knew something of the shooting.

While he scoffed at the theory that Mais and Legenza, condemned members of the tri-State gang who "broke jail" in Richmond, were connected with the murder, he declared this clew was being thoroughly investigated.

Gang Linked to Robbery.

Meanwhile, in Hagerstown, according to the Associated Press, police declared they had obtained finger-print evidence which tended to link the tri-Staters with the $2,000 robbery of the Nicodemus National Bank there last November.

They declared they had been advised by Washington and Richmond authorities that finger-prints found in the bank tallied with prints of two members of the gang.

Hagerstown police also said they were notified by Richmond police that a man now being held there had admitted that the gang took part in the hijacking and kidnaping of Russell Bennett, of St. James, Md., some time ago.

Tri-State Suspect Held.

This man, they said, is believed to be a member of the tri-State gang. Police Captain Clarence Emmert, of Hagerstown, said the tri-State gang is believed to have had a rendezvous near Hagerstown at the time of the bank robbery.

Mr. Prescott was indefinite as to the part these gang activities might have played in the recent Montgomery County murder. He declared that Baltimore and Washington police were divided on the advisability of fixing any blame on the gang.

Some, he said, were of the opinion Mais and Legenza were back of the murder, while others were skeptical of this theory.

Sophie Shakes Jolly England

La Tucker Leaves Today With Nation's Heart in Her Hands.

London, Oct. 31 (AP).—Sophie Tucker—the vigorous trouper who thrilled King and Queen and shop girl—returns home to New York tomorrow with England's heart in her strong hands.

Sophie came to England with a four-weeks' contract. She stayed 28 weeks.

Theater managers said Sophie's act was the best they had this year. It's difficult to explain, for it is a typical American singing act with slang and manner that usually fall flat on unaccustomed ears.

Everywhere Sophie went in England she was besieged. In a few weeks she knew the first names or nicknames of scores of the West End aristocracy. Poor Jewish folk of the East End and shop girls of Oxford street begged to touch her arm "just for luck."

When she finished her act at a command performance for the King and Queen, their majesties stood to applaud. Then they sat down, usually the signal for applause to cease. It didn't and they had to stand again. Sophie wept.

W. H. Chase Honored By G. P. O. Associates

After 41 years in the Government Printing Office, Will H. Chase was tendered a farewell dinner by his friends and associates in the refectory of the plant yesterday.

Mr. Chase, foreman of the monotype section for the past ten years recently retired. G. G. Wilson, an assistant in the monotype section, served as toastmaster. Public Printer A. E. Giegengack and other officials were present at the testimonial.

Washington pay rolls also is welcome news to merchants, who have been struggling to overcome the "depression psychosis" brought about by the continued cut.

Sitting at his desk at the White House, the President smilingly explained to newspapermen that rising living costs undoubtedly will justify salary restoration July 1 anyway, and he accordingly has ordered budgets framed on that basis.

He held out no such hope for January 1. On the contrary, he inferred that commodity prices can not climb sufficiently in the next two months to overcome the pay cut differential established in the economy act imposing the original 15 per cent slash.

Calls Inference "Premature."

Miss McNall said last night she regarded that inference as "premature."

"I think it is a little early for the President to say what the Department of Labor living cost figures will show for this 6-months period, when those statistics haven't yet been compiled," she said.

President Babcock, of the American Federation of Government Employes, assailed the Labor Department formula for arriving at the living cost index.

"I think Labor Department statisticians will admit that it is not a fair method," he said. "A reliable picture of prices today will show that full restoration is more than warranted.

"As these prices advance, it amounts to a further pay cut for Federal employes, who have to pay that much more out of their pocket for everyday expenses. Only a substantial salary increase will help remedy that injustice."

A poll of Congressional sentiment shows a clear majority of the present membership committed not only to salary restoration, but to pay raises as well, according to Babcock.

Recently President Steward, of the National Federation, made a flat prediction that Congress could restore salaries if the President did not, basing his statement on a Congressional survey.

At the same time, Representative William I. Sirovich, now slated to head the House Civil Service Committee, made a similar forecast, and volunteered to lead the employes' fight in Congress.

Babcock's announcement that his organization, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, will drive for new pay increases placed Federal workers on the offensive again for the first time in three years.

Seek 15 Per Cent Raises.

He said workers not only will ask for 15 per cent increases in all grades, but where this raise falls between existing grades, the salary would be lifted to the next highest established level, so as not to upset unduly the present system of classification.

First inroads on Federal pay scales were begun at the close of the Hoover administration, when an 8 1-3 per cent cut was ordered. More than a year later, under President Roosevelt's first economy act, the slash was raised to 15 per cent, with provision for gradual reduction as rising prices wiped out this differential.

When the Budget Bureau last session sought to modify the cut to 10 per cent, Congress took matters in its own hands and restored all but 5 per cent, on a gradual step-up basis.

The living cost index of the Labor Department, under which the economy act prescribed an adjustment of wages, has shown but minor advances toward the 1928 basic index of 171. For the six months ended 1st June, it had reached only 136.4. Thus a living cost advance of 25.3 per cent in the next eight months will be needed if the President's objective is reached. With such a broad gap still to be spanned, organized workers here feel that full restoration will necessarily be by Congressional action, rather by Presidential order.

Government experts roughly estimate that restoration of the last 5 per cent on July 1 will mean $65,000,000 more annually to the 678,237 Federal employes both here and in the field. Some $7,000,000 of this will go toward Washington pay rolls.

With the sympathetic ear of Representative Sirovich at the head of the House Civil Service Committee, both the National Federation of Federal Employes and the American Federation of Government Employes are preparing an extensive program for employes' betterment, ranging from restoration of periodic pay increases to repeal of the 15-day economy limitation on annual leave.

Hasten to Band Wagon.

Sensing a more liberal direction in employes' legislation, members of Congress in recent weeks have hastened to climb aboard the band wagon. This trend is evidenced in surveys undertaken by both employes' groups.

Illustrative of this swing was a telegram received yesterday by the American Federation of Government Employes from Representative Alfred M. Waldron, of Pennsylvania, commenting on the A. F. G. E. poll.

"Article Washington Post listed my name as noncommittal," the wire read. "Have never received either at my Washington or Philadelphia office a copy of your questionnaire. My answer is emphatically yes to every question."

Lou Tellegen Funeral Scheduled Tomorrow

Hollywood, Oct. 31 (AP).—Lou Tellegen, once matinee idol of the stage and screen, who committed suicide last Monday by stabbing himself with a pair of scissors, will be given private funeral services here Friday.

Arrangements were completed today by Mrs. J. P. Cudahy, in whose home he died. Since Tellegen had expressed a wish his ashes be scattered over the ocean, it was said that this probably would be done.

$75,000,000 Bills Offered.

The Treasury yesterday invited tenders for approximately $75,000,000 of 22-day discount bills to be sold to the highest bidders. Books will remain open at the Federal Reserve banks until 2 p. m. November 2. The bills will be dated November 7.

Mueller Drops Church's Helm, Report in Reich

Berlin, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller has resigned because of growing dissatisfaction with his program for Nazification of the church, according to an unconfirmed report tonight.

The rumor followed announcement Bishop Hans Meiser, of Bavaria, and Bishop Theophil Wurm, of Wuerttemberg, who have opposed Mueller's program, would resume their posts tomorrow.

A reliable source said the reinstatement of the two bishops was effected without consulting the church government. Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler was believed to have suggested to the commissario bishops of Bavaria and Wuerttemberg—those appointed to fill the places of the ousted clerics—that they relinquish their offices voluntarily.

Bishops Meiser and Wurm, who were removed arbitrarily from their pulpits by Dr. Mueller, appeared to have convinced Hitler, in yesterday's meeting, that the German Evangelican Church should be permitted to fight its own battles. Meister had had not only been ordered out, but was under arrest and police surveillance for several weeks. Dr. Mueller's action came dangerously close to stirring a church revolt in southern Germany.

Announcement of the bishops' restoration to their dioceses was made by a government spokesman at a meeting of 5,000 citizens in the festival hall of the Berlin zoological buildings.

"I have just come," he said, "from a last talk with Bishops Meiser and Wurm, who until today have been in Berlin. Tomorrow they will resume their offices."

The audience burst into prolonged applause.

The announcement confirmed yesterday's impression of a compromise, when the official news agency referred to them as "state bishops," although actually they were under suspension at the time.

"Protocol Trial" Halted for Month

Time Given Defendants to Investigate Documents.

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 31 (AP). The Jewish "protocol trial," in which leaders of the race sought to prove the falsity of the notorious "protocols of the elders of Zion," was adjourned for at least a month today to allow witnesses for the defendants to make a report on the authenticity of the document.

The court appointed Lieut. Col. Ulrich Fleischhauer, of Erfurt, Germany, as an expert witness to investigate the documents for the defendants in the criminal libel action.

Before adjournment several Jews testified the Zionists congress held at Basle in 1897, which allegedly adopted the protocols, was devoted solely to the establishment of a national home for Jews in Palestine.

Nervous Shock Leads To 4 Days of Talk

Kansas City, Oct. 31 (AP).—Lloyd Huffey, 21, has been talking for four days, without stopping for sleep or food and drink. Attendants at the General Hospital here said tonight he showed no signs of discomfort and answered questions intelligently.

Physicians said Huffey's talk was mostly of religion, and that he apparently was suffering from a nervous shock. They pointed to similar cases and, said Huffey probably would recover within several days. Huffey was in a motor car accident Sunday.

Mexico Speeds Drive Against Catholic Bodies

Mexico, D. F., Oct. 31 (AP).—While Mexico's government moved today to smash an alleged Catholic revolutionary movement, antireligious campaigns conducted by both federal and state governments gained increasing headway.

A Catholic seminar in Oaxaca, from which priests have been ordered expelled and the bishop has fled into exile, was raided today. Several priests and 38 students were arrested.

Meanwhile, the State of Mexico issued an order limiting the number of churches in the region in which services may be held to 34, the same number of priests permitted to officiate in the state.

All churches above this number, the decree provided, will be used as schools and public libraries. This action, favorable to the church in comparison with radical action in other states, was believed to have been taken to prevent priests ousted from other states from coming to Mexico to officiate.

Attorney General Portes Gil, acting on instructions from President Abelardo Rodriguez, was studying documents the chief executive turned over to him which showed, he said, the purpose of Catholic clergymen to rebel against the government's new restrictive measures, on pretext of opposing the initiation of compulsory socialistic education in Mexico's schools.

At the same time, another blow was struck at the church as the supreme court ruled that all buildings used for Catholic ceremonies of any kind, even though they be privately owned, shall become property of the nation.

U.S. Subpenas Two In Massacre Probe

Ohio City's Officials to Appear Friday.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 31 (U.P.).—Maurice Milligan, United States district attorney, announced tonight that subpenas had been served on the chief of police and mayor of Wellsville, Ohio, to appear Friday before the Federal grand jury investigating the massacre of four officers and their prisoner at the Union Station here last June.

A third subpena demanded that the Wellsville officials bring the machine gun abandoned by Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd before he was slain near East Liverpool, Ohio, by Federal agents, and the pistol taken from Adam Richetti, Floyd henchman, when he was captured at Wellsville.

The officials were expected to tell the grand jury what they refused to tell Federal investigators after Richetti was captured. Milligan said he expected the testimony of the Ohio officials would be of great importance.

Crosby Noyes Operated On After Fast Trip

Mother and Two Physicians Travel by Air, Train and Motor.

Concord, N. H., Oct. 31 (AP).—Crosby Stuart Noyes, 14-year-old son of Newbold Noyes of the Washington Star, was operated on for appendicitis about 6 a. m. today by physicians who had rushed here by train and automobile from New York.

The operation was performed in the infirmary of St. Paul's School, which the boy attends as a first-year student.

The physicians were Dr. Carns Weeks, of New York, and a Dr. Caldwell, also of New York. They said the appendectomy was a success and that the boy was "resting comfortably."

Mother With Doctors

Mrs. Newbold Noyes, mother of Crosby, came from New York with the physicians.

Mrs. Noyes and the physicians left Curtis Field, Long Island, late last night in a plane piloted by Edward Reith. The plane was chartered when it was learned young Noyes' condition had become critical. He had been confined to the infirmary for observation for several days.

The plane ran short of gasoline early today after Reith could find no suitable landing place near Concord. He set the craft down in a plowed field near Worcester, Mass. No one was injured, but the plane was too badly damaged to proceed.

Police Aided Dash.

Worcester police commandeered an automobile and, escorted by Massachusetts State troopers, Mrs. Noyes and the physician continued their trip to Concord.

They arrived here shortly after 5 o'clock this morning and Dr. Weeks performed the operation about an hour later.

Four Airships Urged for U. S.

Two for Military, Two for Oceanic Use Advised by Rosendahl.

Construction of four dirigibles, two for military use and two for transoceanic operation by private companies, was urged by Lieut. Comdr. C. E. Rosendahl before the President's Aviation Commission yesterday.

"I do not believe the American people will continue to sit by and see only the other nations of the world unfurl their flags over new aerial trade routes," said Rosendahl, who after commanding the Shenandoah, the Los Angeles and the Akron, now is in charge of the Navy dirigible station at Lakehurst, N. J.

Senator Robert J. Bulkley, of Ohio, urged immediate building of two dirigibles. Use of PWA funds for the purpose was suggested by the Senator, but he read a lettter from Secretary of the Interior Ickes expressing doubt of the availability of PWA funds for that use at present. He proposed that the Aviation Commission make a recommendation on the subject.

Carl B. Fritsche, president of the Metalclad Airship Corporation of Detroit, declared that Government airship construction offers the only means of meeting the challenge of European nations in building super ocean liners.

This Bull Was Deere In American Money

Sapulpa, Okla., Oct. 31 (AP).—Wosey Deere, wealthy Creek Indian woman, has established a new high for beef.

Recently she paid $500 for a pedigreed bull for her farm. A Sapulpan interested in good live stock went out a few days later to view the animal.

"I haven't got him any more," Wosey replied to his question.

"Sell him?" the visitor inquired.

U. S. Seeks Peace, Robinson Asserts

Told Europe of Nation's Stand, He Says.

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 31 (AP).—Senator Joe T. Robinson, the Senate Democratic leader, said he had assured European leaders the United States would not supply men, munitions or sympathy to any nation in the event of another European war.

Speaking before a banquet group of Little Rock junior bar members last night, Robinson declared that everywhere he went on a recent visit to Europe, he was asked about this country's attitude in event of another war.

"I assured every one of these inquirers that the United States does not understand Europe's complicated problems, and has no patience with the intrigues through which the various countries seek to gain their ends," he said.

Returning from his European visit last week, Senator Robinson expressed the view a Europen war would come at "no remote time."

I. C. C. Plans Inquiry Into Rail-Water Rates

Investigation of freight rates in which both railroads and barge lines participate will be undertaken by the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Associated Press says.

The commission recently was asked by a large group of railroads serving the Mississippi and Warrior River Valleys to reopen its investigation into the question of through routes and joint rates, rules, regulations and practices of railroads and water carriers in the two valleys. Dates for the hearings will be set later.

The commission yesterday postponed from November 16 to January 16 its investigation into its passenger rates on railroads.

Aid From Wagner Lost to La Follette

New Yorker Is Unable to Speak in Campaign.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 31 (AP).—Senator Robert M. La Follette announced today he had been informed by Senator Robert Wagner (Democrat), New York, that the latter would be unable to come to Wisconsin for campaign speeches on behalf of the Wisconsin Senator.

Senator La Follette said he received the following telegram from Senator Wagner:

"Regret exceedingly that the pressure of campaign events during the last week here in New York prevents me from coming to speak in Wisconsin for your reelection to the United States Senate.

"Your rugged independence is a virtue in itself. Your services to the cause of economic recovery during the darkest days of depression, your practical proposal to relieve suffering and destitution, and your preparedness for the ever-continuing need of economic reform will not be overlooked by the informed electorate of Wisconsin. Your reelection is a foregone conclusion because the United States Senate needs you."

Efforts Bent For Big Vote In Arlington

Democrats Confident Ticket Will Sweep County Election Day.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 500. Clarendon, Va.

Confident of the reelection of both Representative Howard W. Smith and Senator Harry Floyd Byrd and that they will carry Arlington County by a good majority, the county Democratic committee last night completed its plans to get out a heavy vote Tuesday.

Chairman Charles R. Fenwick stated that, contrary to the usual custom of holding mass meetings and the blazing of red lights, a quiet but intensive campaign has been waged for both candidates.

In each of the 11 voting precincts a special committee has been at work and will be at the polls. The committee has representatives of the Woman's Democratic Club, the Young Democratic Club and the Men's Club, supported by an advisory committee of representative members of the party.

Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy yesterday ordered registrar Roy L. Miller for Virginia Highlands precincts to open the registration books to permit Dan C. Hendrickson and others to register.

The court's action is the result of a petition which was filed with the court by Attorney Albert M. Jones for Mr. Hendrickson and others who claim they were deprived of registering on October 6.

It is the claim of the petitioners that when they went to the home of the registrar on registration day, he could not be located.

Citizens of Arlington County attending the mass meeting last night under the auspices of the Ballston Citizens Association at the firemen's hall were told that the county adopted the policy of not installing the "Y" connection for the house connection in the program for the sewerage system.

Discussing this policy, Lyman M. Kelly, chairman of the county board, said that the policy has long since been discarded by a majority of cities and in the District of Columbia there are thousands of dollars worth of "Y" connections that can not be used.

He assured them the program for the installation of the $2,500,000 sewer system is progressing rapidly and that the contract covering both the Ballston and Clarendon area has been awarded and work will be started by the contractors within the next few days.

Answering the question of the citizens of Ballston and which was the prime reason for the meeting, County Manager Roy S. Braden stated it would not be feasible to permit the tearing up of the streets for house connections at the time the main lateral lines were being laid. He said home owners could have the work done more cheaply by plumbers in the county than by having the contractor do the work at the time of passing the home.

He stated the county board has instructed him to prepare a suitable ordinance covering the making of house connections.

John Campbell, representative engineer for the J. N. Engineering Co., of Pittsburgh, who have the contract for preparing plans and supervising the installation of the system, stated it was not practical to install the "Y" connection. The "saddle joint" is being used and can, in his opinion, be installed for less than claimed by William Wolff, past president of the Master Plumbers Association of Arlington County.

Mr. Wolff, advocating installation of the "Y" connections, claimed it would mean a great saving to the home owner and could easily be installed while the main lateral lines are being laid.

Among other speakers were Arthur Orr, president of the Arlington County Civic Federation; Walter U. Varney, former Commonwealth's attorney for the town of Potomac, and E. H. Birch and Fred A. Gosnell, former member of the county board.

The Kiwanis Club held its luncheon meeting yesterday at Windsor Arms and nominated Charles W. Smith for president; Dr. Lamar Harris, first vice president; Lyman M. Kelley, second vice president, and Erale W. English, treasurer.

With seven members of the board of directors to be elected, the following were nominated—Harold Whittle, John W. Webster, Lawrence Manning, William K. MacMahon, Arthur C. Stickley 2d, Earle Kirby, William E. Robey, Dr. J. Ed. Payne, Amoce C. Crounse, Bailey T. Byars and Arthur F. Campbell. The election will be held Wednesday.

The Men's Democratic Club of Arlington County will hold its monthly meeting tonight in the Rucker Building at Clarendon.

Meeting in the Community Hall last night, the Arlington Citizens Association instructed its road committee, of which John Craig is the chairman, to meet with committees from Barcroft and Annadale to work out a road program serving this section with special reference to improvements to Columbia pike by the State.

Mrs. Cora Miles reported on the Woman's Club program for establishment of a playground in this vicinity.

The county school board at its meeting last night approved expenditures totaling $28,545.62, of which $2,000 was for the retirement of literary bonds and the monthly pay roll amounting to $17,364.57.

James Turner Acquitted In Manslaughter Case

James Turner, colored, of Ardmore, Md., was acquitted on charges of manslaughter by a jury in Prince Georges County Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro, Md., yesterday.

Turner and another colored youth, Carlton Lights, had been hunting and a quarrel over the shells remaining in their shotgun at the end of the day preceded the fatal shooting of Lights. Turner was represented by Attorney J. Wilson Ryon.

Civic Federation Staff Renominated

Montgomery Organization to Elect Nov. 12.

The entire staff of officers of the Montgomery County (Md.) Civic Federation has been renominated by the federation's nominating committee, Richard H. Akers, chairman, made public yesterday.

The officers nominated to succeed themselves are Robert E. Bondy, president; Washington I. Cleveland, vice president; Walter B. Armstrong, recording secretary; Orville M. Kile, corresponding secretary, and John A. P. Farnham, treasurer. Nominations for the executive committee include Emory H. Bogley, Joseph B. Matre, Josiah W. Jones and Charles W. Hopkins.

The federation will hold its annual election at a meeting November 12 in the Bethesda Elementary School auditorium.

County Voters To Be Courted In Broadcast

Montgomery Democrats Plan Last-Minute Rally on WJSV Sunday.

The Montgomery County Democratic party will make a final bid for victory with a radio broadcast over WJSV Sunday night, it was announced yesterday.

Roger J. Whiteford, attorney, will summarize the achievements of the party in a 15-minute address, beginning at 7:15 p. m., and again Monday from 11 to 11:15 p. m.

The Democratic party of the county also has seven more rallies scheduled before the final election deadline next Tuesday.

Representative David J. Lewis, candidate for reelection, will be the principal speaker tonight at the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School.

Speakers Listed.

Other speakers will include Andrew J. (Cy) Cummings, Miss Lavinia Engle, George P. Hoover, Frederick P. Lee, Stedman Prescott, and Frederick Stohlman.

Another rally will be held tonight at Barnesville, at which James H. Pugh, Miss Engle, Mr. Prescott and Dr. Llewellyn Jordan will speak.

Tomorrow Capt. Joseph C. Cissel, Mr. Pugh and Mr. Prescott will speak at Germantown, Md. Two other meetings will be held the same night, one at Hyattstown and one at Kensington.

Hyattstown Meeting.

The speakers at Hyattstown will be Robert Peter, jr., Capt. Cissel, Mr. Prescott and Mr. Imirie. At Kensington the speakers will be Mr. Prescott, Capt. Cissel and Miss Engle.

Two rallies are scheduled for Saturday, one to be held at the Gaithersburg High School auditorium and the other at the Damascus High School auditorium. Capt. Cissel, Mr. Prescott, Miss Engle and Mr. Pugh will speak at both meetings.

E. T. Simpson Is Dead at 74

Retired Grain Merchant Came to Washington as a Boy.

Ellsworth Tenley Simpson, 74, died at his home, 2727 Thirty-fourth place northwest, yesterday. He had been a resident of Washington 50 years.

Born in Howard County, Md., he came to Washington as a boy and entered the grain business, rising to ownership of the E. T. Simpson Co., from which he retired ten years ago. He was also a member of the Board of Trade, of the Elks' Lodge, and served as a director of the Farmers and Mechanics National Bank.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Scrivener Simpson; a son, Ellsworth L. Simpson, of Clarendon, Va.; two daughters, Mrs. John J. Beatty, of Washington, and Mrs. Thomas E. Prendergast, of Providence, R. I.; 14 grandchildren and one great-grandson. His brother, Thomas E. Simpson, lives in Howard County, Va., and his sister, Mrs. Charles B. Tavenner, resides in Washington.

Interment will be in Rock Creek Cemetery tomorrow at 2:30 p. m.

Takoma Legion Plans Annual Oyster Roast

Preparations are being made to accommodate several hundred guests at the annual oyster roast of the Takoma Park (Md.) American Legion Post Saturday afternoon at the Silver Spring Armory.

Arrangements are being handled by a committee consisting of Maj. William F. Fischer, chairman; Commander F. M. Stuart, C. A. Hartler, E. Brook Fetty and George B. Kissinger.

G. O. P. Denies Ritchie Claim Of Tax Slash

Prince Georges Circular Asserts Valuations Were Boosted.

Challenging Gov. Ritchie's statement that he had reduced State taxes, Prince Georges County Republicans yesterday issued a pamphlet purporting to show that taxes actually had been increased.

Tax Increase Charged.

The circulars charging increase of the State taxes despite the cut in the tax rate charge that valuation on property has been increased so that the taxes actually paid are higher than when the 30-cent rate was in effect.

The circular cites five Mount Rainier properties and shows that their valuation for tax purposes has increased 75.2 per cent between 1923 and 1933. It declared one property which had a tax bill of $6.75 on a $2,250 valuation under a 30-cent tax rate in 1923 and increased to $10 under the 25-cent rate with a valuation of $4,000.

Asks Revaluation Check-up.

The increase is blamed on "machine-manipulated tax reduction," by the circular, which further states: "If you have any question of this "revaluation" being general, call the assessor's office, Marlboro 113, and ask for the valuation of your property in 1923 and 1933."

Approximately 10,000 of the circulars are to be distributed from door to door and at rallies rather than from airplanes as was at first contemplated.

Lady Democrat Will Back Nice

Mrs. Bauernschmidt Raps Machine Domination of Baltimore.

Baltimore, Oct. 31 (AP).—Mrs. Marie Bauernschmidt, Democratic executive secretary of the Public School Association, announced tonight that she would vote for Harry W. Nice, Republican gubernatorial nominee.

The woman leader denounced what she termed the "Democratic machine" on the ground that it was dominated by William Curran, reputed political boss of Baltimore, and Robert B. Ennis, chairman of the board of election supervisors. Her speech was broadcast.

Mrs. Bauernschmidt asserted "leaders in the Democratic party tried to persuade Gov. Ritchie not to become a candidate for the fifth term, because he could not win without this machine, and it was feared that with the machine he would wreck the Democratic party."

"Since I must vote directly, or indirectly, for a criminal lawyer, and since he is not controlled by a political machine, but supported by an organization, I will vote for Mr. Nice," Mrs. Bauernschmidt said.

Bank Charter Granted To Newport News Firm

Richmond, Va., Oct. 31 (AP).—M. E. Bristow, State commissioner of insurance and banking, yesterday made certification that all requirements had been complied with and the State Corporation Commission granted a charter to the Industrial Loan Bank of Newport News to operate a regular banking business.

This bank was the first to qualify under a law passed by the last General Assembly permitting State industrial banks to enter the commercial banking field. Its application was unsuccessfully opposed by other Newport News banks, which contended additional banking facilities were not needed there.

Candidates to Speak At Laurel Meeting

The Women's Republican Club of Prince Georges County will meet today at 1:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Edgar C. Whitman on Lafayette avenue, Laurel. Mrs. Whitman and Mrs. Anna W. Roussel will be joint hostesses.

Mrs. Eva C. Chase, chairman of the county club, and candidate for the House of Delegates; Mrs. Roussel, candidate for judge of the Orphans' Court, and other prominent Republicans will address the meeting.

DeMoll Named To Head Drive Of Red Cross

Campaign in Alexandria to Start Nov. 11 and End on Thanksgiving.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Louis E. DeMoll, member of the Alexandria Lions Club, has been named chairman of the annual Red Cross drive in Alexandria, which will begin on Armistice Day, November 11, and continue through Thanksgiving Day.

Roger C. Sullivan, president of the Alexandria chapter, who announced the appointment of DeMoll, states an effort will be made to have all those who are in a position to take out $25, $10 and $5 memberships, do so at an early date, so that the relief work carried on by the Red Cross may be more successfully handled.

Mr. DeMoll, as chairman of the drive, will announce the appointment of his executive committee shortly, and individual solicitors will be appointed later.

The quota for Alexandria has not been announced, but it is the understanding that practically all contributions will be used in local work.

The committee of Alexandrians which handled the parade of the National Firemen's Association in Alexandria on Labor Day, which proved a financial failure, while being decidedly successful in every other particular, is arranging to stage a series of benefits to clear up an indebtedness of approximately $2,000.

The first of the affairs will be a dance in Armory Hall Friday, November 23. O. Ashby Reardon has been named general chairman, and he will have as his assistants firemen and civic leaders.

Chairmen named yesterday by Mr. Reardon were: Roger C. Sullivan, music; Samuel B. DeVaughan, tickets; L. H. Wren, door; W. O. Merriman, check room; Francis H. Fannon, organizations; Norman Roberts, fire companies and auxiliaries; John U. Reardon, floor; E. E. Lawler, jr., publicity, and George W. Welker, decorations.

A jury in the United States Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, Judge Luther B. Way, presiding, in Alexandria, yesterday gave a verdict of damages of $3,500 in the case of Robert C. Rollins, an infant, against the Griffith Consumers Co., Inc., suit being filed for $20,000 for alleged personal injuries. Arguments on appeal noted by the defendant corporation will be heard December 3.

Alexandria will shortly have a "Voice of Safety" on its streets. Police Capt. John S. Arnold is now engaged in reconditioning a large horn which will be mounted on one of the police cruisers now in use, and used to warn both pedestrians and automobile drivers of possible accidents.

Halloween was celebrated by many hundreds of young people, who paraded the streets of Alexandria last night garbed in fantastic costumes and armed with every description of noise-making paraphernalia. Many parties and dances were given in private homes.

Mrs. Bertha M. Welker, wife of Policeman George W. Welker, jr., died yesterday in the Alexandria Hospital after a long illness. Besides her husband, she is survived by three children. Her home was at 313 Wolfe street. The funeral arrangments have not been completed.

Funeral services for Mrs. Margaret Burke, who died Monday, will be conducted at 10 a. m. today from the residence, 136 Lloyd avenue, by the Rev. L. J. Koster, pastor of St. Rita's Catholic Church. Interment will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Fusionists Hold Smoker Tonight

Dawson and Stonebraker to Be Speakers.

Men members of the Fusion party of Montgomery County and invited guests will attend a smoker at Bannockburn Country Club tonight at 8 o'clock.

Lawyers Urge Barnard Welsh For Md. Bench

Rockville Attorneys Back Fusionist's Candidacy to Circuit Court.

Rockville, Md., Oct. 31 (Spl.).—In a petition made public here today, 14 Rockville attorneys indorsed the candidacy of F. Barnard Welsh, Fusion aspirant in the Sixth Circuit Court bench.

Mr. Welsh has been a life-long resident of Montgomery County, absent only to attend Swarthmore College and the University of Colorado.

A member of one of the county's pioneer families, he has maintianed law offices in Rockville for nearly threee decades, achieving during that time a reputation as one of Rockville's best trial lawyers.

Active in fraternal and civic affairs, he founded the Rockville Fire Department, and for long sought to secure an athletic field for the high school—the field that has been named in his honor.

Mrs. E.L. O'Rourke Succumbs at 69

Widow of Sports Writer Had Long Been Ill.

Mrs. Estelle L. O'Rourke, widow of Jack O'Rourke, died at her home, 9 East Underwood street, Chevy Chase, Md., yesterday after a long illness. She was 69 years old. Her husband was at one time a sports writer for The Washington Post.

Mrs. O'Rourke was a native of Washington, the daughter of Robert and Anne Harris Johnson. She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Honsick, who lived with her, and a brother, Robert Johnson, of Washington.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the All Saints' Episcopal Church, the Rev. Henry T. Cocke officiating. Interment will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Republican Women Form Country Club

Formation of a permanent organization of women affiliated with the State Federation of Republican Women at East Riverdale was announced yesterday. Mrs. Clara Taylor was named chairman.

Other officers are Mrs. Helen Kohlmen, secretary, and Mrs. Pauline Koch, treasurer. Mrs. Helen Skinner was elected chairman of the ways and means committee and is to arrange for a card party. Organization of the unit was assisted by Mrs. Eva Chase, a State officer and candidate for member of the House of Delegates from Prince Georges County.

Crowd Cheers Cantrel Attack On Democrats

Opponents Are Cracking, Candidate Asserts at Montgomery Rally.

Showing slides of EWA workers employed at E. Brooke Lee's estate in Silver Spring, Md., Joseph Cantrel, Fusion candidate for House of Delegates, last night assailed the former Democratic county leader at a meeting in the Potomac Elementary School.

Several hundred persons cheered the Fusion candidates, as he attacked Lee, Stedman Prescott, ruling Democratic "boss," and Robert Hagner, county commissioner.

Comparing costs of government in Montgomery County with those in Frederick and Prince Georges Counties, Cantrell stated the county commissioner department cost $47,180 in Montgomery as against $12,600 in Frederick and $7,660 in Prince Georges. Police, he declared, cost $75,788 in Montgomery, while Prince Georges spent $17,144 and Frederick spent $13,427 for the same services.

Montgomery County is completely within the power of Lee, "who sits in Silver Spring and tells the rest of the county what to do," Cantrel declared.

Also speaking at the rally were Samuel Stonebreaker, candidate for county commissioner; Harry J. Hunt and James Viers.

Will Hear Reaction On Road Extension

Replies From Candidates to Be Given Tonight.

Replies from candidates on the Fusion and Democratic tickets regarding their stand on the extension of Sixteenth street from the East-West highway to the Brookeville pike in Woodside, Md., will be considered at a meeting tonight of the general committee.

The meeting will be held at the home of Allan H. Gardner, president of the Woodside Park Civic Association, which sponsored the move. Other organizations which are urging the extension of the boulevard are represented in the general committee are the Linden Civic Association, the Forest Glen Citizens' Association and the North Woodside Montgomery Hill Citizens' Association.

Women Republicans Call Meeting Today

The Women's Republican Club of Prince Georges County, Md., will meet at 1:30 p. m. today at the home of Mrs. Edgar C. Whitman, Lafayette avenue, Laurel, Md. Mrs. Whitman and Mrs. Anna W. Roussell will be joint hostesses.

Mrs. Eva C. Chase, chairman of the club and candidate for the House of Delegates, and Mrs. Roussell, who is candidate for judge of the Orphans' Court, will be among the speakers.

Children Will Undergo Health Examinations

Physical examinations of Takoma Park, Md., elementary school children preparatory to immunization against diphtheria is getting under way this week under the supervision of Dr. Francis X. Richardson, town health officer, in cooperation with the Montgomery County Department.

The campaign is sponsored by the Takoma Park Parent-Teacher Association and will follow closely a similar campaign recently conducted in Rockville.

Race Track Figure Hit-and-Run Victim

Priest was found unconscious on the race track road Tuesday. He was given first aid treatment by Dr. B. F. Warren, of Laurel. His nose had been broken and his skull is believed fractured.

Woman's Club to Give Party

The Woman's Improvement Club of Silver Spring will hold a card party Friday night in the clubroom of the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department Building. A prize of $5 has been offered to the club having the largest number of representatives present. Mrs. J. A. Granger heads the committee in charge of the affair.

Fusion Leader Hits Democrats

Organization Clouds True Issues, Edward Peter Says at Rockville.

Rockville, Md., Oct. 31 (Spl.).—Organization Democrats are still refusing to face election issues squarely, Edward Peter, Rockville attorney and active Fusion leader, said today.

Democrats have consistently sought to embarrass Fusion candidates by beclouding the true issues of the campaign, he charged, adding:

"Miss Lavinia Engle's statement at a Takoma Park meeting to the effect that Charles C. Jones and I attempted to effect a compromise with the organization in return for 30 per cent of the county offices is merely another of many untrue statements organization candidates are making in this campaign, in an attempt to divert the attention of voters."

Such assertions as Miss Engle's and a recent one by State's Attorney Stedman Prescott to the effect that the Fusion ranks were being split by internal disorders are too ridiculous to carry any weight with level headed citizens, Mr. Peter declared.

Naval Parley Will Continue Late in Month

MacDonald Invites U. S. Delegation to Estate November 17.

London, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—The three major naval powers—Great Britain, the United States and Japan—will continue their hitherto futile conferences on sea strength at least until late next month, it was revealed tonight.

At the conclusion of a long session today between the American and Japanese delegates, it was announced officially that Prime Minister Ramsay Macdonald had invited the American delegation to lunch with him at his country estate, Chequers, November 17. The invitation would not have been issued, it was realized, unless it was certain the diplomats still would be in London.

Today's American-Japanese conference ended at 6:30 p. m., after centering around a technical discussion regarding the actual application of Japan's theory of naval equality. The Japanese explained in greater detail their definition of offensive and defensive warcraft.

It was understood the Americans took issue with Tokyo's explanation of offensive weapons, and that they particularly disputed the Japanese contention that submarines are defensive ships.

After the meeting, American delegates described the conference as "inconclusive," but a Japanese delegate told the United Press that in his opinion "progress has been made."

It was learned that for the first time the Japanese made the official declaration that if they are granted parity with the United States and Great Britain, they do not actually intend to build up to that limit, stressing the factor that "prestige" is involved in their claim to equality.

In this connection, the Japanese and American views again are at complete variance, the United States insisting that the Washington Treaty actually gave Japan equality.

Norman Davis will visit Sir John Simon, foreign minister, at his office tomorrow to discuss both the naval and the Geneva disarmament situations. Both United States and Japanese delegates will be guests of Macdonald at lunch at 10 Downing street. Thus a "social device" has solved the problem of calling a round-table conference.

Navy Needs More Men, Declares Swanson

The Navy hopes Congress will authorize a substantial increase in enlisted personnel that will bring its fighting vessels to 85 per cent of capacity man power, according to the Associated Press.

Secretary Swanson said yesterday there was no question that the Navy needed more men.

"We believe we should have 85 per cent of complement in order to operate ships efficiently," he asserted. "That would be an average of about 88,000 enlisted men for a year, and it would mean a peak of 93,000 by the end of the next fiscal year. The strength now is 82,500."

Swanson also said more officers were needed in addition to the 5,000 officers of the line now in the Navy. No determination of policy, he added, has been made with reference to Marine Corps personnel.

Asked whether the Navy had plans for replacing the airship Akron, which crashed into the sea last year, Swanson said he was not yet convinced replacement should be sought.

PWA Employe Killed Under Backing Truck

Caught beneath the wheels of a truck containing more than 6 tons of rock, Jerry Warfield, 30, of Rockville, Md., was crushed to death yesterday at Silver Spring. He was employed on a PWA road construction project.

The accident occurred on Sligo avenue, near Sligo Bridge. Montgomery County police said he was attempting to fasten the chains from a gravel spread to the rear of a truck operated by Washington Christian, colored, of 1333 Q street northwest. The truck backed over him. Christian was held for the coroner's jury.

Ginger Rogers and Lew Ayres Wed in Hollywood This Month

"GINGER" ROGERS.

Marriage Is Scheduled for Nov. 10; Honeymoon to Be Deferred.

Hollywood, Oct. 31 (AP).—The engagement of Ginger Rogers, vivacious screen actress, and Lew Ayres, screen star, was announced tonight by Mrs. Lela E. Rogers, the actress' mother.

The announcement came after Miss Rogers, whose real name is Virginia Katherine McMath, had repeatedly denied a romance, but had proudly displayed to her friends a large diamond ring.

Ayres full name is Lewis Frederick Ayres.

The marriage will take place November 10 or 11 in a Hollywood church, said Mrs. Rogers, but there will be no honeymoon until both have finished their current pictures.

"We didn't want to say anything until everything was all set. Gee, but I'm so happy," Miss Rogers said.

Ayres, too, was smiling, but he had nothing to add to the words of his bride-to-be.

The two have been "going together" for a year and a half, and have appeared in one picture together.

Both have been married previously. Ayres was divorced two years ago from Lola Lane, an actress. The girlhood marriage of Miss Rogers to Jack Pepper, a vaudeville actor, was annulled.

State Council Election Is Won By Schuschnigg

Vienna, Oct. 31 (AP).—Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg and his Catholic storm troops tonight emerged apparently victorious in their struggle for power with Prince Ernst von Starhemberg and his Fascist Heimwehr.

To the Schuschnigg forces went 20 seats of the new state council, membership of which was announced today, while supporters of Von Starhemberg received only 14 places.

Furthermore, most of the remaining 15 seats on the new body, the most important of the organizations that will replace Parliament under Austria's new corporative state, went to members of the fatherland front, which also leans strongly toward Schuschnigg.

Threats Recalled.

With Schuschnigg's forces holding the balance of power in the council, Vienna recalled threats voiced by Von Starhemberg and other Heimwehr leaders to take control unless the Fascist home guard was given a dominating position.

Another cause for concern was the fact that police found quantities of arms and ammunition at St. Andrae-Woerdern not far from Vienna, bearing out recent charges that enemies of the government were rearming.

Firearms Are Seized

The authorities confiscated 125 rifles, one machine gun and 10 boxes of ammunition, which they said they believed had been hidden by Socialists and Communists who recently combined to take common action against the government.

Not only is the president of the council, Werner Nouachk, Schuschnigg's supporter, but two Christian Socialist leaders whom Von Starhemberg fought most bitterly are included.

They are former Chancellor Karl Vaugoin and Leopold Kunschak. When Kunschak wanted to make peace with the Socialists before the bloody fighting in February, the Heimwehr leader accused him of being a "Red."

France Fears Saar as Spark To War Blaze

Nation Will Be Ready if There Is Trouble, Says Laval.

Paris, Oct. 31 (AP).—The threat of war worried France again today as high quarters expressed the fear that the approaching Saar plebiscite might prove to be the spark touching off the conflagration. Foreign Minister Pierre Laval conferred with the ministers of national defense and completed plans to send French troops into the Saar if the League of Nations governing commission calls for help.

As the January plebiscite, at which residents of the rich industrial region will decide whether to stay under the league, join France or reunite with Germany, approached, garrisons at Nancy, Metz and other points along the frontier were held ready for possible emergencies.

"The French will be ready," Laval told the press tonight, "if there is trouble in the Saar."

A recent remark made in private conversation by an important cabinet member that "France faces a state of war," to which he added "the majority of cabinet members feel this to be true," was followed by an assertion from Laval earlier today that "we have slipped back into the Middle Ages."

"Civilization is going to pot," the foreign minister said. "We must defend it."

Still more ominous was the warning which Marshal Henri Petain, minister of war, voiced before members of the finance committee, October 19, when he said France must prepare for a shock and asserted that Germany again is becoming formidable.

Redland Hunt to Open Fox Hunting Season

Redland Hunt will hold its first fox hunt of the season Saturday, starting at Redland Crossroads at 1 p. m. Following the chase, the field will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hanson Cashell. Cards for November sent to members and resident land owners or renters schedule four other chases, weather permitting.

November 10 the hunt will start from Derwood Mill, November 17 from Muncaster Mill, November 24 from Olney Crossroad, and November 29 from Ednor Orchards. Thomas T. Mott, president of the club, is master of foxhounds.

Restoring Federal Pay.

Full restoration of Government salaries when the new budget becomes effective next July has been widely anticipated. Living costs have been mounting and both the President and Congress have manifested a disposition to give Federal employes the benefit of any doubt on this score. Nevertheless, it is welcome news to the thousands of men and women, many of whom are working overtime for the Government, to know that funds for restoration of their base salaries are to be included in the budget estimates.

The method chosen by the President to end the salary cut is very different from that contemplated when this reduction was inaugurated. The law provides that salaries shall be restored in proportion to advances in the cost of living. That would leave Government workers always a step behind the increasing demands upon their income. Under the plan now inaugurated full restoration will be provided for in anticipation of higher living costs.

By all odds the most striking aspect of the President's announcement is his confidence that the cost of living will advance to the 1928 level during the next eight months. That would mean an increase of 25 per cent in living costs within a year, and a very substantial rise in the present price level. Predictions of this kind in the past have not always proved accurate. With the Administration already committed to full restoration of pay in the 1936 budget, Government employes will be forgiven if they harbor unexpressed hopes that the President's forecast has overshot the mark.

The Tobacco Agitation.

Tobacco manufacturers are engaged in a controversy with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration over continuation of the processing tax from which benefits to tobacco farmers are paid. Leaders of the industry contend, with a good deal of justification, that it is heavily overtaxed and that continuation of the program on the existing basis will be eventually detrimental to farmers as well as to tobacco manufacturers. The AAA, on the contrary, feels that maintenance of the processing tax is essential to the welfare of the growers.

If any one industry has special cause to protest against excessive taxation, it is the manufacturers of tobacco. But in making a special issue of the processing tax these manufacturers appear to be fumbling their case. Experts place the cost of manufacturing an average package of cigarettes at 10.7 cents, of which 6 cents represents excise taxes. A mere three-tenths of 1 cent is required to pay the processing tax. It is only on the theory of the last straw that this levy can be called grievous.

Borrowing an argument which has been aptly applied to cotton, the tobacco interests also claim that high prices are undermining the export market for their commodity. This claim does not appear to be supported by facts. Exports of unmanufactured tobacco during the first nine months of 1934 amounted to 299,813,000 pounds, compared with 265,923,000 pounds during the corresponding period of 1933.

In view of what has happened to cotton exports, a note of warning against further price increases, said to be contemplated by the AAA for tobacco, seems to be in order. But misleading complaints tend to discredit the cause in behalf of which they are made. Like every other aspect of the New Deal, the tobacco-control program deserves careful analysis of its actual results.

So far as manufactured tobacco products are concerned, it is clear that the processing tax is a small factor in determining their cost. The important item is the enormous excise tax.

Dieting For Longevity.

In the eternal struggle to devise ways of prolonging life science has made an interesting discovery. Experiments indicate that dieting may actually extend the life span—at least in rats.

So much attention is given to a proper diet for children that rapid growth and youthful health have come to be closely associated with longevity in the thinking of doctors as well as laymen. This theory is not directly contradicted, so far as human beings are concerned, but Dr. C. M. McCay and Mary F. Crowell, of the animal nutrition laboratory at Cornell University, have taken the liberty of casting doubt upon its validity. In the Scientific Monthly they report the results of experiments with both fish and rats, which indicate that life can be extended by retarding growth at early ages.

No new discovery is claimed. As early as the sixteenth century Francis Bacon declared that "longevity is to be procured by diets." Nor are any startling conclusions reached. But these experimenters believe that an important factor in extending the life of man has been revived. With the modesty that is customary among scientists, they claim "that the problems of longevity can be attacked profitably today by means available in most nutrition laboratories."

This hope of extended life is not unloosed without a warning, however. The dieting which brings long life among rats and fish is confined to their period of immaturity. Overweight adults can derive from the McCay theory no biological justification for attempts to attain an emaciated look after maturity. As if this were not sufficient to restrain unwarranted enthusiasm, a passage from Lucretius is recalled:

> Moreover, we spend our time among the same things, nor by length of life is any new pleasure hammered out.

Preparing To Vote.

Widespread interest in next Tuesday's election is indicated by the unusually heavy registration of voters. In a few States where neither senatorial nor gubernatorial contests are being waged citizens have been negligent in establishing their right to vote. But for the country as a whole registration is exceptionally high for an "off year." The Associated Press estimates that 47,949,928 citizens are qualified to cast ballots next week, as compared with the record registration of 48,962,530 for the 1932 Presidential election. That fortunate minority of Washingtonians who are entitled to use absent voters' ballots have already exercised the franchise.

The actual number of votes cast will doubtless fall considerably below the total registration figure. Millions of qualified electors lose their votes each year by absence from their home districts, sickness, pressure of duties and downright indifference. If the predicted 80 per cent of the registered voters go to the polls, however, an unusually good showing will be made.

This anticipated rush to the polls is especially significant because of the weakness of the political campaigns this year. The Republicans have made only a feeble attempt to wrest control of Congress from the Democrats. Here and there individual candidates have espoused a vigorous, clear-cut program. But a considerable number of minority office-seekers have been content to go their opponents one better in making preposterous promises, while dodging fundamental issues.

On the Democratic side, the major appeal to voters has been based upon the outpouring of Government funds into every locality. Majority campaigners, from Chairman Farley down, have encouraged the idea that the country can continue to live like a summer butterfly, sipping perpetual honey from an inexhaustible flower bed of Government credit.

In spite of shallow electioneering, public interest in governmental problems has notably increased. Growing concern over fundamental economic and political issues is evident in numerous local contests. There is no indication that the public is thinking very deeply about the future, but an endeavor to do so is apparent. In a country which has made "government by the people" its ideal, the importance of progress in this direction is self-evident.

The "Hot Oil" Problem.

The Petroleum Retailers Association, representing thousands of outlets in several Eastern States, has voted that no member shall knowingly market any "questionable" petroleum. That means that these retailers are resolved to cooperate with the efforts of the Government to check the flow of so-called "hot oil" into retail trade channels.

The action, together with the passage of another resolution upholding the marketing regulations of the petroleum code, shows that the demoralizing price warfare within the industry has had a sobering effect. It has convinced the distributors as well as the producers of petroleum that cut-throat competition can only be avoided by vigorous governmental action to control output of oil and by effective cooperation within the industry to prevent evasion of restrictions.

Praise bestowed upon Secretary Ickes for his "wonderful" fight against "hot oil" may seem a trifle extravagant in view of the patent failure of the Federal Government to prevent the flow of nonquota oil until conditions had become so intolerable that both Federal and State authorities were spurred to action. The Federal authorities have been handicapped, to be sure, by decisions of the lower courts denying the right of the Government to limit intrastate production of petroleum. And the industry may be censured for its inability to discipline itself. The knowledge that cut-throat competition does not pay has, however, been forcibly impressed upon all concerned as a result of the breakdown of code agreements.

Petroleum is a precious and irreplacable natural resource. Economical exploitation is essential for the National welfare. It seems almost ironical, therefore, that the failure of the control mechanism should have been so conspicuous in this particular case. Fortunately there appears to be now a clearer perception of the causes of the present price demoralization and of the need for firmer Government intervention to get at the basic cause of the trouble.

European Edition.

From the Atlantic to the Danube, the Paris edition of the New York Herald-Tribune and the Paris edition of the Chicago Tribune have been two antidotes to Europe's criticism that the United States is hopelessly standardized.

Whatever their points of political agreement, one of these journals never interpreted the news in anything but waltz time, while the feet of the other moved to jazz. These were the only American newspapers read by most of those few Europeans who read American newspapers at all. And nobody could read the two and logically summarize America in a set of rigid generalities.

So, now that the pair are to be merged, the student of Europe's attitude toward our own country will be unable to suppress a wish that this merger may never become quite complete. Perhaps the alliance will minimize the shortcomings of both its parties. And here's hoping, also, that it will perform a journalistic miracle and somehow preserve in unity the diverse characteristics that the two newspapers maintained so conspicuously in the days of their separate existences.

Facing Tax Realities.

Robert Moses, the Republican candidate for Governor of New York State, shows a high quality of political courage in his fearless advocacy of a retail sales tax as a means of balancing the State budget and raising relief funds locally. The unpopularity of a consumption tax, the defects of which he does not attempt to gloss, is fully realized by Mr. Moses. But, as he points out, the situation is one which leaves no room for choice. "I did not want any new taxes or any increase in present taxes," he says. "I advocated a 2 per cent retail sales tax only because I knew of no other way to meet the problem."

That, in brief, is the sum and substance of the argument in favor of sales taxes. In many cases they offer the only feasible alternative to increased taxes on real property, or heavier levies upon profits and incomes. Real property is so obviously in need of relief from excessive taxes that its incapacity to assume additional burdens needs no further proof. Taxes upon profits and incomes, heavily drawn upon by the Federal Government, are certainly not far from the point at which further local impositions will result in lower receipts.

Mr. Moses is fully aware of the theoretical defects of the sales tax, but he also knows that the time for doctrinaire opposition has passed. Any form of indirect taxation which can provide needed revenues, and strengthen the impaired credit of local governments, is acceptable under present conditions, provided it does not represent an unreasonable addition to consumer outlays.

A sales tax, if applied to the elimination of the State's budgetary deficit, will provide a feasible solution of an otherwise insoluble problem. That the choice is far from ideal is due to the exigencies of the times. These necessitate securing emergency revenue in ways that will be least painful and least productive of further deflationary pressure upon business and property values.

The Steel Deficit.

The operating deficit of nearly $10,000,000 reported by the United States Steel Corporation for the third quarter of the year bears eloquent testimony to the depressed state of the heavy industries. Following a quarter in which the corporation had a net profit of $5,350,000, the sharp recession in earnings is especially conspicuous. The drop is attributed to the greatly reduced demand for steel, which is reflected in a decline of average operating capacity from a June level of 52.5 per cent to the present level of about 22 per cent.

It is apparent from this showing that Government purchases and miscellaneous buying of steel products are not providing a basis for profitable activity. The only way in which the industries manufacturing steel and other durable goods can be encouraged to expand the scale of their operations is through restoration of the market for new capital issues. Private investment demands supply the buying absolutely needed to bring about any marked or permanent improvement in these basic industries. That is the lesson conveyed by the earnings statement of the United States Steel Corporation.

Recovery for the steel industry and reemployment of millions of idle men dependent upon that and allied industries await a resumption of normal financing activities in securities markets. If potential investors were relieved of their fears concerning future monetary and fiscal policies, and if unnecessary obstacles to the flotation of new issues were eliminated, reports such as that under consideration would soon be less discouraging.

Railroad Item.

King Boris of Bulgaria has long held the love of the Bulgarian masses by his democratic habits. He has long attracted the applause of foreigners by his bravery and resourcefulness in moments of personal crisis. All the world knows how he chats with peasants in their cottages. All the world has heard how, when assassins missed him and shot his chauffeur, the king loaded his automobile with policemen and drove them in pursuit of the murderers. Now his energetic character has again brought him into the news.

It appears that while Boris was traveling by rail on Tuesday a fire broke out in the tender of the royal train. Boris, an excellent amateur locomotive engineer, himself assumed the throttle and piloted the train until it reached a stream where the conflagration could be extinguished.

Whether or not a plot against the King's life underlies this episode, it certainly illustrates a stimulating executive interest in the welfare of the national transportation system.

It isn't so much that man becomes wiser as he grows older as it is that he becomes incapacitated for acting the fool.

It's beginning to appear that what this country soon will need is everything the taxpayer has.

This country will always have several millions of unemployed looking for work wherever they know they can't find it.

"Mr. Chairman!"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few months ago the country was heartened when President Roosevelt warned Federal officeholders who were retaining their party positions that they must either give up their party offices or relinquish their Government positions. Most of the little fellows who were national committeemen were soon to take the hint and gave up their party offices. But Mr. Roosevelt's chief patronage dispenser, Postmaster General James Aloysius Farley, still remains. In addition to being a member of the President's Cabinet, Mr. Farley is holding down the chairmanship of the Democratic National committee, and also the chairmanship of the New York State Democratic committee.

During the 20 months that Mr. Farley has been on the Federal payroll, he has held this three-in-one combination. As a member of the Cabinet he draws $15,000 of the taxpayers' money yearly, while as chairman of the Democratic National committee he is using Federal patronage in an attempt to influence elections. Thus it is apparent to all fair-minded citizens that the taxpayers' money is being used to feather his own political nest, and to bolster up a political machine that has no love for America's most sacred document—the Constitution.

Farley's attempt to shake off the stench of Tammanyism is merely falling on deaf ears. Let Mr. Farley continue as chairman of two Democratic committees if he likes, but let us have a Postmaster General whose Americanism cannot be questioned. Exit Mr. Farley.

DESCENDANT OF JOHN ADAMS.
Washington, Oct. 30.

For Mr. Sinclair.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A month or more ago Upton Sinclair won the nomination for Governor of California in the primary election by more than 300,000 votes. Soon after this election he took the train for the summer home of President Roosevelt, where he was received and cordially welcomed as a long-lost friend. What was said, what assurances were given Mr. Sinclair in a political way we are not at liberty to state. However, when he turned his face toward Washington the aforesaid face wore a smile that was childlike and bland, as it were.

Also, unintentionally, it is said, Mr. Sinclair received a letter from the genial Postmaster General indorsing his candidacy and giving it his official blessing. But it would seem this was only a dream, and Mr. Sinclair is left out in the cold, holding the bag.

Last, but not least, the Democratic political Samson of the Pacific Coast, Mr. Creel, a one-time staunch friend of Mr. Sinclair, has given due notice that he will pull down the pillars of the Sinclair temple and turn the whole business over to the Philistines.

Upton Sinclair is known all over the United States. In fact, his life is an open book. He is an advanced thinker. Some say he is a wild-eyed dreamer, but he has the welfare of the workers at heart. He is the same man today that he was a month ago, so why this sudden change of attitude?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am extremely grateful to you for the very excellent publicity you gave our field mass at Aquia in your publication. It was a real contribution to the cause of religion and helps keep alive the memories of those early Christians who settled in Virginia in the second half of the seventeenth century.

We feel that by your assistance in publicizing this event you help us in developing a permanent interest in this historic shrine.

The Other Robert.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In my recent letter about the cruelty of destroying the alley homes on account of the suffering thus to be inflicted on cats, dogs and other creatures of the alleys, I referred to a poet who had apologized even to a field mouse for accidentally upturning her nest when plowing. By a printer's error the name of the poet was given as Robert Browning instead of Robert Burns.

Robert Browning, however, also wrote some poetry and prose in defense of oppressed fellow-creatures. He denounced the crime of vivisection thus: "I would rather die the worst of deaths, so far as pain goes, than have a single dog or cat tortured under the pretext of saving me a twinge or two."

True poetry and true science recognize the value of universal compassion, based on recognition of universal brotherhood.

"Old Order Changeth."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are a great many people in this and every other country who seem to believe that the various nations are headed toward an era different from any other ever witnessed by mankind before; a new economic era and a change in all economic and social policies. Many believe that it will develop into an age of fascism; many think an age of communism, while others, and probably the great majority, are looking for a new creative epoch of socialistic principles, or what is more commonly known as socialism.

Now socialism may have its faults, and its many promises may seem a bit sophistical (any program so vast in structure as this always does), but should we misconstrue the whole system for a few petty faults which may be in time corrected?

Let us visualize this economic and social plan working under a republican form of government, for instance. Socialism may exist and be executed under a dictatorship where its rule is absolute, or we may have a form of socialism where its rules are limited as under a democracy.

Since the beginning of time, man has progressed scientifically and otherwise through his capacity to learn and create new conditions. Why shouldn't he change his social and economic environment in order to cope with his other progressive steps?

Remove the ebon side of the present capitalistic system and shift gradually and cautiously into a category of greater liberty and social justice as might be found under a controlled socialistic system.

"Florida's Disgrace."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of this Church noted at its meeting on October 29 your editorial of October 28, headed "Florida's Disgrace," and took affirmative action, commending The Post for its publication. As chairman of the good citizenship committee of that society, and charged with the responsibility of writing this letter, I wish to further commend you for your editorial of October 29, headed "Protests From the South."

Heroes Of "Peace."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We American citizens praise and glorify the soldier who died on the battlefield, also those who were wounded and maimed for life while fighting for American liberty. I happen to be one of this latter class, and we all appreciate this praise and honor being done us; also the great work the Government is doing in looking after us.

But we ought to praise and glorify the men who compose that great army of the Department of Justice who, under the leadership of that able man, Hon. J. Edgar Hoover, risk their lives day and night trying to destroy the terrible disease, likened to a cancer, which is eating the very life from this Nation. That disease is crime. May God bless these men and carry them safely through many a battle and on to the glory of victory of stamping out this great disease.

I lost 10 years of my life during the short time I served in the World War, but would be more than glad to give 10 more years to be able to serve the rest of my life shoulder to shoulder with these men, and I hope in the near future this honor will be given me.

Mutual Charity?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to the recent letter from Henry Ware Allen, Wichita, Kans., I would like to explain to Mr. Allen that our Government pensions are a 50-50 proposition between the veterans and the Government.

To be nicely correct, it is an act of really generous-hearted charity for a man to go out and fight, and maybe die in defense of others who lack the intestinal fortitude to do it for themselves. Appreciating this fact, the Government just returns her gratitude to her defenders by way of offering them an amount of money for their pleasures which is not at all obligatory.

Some take it. Others do not. But there are many of those who never wore a uniform who would take it if it were offered to them.

Radio Defeating Itself

Signs are multiplying that radio advertising faces a rising tide of public resentment. Average sponsors may not realize to what extent receivers are becoming silent when strictly commercial programs are on the air. One needs only the witness of his own family circle or the testimony of numerous friends to know that a sort of revolt is on. The fact was revealed as a Nation-wide movement during recent hearings in Washington before the Federal Commmunications Commission.

Advertisers seem increasingly importunate. And the penalty of listening to an orchestra, or a comedy sketch, is too often a series of explosive admonitions to go out and buy a certain brand of soap, or cereal, or cigarettes—and do it now.

The idea seems to be to spur listeners to action by advice that grows ever more strenuous. For many the action is that of shutting off the receiver altogether, and curling up with a good book or magazine.

Such things seem better regulated in various European nations, as in Italy, Denmark, the Netherlands. Great Britain holds so tight a rein over radio advertising as practically to prohibit it.

Perhaps some way may be found in the United States whereby radio, an agency existing primarily for people's pleasure and instruction, may also serve legitimate commercial interests, without driving away permanently the thousands of Americans who are now deserting it.

The Post Impressionist

No Fog, No-vember.

Post Office, Thursday.

FOG, London, London-fog, England—phew!

Thus James Joyce and all others of the stream-of-consciousness authors, would write when wanting to intimate that somebody dated a letter "Nov. 1." They would contend that "fog" inevitably suggests London in the concrete, England in general.

Well, it used to.

It's a false suggestion. So England says now. England discovers that it has been slandered.

* * *

"Why is it," inquires a British visitor to our of course famously fogless Washington, "that un-English people believe the United Kingdom has only two kinds of weather: Scotch mist and English fog?"

We might reply with Mark Twain that the United Kingdom doesn't have any climate at all—that what it has is merely a collection of samples. But this would be avoiding the plain implication. The plain implication is that all the non-English world is wrong in supposing the Thames Valley to be earth's greatest producer of fogs, and in supposing the remainder of England to be earth's greatest consumer.

So we retort:

"If England has been slandered, the English have only themselves to blame. They started the story. They started it ages ago. They brag of their fogs. One of their best-loved passages in Dickens is that 'superb glorification of fog' which adorns the opening pages of 'Bleak House.' And that's only a single example. English literature and English conversation are full of fog.

"How can you blame us Americans for believing that, though London gin is historically good gin—and though, contradictorily, Londoners always drink Scotch 'to keep out the fog'—there is no fog comparable to what we call 'London pea-soup?"

It is as if in plaintive answer to this daring demand that there tiptoes to our desk the November issue of "Coming Events," a monthly publication distributed throughout the travel-mission field, by an association of British trade-and-travel stimulators. Its leading editorial (the English word is "leader") leads right off thus:

"November fogs? Are we not the victims of our own incorrigible habit of phrase-making?"

"We have too long allowed the world to suppose that England in November is intolerable. Indeed, we have gloried in the assertion. For generations, we have been abusing our weather, without making it plain that this is a form of indulgence peculiar to ourselves.

"We are rather proud of the reputation we have built up of being able to live in a 'difficult' climate. It exhibits us as a hardy race—which we are—and one able to adapt itself to conditions that would severely test the stamina of lesser breeds.

"That this attitude may be regarded as unnecessarily arrogant does not matter so very much. The trouble is that it is silly. For the less sympathetic and understanding stranger blandly accepts our description of English weather without in the least comprehending our queer inverted pride about it."

The Post-Impressionist suggests that England ought to hire a good California press-agent. There are plenty such to be had, now that Upton Sinclair has cornered the California publicity-market.

* * *

But these patriotic Britons prefer to hire native talent. And they simply deny the fog-legend!

They say: "A few facts from the Meteorological Office are sufficient to destroy the fable. Until the rise of aviation brought a demand for exact knowledge of 'visibility,' there was no systematic measurement in our country of the duration, range and density of fog. Accurate measurement of 'visibility' was not begun until after the war. But records show quite definitely that, whereas between 1881 and 1900 there was practically no variation in the volume of London's November fogs, there has been, since then, a steady decrease.

"Now visibility-measurements are taken regularly at many stations both in England and abroad. Fog is held to exist when an object becomes invisible at a distance of 1,000 meters. And the worst time for fog is one hour after sunrise. Here, then, is the average of fog-observations at 7 a. m., during the Novembers of a number of years, made at four typical stations:

Paris (Le Bourget) .... 7 days
Frankfurt ..... 5 days

"In plain and sober truth, we are no worse off than our neighbors. . . . The 'London Particular' fog, as the brew was called by its reluctant admirers, is no longer procurable. The dawn of a day such as the one described in 'Bleak House' would now provoke as much excitement in London as a snowstorm in Jerusalem."

* * *

Of course you can't remember the remote epoch when people talked of "horseless carriages." Of course you pretend not to remember that epoch—not much less remote—when people talked of "wireless telegraphy." But your children are going to say to their children:

"I remember when people first began to talk of 'Fogless London.'"

Will Barthou's Way Be Followed Now?

American Political Observer Assays the Task That Faces Pierre Laval.

By Dr. Leonid I. Strakhovsky.

WHEN the bullet of an assassin took the life of Louis Barthou, man of letters, scholar, musician and statesman, but above all a great Frenchman, patriot and lover of peace, the diplomatic world asked itself a grave question: Will Barthou's policy be continued by his successor?

The appointment of Pierre Laval to the Qual d'Orsay was a disappointment for many observers of European affairs. Laval is a man of much smaller caliber than Barthou; also, his appointment was a definite compromise, a half-way solution of the problem.

There is no doubt that the appointment of either Herriot or Tardieu would have placed a much more able man in the chair of the minister of foreign affairs. But this could not have been done even by the popular Doumergue. The appointment of either of the two men, now holding ministerial posts without portfolio, would have precipitated the resignation of the other and thus ended the political truce which alone gives Doumergue's cabinet its stability. Therefore Doumergue was forced to find some one of relative political prominence, who would be at the same time acceptable both to Tardieu and Herriot, respectively reactionary and liberal leaders. Laval appeared to be the man.

The task which befalls the new foreign minister is great and the solution of the problems which face him is of paramount importance to the peace of Europe. So far Laval has announced that he will follow in Barthou's footsteps. The question arises: Will he be able to?

IT seems that the future of Europe depends upon the choice of a fundamental policy based on positive and not negative interests. Europe must decide whether to continue a negative policy of alliances for the sake of preserving the status quo, or whether to embark upon a positive constructive policy of regional agreements under the aegis of the League of Nations, binding those with common interests not only to defend, but also to promote peace. In other words, it is essential for the peace of Europe to end the practice of a prewar system of alliances directed against one or a group of powers. After all, the so-called defensive treaties of prewar Europe actually proved to be offensive instruments leading nations directly into an armed conflict.

There is no doubt that right after the World War the formation of a protective system of alliances under French leadership not only seemed to be essential for the preservation of peace, but actually did stabilize the new Europe, permitting it to embark upon the work of reconstruction. But now, 16 years after the end of the war, that system is obsolete and if continued indefinitely will necesarily lead to a new armed conflict. This Briand realized, this Barthou was attempting to make practical politics.

When ancient Greece emerged from its long wars with Persia the leadership of Athens was unchallengeable. Thereupon Athens proceeded to form the League of Delos, a system of alliances, in order to protect Greece from a possible new invasion of Persia. So long as the Persian danger loomed menacingly on the horizon the allies of Athens submitted to her hegemony.

But with the passing of years first one and then another began to question the futility of remaining in the alliance. Defections followed and when Athens attempted to keep her allies by force, they threw themselves promptly into the waiting arms of the Achaian League, headed by Sparta. The Peloponnesian war followed during which Athens was defeated and shorn of all her power and prestige.

THIS historical example may serve to illustrate the idea that alliances formed against an external enemy are not of a constructive nature, fail to preserve peace in the long run and are doomed as soon as partners to the contract so much as believe that their utility is ended.

On the other hand, agreements of a regional nature have all the earmarks of stable peace—promoting instruments tending to further the interests of nations bound together geographically, economically and politically. Of these the Balkan Pact signed on February 9 of this year, and the more recent understanding between Soviet Russia and her Baltic neighbors—Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania—seem to be the most promising ones. Barthou had hoped to make that system more extensive.

For generations it has been the custom of political writers to label the Balkan countries with epithets denouncing their troublesome nature, thus casting serious doubt on the statesmanship of their leaders. These writers always pointed out that a great many of the more recent wars in Europe had their beginning in the Balkans. Although this is obviously true, one fundamental reason for troubles in the Balkans is easily overlooked. For over a century that area was a field of rivalry and intrigue of the so-called great powers. Each time a great power attempted to promote its interests in the Balkans at the expense of the others, there was a risk of war.

TODAY the Balkan nations are tired of being a pawn in somebody else's game. However, being relatively small nations, they could not dream of inaugurating an independent policy individually. Therefore, mindful of the saying that in unity there is force, they are smoothing out their differences, finding a common ground of positive interests, and sealing these findings with a pact, proclaiming what amounts to a Balkan Monroe Doctrine.

From now on it's "hands off." The Balkan nations are going to look after themselves, freed of the patronizing tutorship of great powers. Indeed, by this pact, they have graduated to statesmanship.

It is with such developments in mind that one should approach evaluation of Barthou's attempts to develop the system of regional agreements in Europe. Laval's forthcoming visit to Rome to keep Barthou's engagement there is thus of great importance. If Laval's mission succeeds in establishing cooperation with Italy, it may mean substantial advance for the policy of obtaining security and preserving peace by means of regional agreements as opposed to the old prewar system of alliances.

Along the Potomac

That Banking Holiday.

FORMER Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills keeps referring in his speeches to a matter that a lot of us would like to hear more about. It would go a long way in helping us appraise current men and things.

BARGERON

He keeps saying that had Mr. Roosevelt conferred with Mr. Hoover in the weeks just preceding March 4, 1933, the banking debacle could have been prevented. He doesn't say how, he doesn't go into details at all. Yet it would seem to be quite important. It so happens that the present Administration lists its handling of the banking crisis as one of its major accomplishments. It is something that the critics so far have been unable to take away from it. In fact, every time they get the Administration on the defensive it brings up its handling of the banking breakdown and asks:

"How about that?"

"Yes, how about that?"

Repeatedly it has been used to confound the critics. When they cite the huge expenditures, the agricultural carrying on, the debacle of the NRA, the air-mail fiasco, the Administration always has the banking business to fall back on.

* * * *

It used it against the critical bankers here last week. They were a fine bunch to be beefing, they were told, when it was Mr. Roosevelt who had kept them out of the breadlines. The recollection of it made the bankers shudder, too, on this, that he had certainly saved their shirts.

Yet Mr. Mills without developing what he has in mind keeps saying that if Mr. Roosevelt had cooperated with Mr. Hoover there would have been no crisis.

We know what he is talking about. It is a story that was current back in those dark days, but one which was considered so indelicate that very little discussion of it occurred. Mr. Mills ought to bring about a discussion of it now. If what he is talking about is true, it would, I think, throw light on a lot of things, on the viciousness of politics, for one.

The story is that Mr. Hoover several weeks before he left office realized that something heroic had to be done about the banks, that they should all be closed for an overhauling and to prevent a catastrophe. He also knew, however, that in view of the country's state of mind had he closed them, had he done the same thing Mr. Roosevelt subsequently did, there would have been a panic.

So, according to the story, he apprised Mr. Roosevelt of this situation, told him that he appreciated that he, Hoover, was still President in name, but that Mr. Roosevelt was in fact, and suggested that Mr. Roosevelt join with him in joint action. Delay was dangerous, Mr. Hoover is said to have pointed out. Mr. Roosevelt is reported to have refused, to have replied, in effect, that the banking trouble was Mr. Hoover's baby.

The result is well known. Hundreds of banks failed in the few weeks preceding Mr. Roosevelt's assumption of office, untold numbers lost heavily. It has been estimated that an additional 2,000,000 men were thrown out of work.

And it is a fact that the crisis was actually handled by appointees of Mr. Hoover working there all night in the Treasury. Mr. Mills was one of them, Mr. Ballantine another. This was necessary, of course, because Mr. Roosevelt's one appointee at the time, Mr. Woodin, had not had the time to get his hand in. Mr. Woodin's sole contribution in those dark days, and one not to be minimized, was his unflagging cheerfulness—his smile.

As I say, we ought to be able to stand at this late day a thorough discussion of Mr. Mills' charge.

If Mr. Roosevelt really took the attitude in this crisis that it wasn't his baby it was manifestly good politics, as the current popular esteem in which he is held proves. But was it statesmanship?

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

A GOOD many people seem to think that a marriage license, by itself, is a diploma for the second hardest art in the world—that of rearing a child. First place in difficulty goes to the art of living, of course. But telling someone else, and younger, how to do it remains only less hard, though undoubtedly attractive.

Yet such sublime self-confidence on the part of parents needs a bit of tempering. Uninstructed, they wouldn't set out to build so much as an alarm clock, and here they are molding an infant into, one hopes, a civilized human being! To this, the obvious rebuttal will come that a good many children have been reared in this world without benefit of specially instructed parents. Yet that kind of rebuttal never resulted in better alarm clocks.

There is only one cardinal principle in child-rearing, and that is to put yourself in the child's place. Such a process should be made easier by the wisdom of Carl Renz, M. D., and Mildred Paul Renz, as made plain in the pages of "Big Problems on Little Shoulders" (Macmillan, $1.50). In this "grown-up's guide to a child's mind," the authors recognize how huge and fearsome, to the child, must be any number of things which adults take in their stride. It is that disproportion of cause to effect which makes the child's unhappiness so deep to him, so perplexing to parents.

This book gives case histories, together with eminently sensible advice. It may surprise people who underrate manners to learn that the strongest possible thing to say to a child is not, "Making faces, &c., &c., is naughty, shameful, forbidden," but rather, "Making faces is not polite."

* * * *

That same child's point of view gives especial value to a "first physiology"—"My Body and How it Works," by Dorothy Walter Baruch and Oscar Reiss, M. D. (Harper, $1.50). Here, in the form of a conversation with a little girl and a little boy, is the story of the body's mechanisms and functions. Nothing could be more honest, straightforward and free from squeamishness—qualities which the child is perfectly able to appreciate. As Dr. Logan Clendening says in the foreword: "It is dependable, and exceptionally interesting besides."

* * * *

If your children want to know about astronomy, get them "The Stars for Children" (Macmillan, $1.50), by Gaylord Johnson. It has a story—a bit on the sweet side—and a great number of diagrams and illustrations. Stars, moon, and planets are explained thoroughly for children from 6 to 14.

* * * *

As for art, nothing could be better than Ana M. Berry's already famous volume—"Art for Children" (The Studio, $3.50), now in its second edition with a new preface. It is a book of reproductions (with comment)—8 in color and over 100 in monochrome—some of the finest works of art extant which would interest children.

The arrangement helps. There are sections on "beasts, games and amusements, ships, legends and adventures, angels and fairies, and portraits." Here is the Goya of donkeys riding pick-a-back on two men; a Chinese scroll-painting of children playing with puppets; some of Rowlandson's jolly caricatures; Turner's ships, and Raphael's drawing of St. George and the dragon. Here are Italian primitives and Dutch masters, Japanese and Moghul paintings, and works by Rembrandt, Holbein, Durer, Reynolds, Blake, and Velasquez. All are reproduced impeccably.

As the author says: "Only the best has been considered good enough for inclusion in this book. It is better that children should not have to unlearn as they grow older. And, to accustom them early to beautiful things is to influence their outlook for good from the beginning."

It is a lovely and enthralling book, scarcely less so for adults than for the fortunate children who will here discover how exciting and pleasant the land of art can be.

If I were a child, just learning to play the piano, I'm sure I would revel in "Mozart: the Wonder Boy" (Dutton, $2), by Opal Wheeler and Sybil Deucher. The authors tell the story of the child-prodigy of Vienna with very pleasing grace; Mary Greenwalt has sprinkled the book with amusing pen-and-ink illustrations; and the music of eight of Mozart's compositions, including his earliest, is given.

* * * *

For stamp collectors—and every child ought to have that passion once—here is a combined album and history of this country. The Postoffice Department's orgy of commemorative issues makes it possible. All the way from the Norsemen to Byrd in Antarctica, there's a stamp out for every important event and person, and a space for it in this book. Leslie W. Devereux wrote the narrative text, and William Heyer drew the illustrations, for "The Stamp Collector's History of the United States" (Blue Ribbon, $1).

* * * *

"Fire!" by Cliff Meredith (Reynal & Hitchcock, $1.75), holds a striking collection of photographs of burning buildings, firemen and apparatus, some as memorable and full of action as any pictures in "The First World War." The descriptive letterpress is simple enough for children, but anyone who ever wanted to get inside a fire line will enjoy this little book.

* * * *

Teaching a child, or sharing its interest and hobbies, success all comes down to our ability in gaining the child's-eye view. If we need reminders, we can find them in the integrity and sympathy of Henry Handel Richardson's book of fiction, "The End of a Childhood" (Norton, $2.50). The title story tells of Cuffy Mahony, a small boy, as he felt after the death of his father (with which "Ultima Thule" ends). There follows a section called "Growing Pains, or Sketches of Girlhood," vignettes which are tragically pointed. Four stories, not about children, complete the book. But there are enough hints, if most of them are by reverse English, in the first part of the book to make considerably more distinct the art of being a good ancestor.

November First

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

ALL Saints' Day—German, Allesheligen; French, Toussaint; Latin, Festum Emnium Sanctorium—comes on the first of November.

It was in former times called in English All Hallows or Hallowmas, and was appointed in honor of all the saints, known and unknown. And there were so many known saints on the calendar, two or three sometimes coming together, that it was a happy idea to appoint one day in the year in commemoration of all.

As early as the fourth century, some of the early Christian churches began to appoint feasts to celebrate the deaths of martyrs, but the original beginning of a universal celebration was (fittingly enough) at Antioch, on the Sunday after Pentecost.

In the first decade of the seventh century, the Pope, Boniface IV, solemnly gave a consecration service at the Pantheon in Rome, to the memory of the Blessed Virgin Mary and to all the martyrs. Since that time, about the year 610, this feast has been annually held on May 13. But the once common belief, that this particular feast was the origin of All Saints, is not now generally believed.

A century later, Pope Gregory III established an oratory in St. Peter's Church for the relics of "the holy apostles, and of all saints, martyrs, and confessors, of all the just made perfect who are at rest."

This became a favorite feast among all Catholics, but it was not made obligatory on the Continent until the year 835, when King Louis the Pious, at the urgence of Pope Gregory IV, in unison with all the bishops, fixed the feast annually on the first of November. King Louis I, who was both Roman Emperor and King of the Franks, was called the Pious because he was deeply religious and at one time wished to enter a monastery. He was affectionately called by the French by a word that meant "tender-hearted to the point of weakness."

Thus, as we celebrate it, All Saints' will be next November exactly 1,100 years old, and there ought to be a great world-wide celebration.

This feast was so universally celebrated that at the Reformation it was not abandoned by the Protestants, but kept as a holy day in the Church of England, as well as in many Lutheran churches; although I believe that these have now given it up, and it is celebrated only by Catholics, the Church of England, and Episcopalians.

Prestige Is Japan's Objective at London

By Elliott Thurston.

Preliminary naval discussions at London have reached the point where the choices of policy confronting the United States are clear. They have been indicated all along. But it is now evident that Japan will not retreat from her position in demanding recognition of the principle of naval equality.

That demand has become so identified in the Japanese public mind with national prestige, even national honor, that open retreat is out of the question for any Japanese government. Much ground remains to be explored at London as to what understandings might be reached if the principle of equality is conceded. At the moment the conversations are stuck at the point of making that concession. For in American and British naval opinion equality of naval strength for Japan means, in truth, a superiority in the Far East which would leave Japan impregnable command. Only a combination of British and American sea forces could hope to cope with her then.

Ambassador Saito makes clear that while Japan is prepared to hold out to the last for the principle, she may agree to a long period, perhaps of many years, of actual inferiority. Such an agreement could hardly be binding and would not, therefore, satisfy British and American naval opinion. Nevertheless, the choice is between such a nonbinding understanding and no understanding—between salvaging something out of the wreckage of naval limitaiton or another free-for-all naval race.

THERE is only one possible exception to this—and one possible alternative course. The exception would be that Japan can be made to back down at London by threats. The alternative would be war. Whether the threat of actual war, the threat of trade war, and the threat of an Anglo-American alliance in the Pacific would make Japan back down is certainly highly doubtful now. Japan undoubtedly has weighed these possibilities fully, and concluded that the threats, even if made, would not be real.

Her policy at London is to try to keep the British and Americans divided. She is not blind to the traditional policy of the United States which makes alliance improbable, nor to the practical trading advantages which she can offer in dealing with the British. Nor is she unaware of British doubts about reliance upon an "ally" which has always insisted upon being free—upon being a neutral. She knew of the remark of an eminent American delegate at the Washington armament conference that the 5-5-3 ratio can always be added up to make it against 3. But she knows that the addition is not likely to take place short of much more provocation than she means to give. Her Manchurian adventure suggested how far provocation might go without incurring more than rebuke and rather general displeasure.

As for a trade war, she has always gambled on the theory that the United States stood to lose too much by a trade war to make that threat very real. And the alternative of actual war is even more remote. The American public at large never warmed to Mr. Stimson's moralistic lecturing of Japan for her Manchurian conquest. Potent groups in Congress even recoiled, on the ground that the only way to impose our morals would be at the point of the bayonet. And public opinion then, as now, remained too little interested in the Orient to go to that extreme.

THE threat of a naval race fails to impress the Japanese. In the first place, they think it as unlikely as war—that only a war purpose would make it possible. Secondly, this and the other threats do not touch the question of prestige. It is the recognition of equality, a matter of deeper pride than the Occidental mind readily grasps, that counts—not the number of ships.

One may trace this pride through the Paris peace conference, where Japan resented being treated as an inferior, to the Washington conference, where she sat as an equal and so agreed to a 5-5-3 ratio in capital ships, to the shocked illusionment that swept over the empire when she was branded as an inferior in the immigration act of 1924, to the London conference, where she still resented, though temporarily acquiesced, in an inferior ratio for auxiliary ships, and finally to the present hour, when she will submit no longer to a treaty-proclaimed inferiority.

The choice now at London is between no agreement and the best agreement that can be made by recognizing Japan as an equal—or by avoiding stamping her any longer as inferior. Primarily, it is a matter of pride rather than of ships.

Waynesboro Names New Police Chief

Waynesboro, Va., Oct. 31 (Spl.).—Roy L. Switzer, 30, for four years a member of the Covington police force, was named chief of waynesboro police by City Manager I. G. Vass and the appointment confirmed by a special session of the council effective November 15. He will succeed S. B. Shumate, a member of the local force for 38 years, who is to be given lighter duties on account of his health, according to present plans.

Switzer, who had also served as a patrolman in Cincinnati for two years and attended police training school there, was selected from 20 applicants from ten Virginia cities. His appointment comes as the result of a resolution adopted by the council two weeks ago ordering the city manager to reorganize the police department. Councilman Walter Ellison cast the only vote against Switzer's appointment, expressing the belief that the present police set-up was adequate.

Danville to Keep Old Trolley Cars

Cannot Afford Change, Say Traction Officials.

Danville, Va., Oct. 31 (Spl.).—Danville will cling to the old-fashioned trolley car—because the traction and power company can not afford to buy trackless trolleys or a fleet of buses.

The issue was raised between the company's officials and city officials when the latter began planning for the repaving of Main street at a cost of $40,000. The possibility of street car tracks being eliminated led to a conference with C. G. Holland, president of the traction company, who said his company could not afford modernizing the public transportation service.

The company, however, expects to show a better balance sheet at the end of the current year, chiefly due to the textile code which necessitated double shifts in the local mills, hence, more street car passengers.

Will Barthou's Way Be Followed Now?

By Dr. Leonid I. Strakhovsky.

WHEN the bullet of an assassin took the life of Louis Barthou, man of letters, scholar, musician and statesman, but above all a great Frenchman, patriot and lover of peace, the diplomatic world asked itself a grave question: Will Barthou's policy be continued by his successor?

The appointment of Pierre Laval to the Quai d'Orsay was a disappointment for many observers of European affairs. Laval is a man of much smaller caliber than Barthou; also, his appointment was a definite compromise, a half-way solution of the problem.

There is no doubt that the appointment of either Herriot or Tardieu would have placed a much more able man in the chair of the minister of foreign affairs. Therefore Doumergue was forced to find some one of relative political prominence, who would be at the same time acceptable both to Tardieu and Herriot, respectively reactionary and liberal leaders. Laval appeared to be the man.

The task which befalls the new foreign minister is great and the solution of the problems which face him is of paramount importance to the peace of Europe. So far Laval has announced that he will follow in Barthou's footsteps. The question arises: Will he be able to?

IT seems that the future of Europe depends upon the choice of a fundamental policy based on positive and not negative interests. Europe must decide whether to continue a negative policy of alliances for the sake of preserving the status quo, or whether to embark upon a positive constructive policy of regional agreements under the aegis of the League of Nations, binding those with common interests not only to defend, but also to promote peace. In other words, it is essential for the peace of Europe to end the practice of a prewar system of alliances directed against one or a group of powers. After all, the so-called defensive treaties of prewar Europe actually proved to be offensive instruments leading nations directly into an armed conflict.

There is no doubt that right after the World War the formation of a protective system of alliances under French leadership not only seemed to be essential for the preservation of peace, but actually did stabilize the new Europe, permitting it to embark upon the work of reconstruction. But now, 16 years after the end of the war, that system is obsolete and if continued indefinitely will necesarily lead to a new armed conflict. This Briand realized, this Barthou was attempting to make practical politics.

When ancient Greece emerged from its long wars with Persia the leadership of Athens was unchallengeable. Thereupon Athens proceeded to form the League of Delos, a system of alliances, in order to protect Greece from a possible new invasion of Persia. So long as the Persian danger loomed menacingly on the horizon the allies of Athens submitted to her hegemony.

But with the passing of years first one and then another began to question the futility of remaining in the alliance. Defections followed and when Athens attempted to keep her allies by force, they threw themselves promptly into the waiting arms of the Achaian League, headed by Sparta. The Peloponnesian war followed during which Athens was defeated and shorn of all her power and prestige.

THIS historical example may serve to illustrate the idea that alliances formed against an external enemy are not of a constructive nature, fail to preserve peace in the long run and are doomed as soon as partners to the contract so much as believe that their utility is ended.

On the other hand, agreements of a regional nature have all the earmarks of stable peace—promoting instruments tending to further the interests of nations bound together geographically, economically and politically. Of these the Balkan Pact signed on February 9 of this year, and the more recent understanding between Soviet Russia and her Baltic neighbors—Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania—seem to be the most promising ones. Barthou had hoped to make that system more extensive.

For generations it has been the custom of political writers to label the Balkan countries with epithets denouncing their troublesome nature, thus casting serious doubt on the statesmanship of their leaders. These writers always pointed out that a great many of the more recent wars in Europe had their beginning in the Balkans. Although this is obviously true, one fundamental reason for troubles in the Balkans is easily overlooked. For over a century that area was a field of rivalry and intrigue of the so-called great powers. Each time a great power attempted to promote its interests in the Balkans at the expense of the others, there was a risk of war.

TODAY the Balkan nations are tired of being a pawn in somebody else's game. However, being relatively small nations, they could not dream of inaugurating an independent policy individually. Therefore, mindful of the saying that in unity there is force, they are smoothing out their differences, finding a common ground of positive interests, and sealing these findings with a pact, proclaiming what amounts to a Balkan Monroe Doctrine.

From now on it's "hands off." The Balkan nations are going to look after themselves, freed of the patronizing tutorship of great powers. Indeed, by this pact, they have graduated to statesmanship.

It is with such developments in mind that one should approach evaluation of Barthou's attempts to develop the system of regional agreements in Europe. Laval's forthcoming visit to Rome to keep Barthou's engagement there is thus of great importance. If Laval's mission succeeds in establishing cooperation with Italy, it may mean substantial advance for the policy of obtaining security and preserving peace by means of regional agreements as opposed to the old prewar system of alliances.

Along the Potomac

That Banking Holiday.

FORMER Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills keeps referring in his speeches to a matter that a lot of us would like to hear more about. It would go a long way in helping us appraise current men and things.

BARGERON

He keeps saying that had Mr. Roosevelt conferred with Mr. Hoover in the weeks just preceding March 4, 1933, the banking debacle could have been prevented. He doesn't say how, he doesn't go into details at all. Yet it would seem to be quite important. It so happens that the present Administration lists its handling of the banking crisis as one of its major accomplishments. It is something that the critics so far have been unable to take away from it. In fact, every time they get the Administration on the defensive it brings up its handling of the banking breakdown and asks:

"How about that?"

And everybody echoes:

"Yes, how about that?"

Repeatedly it has been used to confound the critics. When they cite the huge expenditures, the agricultural carrying on, the debacle of the NRA, the air-mail fiasco, the Administration always has the banking business to fall back on.

• • • •

It used it against the critical bankers here last week. They were a fine bunch to be beefing, they were told, when it was Mr. Roosevelt who had kept them out of the breadlines. The recollection of it made the bankers shudder, too, on this, that he had certainly saved their shirts.

Yet Mr. Mills without developing what he has in mind keeps saying that if Mr. Roosevelt had cooperated with Mr. Hoover there would have been no crisis.

We know what he is talking about. It is a story that was current back in those dark days, but one which was considered so indelicate that very little discussion of it occurred. Mr. Mills ought to bring about a discussion of it now. If what he is talking about is true, it would, I think, throw light on a lot of things, on the viciousness of politics, for one.

The story is that Mr. Hoover several weeks before he left office realized that something heroic had to be done about the banks, that they should all be closed for an overhauling and to prevent a catastrophe. He also knew, however, that in view of the country's state of mind had he closed them, had he done the same thing Mr. Roosevelt subsequently did, there would have been a panic.

So, according to the story, he apprised Mr. Roosevelt of this situation, told him that he appreciated that he, Hoover, was still President in name, but that Mr. Roosevelt was in fact, and suggested that Mr. Roosevelt join with him in joint action. Delay was dangerous, Mr. Hoover is said to have pointed out. Mr. Roosevelt is reported to have refused, to have replied, in effect, that the banking trouble was Mr. Hoover's baby.

The result is well known. Hundreds of banks failed in the few weeks preceding Mr. Roosevelt's assumption of office, untold numbers lost heavily. It has been estimated that an additional 2,000,000 men were thrown out of work.

And it is a fact that the crisis was actually handled by appointees of Mr. Hoover working there all night in the Treasury. Mr. Mills was one of them, Mr. Ballantine another. This was necessary, of course, because Mr. Roosevelt's one appointee at the time, Mr. Woodin, had not had the time to get his hand in. Mr. Woodin's sole contribution in those dark days, and one not to be minimized, was his unflagging cheerfulness—his smile.

As I say, we ought to be able to stand at this late day a thorough discussion of Mr. Mills' charge.

If Mr. Roosevelt really took the attitude in this crisis that it wasn't his baby it was manifestly good politics, as the current popular esteem in which he is held proves. But was it statesmanship?

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

A GOOD many people seem to think that a marriage license, by itself, is a diploma for the second hardest art in the world—that of rearing a child. First place in difficulty goes to the art of living, of course. But telling someone else, and younger, how to do it remains only less hard, though undoubtedly attractive.

Yet such sublime self-confidence on the part of parents needs a bit of tempering. Uninstructed, they wouldn't set out to build so much as an alarm clock, and here they are molding an infant into, one hopes, a civilized human being! To this, the obvious rebuttal will come that a good many children have been reared in this world without benefit of specially instructed parents. Yet that kind of rebuttal never resulted in better alarm clocks.

There is only one cardinal principle in child-rearing, and that is to put yourself in the child's place. Such a process should be made easier by the wisdom of Carl Renz, M. D., and Mildred Paul Renz, as made plain in the pages of "Big Problems on Little Shoulders" (Macmillan, $1.50). In this "grown-up's guide to a child's mind," the authors recognize how huge and fearsome, to the child, must be any number of things which adults take in their stride. It is that disproportion of cause to effect which makes the child's unhappiness so deep to him, so perplexing to parents.

This book gives case histories, together with eminently sensible advice. It may surprise people who underrate manners to learn that the strongest possible thing to say to a child is not, "Making faces, &c., &c., is naughty, shameful, forbidden," but rather, "Making faces is not polite."

That same child's point of view gives especial value to a "first physiology"—"My Body and How It Works," by Dorothy Walter Baruch and Oscar Reiss, M. D. (Harper, $1.50). Here, in the form of a conversation with a little girl and a little boy, is the story of the body's mechanisms and functions. Nothing could be more honest, straightforward and free from squeamishness—qualities which the child is perfectly able to appreciate. As Dr. Logan Clendening says in the foreword: "It is dependable, and exceptionally interesting besides."

• • • •

If your children want to know about astronomy, get them "The Stars for Children" (Macmillan, $1.50), by Gaylord Johnson. It has a story—a bit on the sweet side—and a great number of diagrams and illustrations. Stars, moon, and planets are explained thoroughly for children from 6 to 14.

• • • •

As for art, nothing could be better than Ana M. Berry's already famous volume—"Art for Children" (The Studio, $3.50), now in its second edition with a new preface. It is a book of reproductions (with comment)—8 in color and over 100 in monochrome—some of the finest works of art extant which would interest children.

The arrangement helps. There are sections on "beasts, games and amusements, ships, legends and adventures, angels and fairies, and portraits." Here is the Goya of donkeys riding pick-a-back on two men; a Chinese scroll-painting of children playing with puppets; some of Rowlandson's jolly caricatures; Turner's ships, and Raphael's drawing of St. George and the dragon. Here are Italian primitives and Dutch masters, Japanese and Moghul paintings, and works by Rembrandt, Holbein, Durer, Reynolds, Blake, and Velasquez. All are reproduced impeccably.

As the author says: "Only the best has been considered good enough for inclusion in this book. It is better that children should not have to unlearn as they grow older. And, to accustom them early to beautiful things is to influence their outlook for good from the beginning."

It is a lovely and enthralling book, scarcely less so for adults than for the fortunate children who will here discover how exciting and pleasant the land of art can be.

If I were a child, just learning to play the piano, I'm sure I would revel in "Mozart: the Wonder Boy" (Dutton, $2), by Opal Wheeler and Sybil Deucher. The authors tell the story of the child-prodigy of Vienna with very pleasing grace; Mary Greenwalt has sprinkled the book with amusing pen-and-ink illustrations; and the music of eight of Mozart's compositions, including his earliest, is given.

• • • •

For stamp collectors—and every child ought to have that passion once—here is a combined album and history of this country. The Postoffice Department's orgy of commemorative issues makes it possible. All the way from the Norsemen to Byrd in Antarctica, there's a stamp out for every important event and person, and a space for it in this book. Leslie W. Devereux wrote the narrative text, and William Heyer drew the illustrations, for "The Stamp Collector's History of the United States" (Blue Ribbon, $1).

• • • •

"Fire!" by Cliff Meredith (Reynal & Hitchcock, $1.75), holds a striking collection of photographs of burning buildings, firemen and apparatus, some as memorable and full of action as any pictures in "The First World War." The descriptive letterpress is simple enough for children, but anyone who ever wanted to get inside a fire line will enjoy this little book.

• • • •

Teaching a child, or sharing its interest and hobbies, success all comes down to our ability in gaining the child's-eye view. If we need reminders, we can find them in the integrity and sympathy of Henry Handel Richardson's book of fiction, "The End of a Childhood" (Norton, $2.50). The title story tells of Cuffy Mahony, a small boy, as he felt after the death of his father (with which "Ultima Thule" ends). There follows a section called "Growing Pains, or Sketches of Girlhood," vignettes which are tragically pointed. Four stories, not about children, complete the book. But there are enough hints, if most of them are by reverse English, in the first part of the book to make considerably more distinct the art of being a good ancestor.

Isle of Lost Souls . . . and Treasure

Set like a green jewel in the blue vastness of the Southern Pacific, the Island of Cocos has known battle, murder and shipwreck . . . piracy and plotting. It has seen the rise and fall of the astounding Inca civilization. It saw the sails of almost the first white man's ship to enter the Pacific. It saw the early buccaneers in their high-pooped, painted caravans . . . and it knew also the agony of blood and murder which those old brigands of the sea brought in their train. Somewhere in Cocos' jungles lie three treasures of gold and silver, jewels and plates, images and weapons . . . believed to be the richest, most authentic pirates' treasures in the world. For as pirates came and went, this tiny island shared their darkest secrets . . . and hides them still.

Here is a thrilling true story of the sea that will make your heart pound as the wild surf has pounded on Cocos' shore since the first buccaneer left his footprint on its white sands. Don't miss it . . . in

This Sunday's Post Feature Section

November First

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

ALL Saints' Day—German, Allesheligen; French, Toussaint; Latin, Festum Emnium Sanctorium—comes on the first of November.

It was in former times called in English All Hallows or Hallowmas, and was appointed in honor of all the saints, known and unknown. And there were so many known saints on the calendar, two or three sometimes coming together, that it was a happy idea to appoint one day in the year in commemoration of all.

As early as the fourth century, some of the early Christian churches began to appoint feasts to celebrate the deaths of martyrs, but the original beginning of a universal celebration was (fittingly enough) at Antioch, on the Sunday after Pentecost.

In the first decade of the seventh century, the Pope, Boniface IV, solemnly gave a consecration service at the Pantheon in Rome, to the memory of the Blessed Virgin Mary and to all the martyrs. Since that time, about the year 610, this feast has been annually held on May 13. But the once common belief, that this particular feast was the origin of All Saints, is not now generally believed.

A century later, Pope Gregory III established an oratory in St. Peter's Church for the relics of "the holy apostles, and of all saints, martyrs, and confessors, of all the just made perfect who are at rest."

This became a favorite feast among all Catholics, but it was not made obligatory on the Continent until the year 835, when King Louis the Pious, at the urgence of Pope Gregory IV, in unison with all the bishops, fixed the feast annually on the first of November. King Louis I, who was both Roman Emperor and King of the Franks, was called the Pious because he was deeply religious and at one time wished to enter a monastery. He was affectionately called by the French by a word that meant "tender-hearted to the point of weakness."

Thus, as we celebrate it, All Saints' will be next November exactly 1,100 years old, and there ought to be a great world-wide celebration.

This feast was so universally celebrated that at the Reformation it was not abandoned by the Protestants, but kept as a holy day in the Church of England, as well as in many Lutheran churches; although I believe that these have now given it up, and it is celebrated only by Catholics, the Church of England, and Episcopalians.

Prestige Is Japan's Objective at London

By Elliott Thurston.

Preliminary naval discussions at London have reached the point where the choices of policy confronting the United States are clear. They have been indicated all along. But it is now evident that Japan will not retreat from her position in demanding recognition of the principle of naval equality.

That demand has become so identified in the Japanese public mind with national prestige, even national honor, that open retreat is out of the question for any Japanese government. Much ground remains to be explored at London as to what understandings might be reached if the principle of equality is conceded. At the moment the conversations are stuck at the point of making that concession. For in American and British naval opinion equality of naval strength for Japan means, in truth, a superiority in the Far East which would leave Japan an impregnable command. Only a combination of British and American sea forces could hope to cope with her then.

Ambassador Saito makes clear that while Japan is prepared to hold out to the last for the principle, she may agree to a long period, perhaps of many years, of actual inferiority. Such an agreement could hardly be binding and would not, therefore, satisfy British and American naval opinion. Nevertheless, the choice is between such a nonbinding understanding and no understanding—between salvaging something out of the wreckage of naval limitaiton or another free-for-all naval race.

THERE is only one possible exception to this—and one possible alternative course. The exception would be that Japan can be made to back down at London by threats. The alternative would be war. Whether the threat of actual war, the threat of trade war, and the threat of an Anglo-American alliance in the Pacific would make Japan back down is certainly highly doubtful now. Japan undoubtedly has weighed these possibilities fully, and concluded that the threats, even if made, would not be real.

Her policy at London is to try to keep the British and Americans divided. She is not blind to the traditional policy of the United States which makes alliance improbable, nor to the practical trading advantages which she can offer in dealing with the British. Nor is she unaware of British doubts about reliance upon an "ally" which has always insisted upon being free—upon being a neutral. She knew of the remark of an eminent American delegate at the Washington armament conference that the 5-5-3 ratio can always be added up to make 10 against 3. But she knows that the addition is not likely to take place short of much more provocation than she means to give. Her Manchurian adventure suggested how far provocation might go without incurring more than rebuke and rather general displeasure.

As for a trade war, she has always gambled on the theory that the United States stood to lose too much by a trade war to make that threat very real. And the alternative of actual war is even more remote. The American public at large never warmed to Mr. Stimson's moralistic lecturing of Japan for her Manchurian conquest. Potent groups in Congress even recoiled, on the ground that the only way to impose our morals would be at the point of the bayonet. And public opinion then, as now, remained too little interested in the Orient to go to that extreme.

THE threat of a naval race fails to impress the Japanese. In the first place, they think it as unlikely as war—that only a war purpose would make it possible. Secondly, this and the other threats do not touch the question of prestige. It is the recognition of equality, a matter of deeper pride than the Occidental mind readily grasps, that counts—not the number of ships.

One may trace this pride through the Paris peace conference, where Japan resented being treated as an inferior, to the Washington conference, where she sat as an equal and so agreed to a 5-5-3 ratio in capital ships, to the shocked illusionment that swept over the empire when she was branded as an inferior in the immigration act of 1924, to the London conference, where she still resented, though temporarily acquiesced, in an inferior ratio for auxiliary ships, and finally to the present hour, when she will submit no longer to a treaty-proclaimed inferiority.

The choice now at London is between no agreement and the best agreement that can be made by recognizing Japan as an equal—or by avoiding stamping her any longer as inferior. Primarily, it is a matter of pride rather than of ships.

Waynesboro Names New Police Chief

Waynesboro, Va., Oct. 31 (Spl.).—Roy L. Switzer, 30, for four years a member of the Covington police force, was named chief of waynesboro police by City Manager I. G. Vass and the appointment confirmed by a special session of the council effective November 15. He will succeed S. B. Shumate, a member of the local force for 38 years, who is to be given lighter duties on account of his health, according to present plans.

Switzer, who had also served as a patrolman in Cincinnati for two years and attended police training school there, was selected from 20 applicants from ten Virginia cities. His appointment comes as the result of a resolution adopted by the council two weeks ago ordering the city manager to reorganize the police department. Councilman Walter Ellison cast the only vote against Switzer's appointment, expressing the belief that the present police set-up was adequate.

Cannot Afford Change, Say Traction Officials.

Danville, Va., Oct. 31 (Spl.).—Danville will cling to the old-fashioned trolley car—because the traction and power company can not afford to buy trackless trolleys or a fleet of buses.

The issue was raised between the company's officials and city officials when the latter began planning for the repaving of Main street at a cost of $40,000. The possibility of street car tracks being eliminated led to a conference with C. G. Holland, president of the traction company, who said his company could not afford modernizing the public transportation service.

The company, however, expects to show a better balance sheet at the end of the current year, chiefly due to the textile code which necessitated double shifts in the local mills, hence, more street car passengers.

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 31 (AP).—The National industrial recovery act today was held unconstitutional by Judge W. I. Grubb, in U. S. District Court, who dismissed an indictment against a lumber dealer charging violation of the code of fair competition for the lumber and timber products industry.

The action of Judge Grubb was under an agreement by attorneys representing the Government and the defendant to pave the way for an appeal to the United States Supreme Court to determine the validity of the statute.

Judge Grubb handed down no written decision, but merely sustained the demurrer to the indictment offered by Jerome T. Fuller, attorney of Centerville, which was based on alleged unconstitutionality of the recovery act and the code for the lumber industry.

The demurrer held that the NRA unlawfully delegates legislative and judicial powers to the President, and that it illegally deprived the defendant of his property without due process of law. The defendant also contended the Government had no authority to regulate the production of lumber, since it is purely an intra-State activity.

The indictment in question charged W. E. Belcher, owner of several lumber mills in Alabama, with violating the lumber code by paying less than the prescribed 24 cents an hour minimum wage and working his employes more than the maximum 40-hour week.

Alabama Ruling Facing Test in Supreme Court

(Associated Press.)

A major piece of New Deal legislation moved closer to its ultimate test—Supreme Court consideration—last night as the Justice Department prepared to challenge the ruling of District Judge W. I. Grubb, of Alabama, that the recovery act is unconstitutional.

Assistant Attorney General Harold M. Stephens, director of the legal defense of the NRA, commenting on Judge Grubb's decision, said: "It is highly desirable that we get the Supreme Court's opinion on the recovery act as soon as possible."

"The act expires next June," he added, "and its constitutionality should be decided upon soon in order that Congress can determine whether it should make any changes."

Legal skirmishing over the New Deal already has either moved into or toward the Supreme Court tests embracing the gold payment suspension act, the petroleum code and the railway retirement act.

Decisions on both the gold and oil suits are expected by midwinter.

Court Blocks Knoxville Sale

TVA Buying of Public Service Co. Hits Legal Difficulties.

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 31 (AP).—Closing of the deal for the Tennessee Valley Authority to purchase the Tennessee Public Service Co.'s properties at Knoxville by tomorrow midnight was halted today by a circuit court order.

Knoxville is the first large municipality to bid for the authority's "yardstick" power program.

Today's court ruling, issued by Judge E. F. Langford, prevents completion of the sale of Tennessee Public Service Co.'s properties at and around Knoxville to the TVA pending a review of the State utilities commission's approval of the transaction. Counsel for the authority said it will be impossible to close the deal after tomorrow.

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 31 (AP). Flinging down the gauntlet to critics of the Tennessee Valley Authority's program, David L. Lilienthal, power director of the authority, today told an audience here "it is as useless to buck this economic tide as it is to seek to stop the tides of the sea."

Speaking before the Rotary Club, Lilienthal stated it was generally said "there are two places where opposition to TVA has centered; one is in the financial district of New York, in the so-called Wall street group, and the second is said to be in Birmingham."

Two possible courses of action, one of opposition and one of cooperation, were outlined by the speaker, who warmed to his subject with: "I say in all frankness that whichever course Birmingham chooses, the Tennessee Valley regional program is going ahead. TVA is riding the economic tide of our times."

Wilmer to Speak At Rally Tonight

Joseph A. Wilmer, Republican candidate for Representative from the Fifth Congressional District of Maryland, will be the principal speaker at a Republican rally at 8 o'clock tonight in Branchville (Md.) Volunteer Firemen's Hall.

William A. Duvall, president of the Berwyn District Republican Club and candidate for county commissioner, will open the meeting. Dr. Thomas E. Latimer, Republican State central committee chairman, is expected to preside. Several other State candidates have been invited.

The entire slate of Republican county candidates will attend a turkey dinner at the Branchville M. E. Church South and proceed to the meeting. Democratic candidates also will attend the dinner.

There were 500 entries from all parts of the country in the contest. Presentations took place in the Munitions Building.

A. & P. Officials Fail to Decide To Open Stores

dows were broken by Halloween miscreants.

Representatives of the meat cutters' union, meeting in Cincinnati, announced that its proposed Statewide strike in A. & P. stores would be postponed indefinitely.

Truckers Dispute Ends.

The announcement followed a conference participated in by Leon B. Lamfrom, attorney representing 45 commission houses; I. E. Goldberg, spokesman for the drivers' union, and H. L. McCarthy, director of the Federal Regional Labor Board.

They drafted an agreement providing a wage scale of $27 a week for drivers and $24 a week for helpers, a 48-hour week, and an open shop in which the union will be recognized as a bargaining agent. All strikers are to return to work tomorrow.

Originally the union demanded a wage scale running from $32 to $36. The union yielded on its demands for a closed shop.

Labor Board Sends Agent to Milwaukee

(Associated Press.)

Hopeful that the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co.'s directors would approve a proposal to reopen its Cleveland stores, the Labor Department yesterday ordered M. E. Sherman, a conciliator, to attempt to settle a butchers' strike in Milwaukee, directed at the same company.

Evidencing his continued desire for the industrial truce he proposed in his last fireside radio talk, President Roosevelt at his press conference yesterday said he hoped mediation efforts would be carried to a successful conclusion. He is being kept posted on developments.

Board Ready For Action.

The Labor Relations Board stood ready to take any action it thought necessary to prevent a threatened A. & P., meat cutters strike in Cincinnati. It was said at the board that the Cleveland settlement, if agreed to, might be the basis for halting walkouts in other links of the company's Nation-wide chain.

Representatives of the Cleveland unions involved in the dispute there left for home last night, to lay the peace proposal before their locals. They declined to comment on the board's suggestion that the stores be reopened, that employes discharged last Saturday night be taken back without discrimination, and that future disputes be submitted to arbitration.

G.O.P. Joins War On "Whispering" In Wisconsin Race

Milwaukee, Oct. 31 (AP).—Numerous Republican leaders today joined with Democrats in denouncing an alleged whispering campaign regarding the health of Gov. A. G. Schmedeman, who asks reelection on the Democratic ticket.

The Democrats exhibited two letters. One dated October 16, and signed by R. J. Seifriz, treasurer of the State Republican committee, said concerning the gubernatrial race, "It is reasonable to assume that it will be either Howard Greene, Lieut. Gov. Thomas O'Malley or Phil La Follette." Another, signed by Roy L. Brecke, executive secretary of the committee, under date of October 24, said, "A vote for Schmedeman is a vote for O'Malley."

Miss Frooks Again Challenges Mrs. Roosevelt to Debate Issues

N. Y. Candidate Charges First Lady Has Done 'About Face.'

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was challenged again tonight to debate campaign issues by Dorothy Frooks, Law Preservation Party candidate for Representative at Large, after the First Lady's tentative acceptance of an earlier challenge was overruled by the chairman of the scheduled meeting.

"The veiled attempt to sidestep my challenge to you," Miss Frooks telegraphed Mrs. Roosevelt, "through the instrumentality of the local committee is obvious."

Mrs. Roosevelt had asserted she would debate with Miss Frooks, who criticized the President's wife for entering the New York campaign, at a meeting here tomorrow night if the local committee agreed.

Chairman Files Demurrer.

But there was a demurrer from Mrs. Caspar Whitney, chairman of the dinner rally for Mrs. Caroline O'Day, Democratic opponent of Miss Frooks.

Alleges "About-Face."

"If you don't wish to meet me in debate," the message continued, "why not be perfectly frank? The public should know why you completely about-faced after you definitely assured me that you would take no part in local Democratic politics.

"The President's wife must be as above suspicion as Caesar's wife. I ask you to meet me on the platform and explain your inconsistent attitude."

The telegram asserted Miss Frooks favored immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus, advocated "having our Government issue its own money and prevent the Federal Reserve Bank from using our national credit" and listed other issues on which she is making her campaign.

Roosevelt-Frook Tilt Ended, Former Says

The political tilt between Miss Dorothy Frooks and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, so far as the latter is concerned, is closed, and the two will not debate tomorrow night on a New York platform, according to the Associated Press.

Mrs. Roosevelt last night, said she would not answer a second telegram of challenge received today from Miss Frooks.

"There will be no answer," the President's wife said, "because I put the matter up to the committee, which took it out of my hands."

Their tilt began when Miss Frooks charged the President's wife had unfairly used her prestige in behalf of Mrs. Daniel O'Day, Democratic opponent of Miss Frooks, who is law enforcement candidate for Representative at Large from New York.

Daniel Beecher, deputy district attorney at Los Angeles, said he had sent an investigator to question Miss Hepburn on whether she had been "intimidated." Her studio said she probably would not be available for comment tonight and that she had not yet been informed of the subpena request.

Beecher said studio executives would not be subpenaed but that if Sokol's committee would furnish the names of persons allegedly intimidated, they would be called before the grand jury.

The supreme court decision halted proceedings under which State Attorney General U. S. Webb, a Republican, had sought to restrain 24,136 persons from voting in Los Angeles County on the ground that they had registered illegally. Investigators had reported nearly 100,000 allegedly illegal registrations there and proceedings against additional thousands were in the making when the decision came.

The Home Owners Loan Corporation announced yesterday that $307,000,000 worth of its 4 per cent bonds had been converted into fully guaranteed 3 per cent bonds as of October 26, the Associated Press stated. The original bonds of the corporation were guaranteed by the Government only as to interest.

traveling and then be thrifty with the rest," Mrs. Lenz said.

Syndicate Purchases.

The syndicate bought a total of $300,000 worth of sweepstake tickets. After the race, Freeman figured he had paid twice as much for these tickets as they were worth in the list of winners.

"But the syndicate won't lose any money on the race," he added. "The backing on other horses will more than even it up."

Miss Frances Horwitz, a Brooklyn telegraph operator, was among those who lost—and lost heavily—by selling her ticket to the syndicate.

The horse she drew in the sweepstakes was Commander III. It came in second, paying $75,000.

Sells Her Ticket.

But Miss Horwitz sold her ticket yesterday to the syndicate for $6,000.

The wine flowed tonight in another Brooklyn home — that of Miss Angelina Graffeo. For years, she has worked in a dressmaking shop. She bought a ticket this year and was one of the $75,000 winners on Commander III.

Other $75,000 winners were Mrs. Frieda Schibel, of Ozone Park, Queens, who shares a half-interest with a niece, Miss Minna Weiss, of Marten Lake, N. J., and Julius Hader, a small restaurant owner.

Housewife Wins $50,000.

Buena Park, Calif., Oct. 31 (AP). Mrs. Emma Atherton, 52, paused in the housework in the little dwelling surrounded by a truck garden from which the Atherton family ekes an existence, to discuss the winning of $50,000 on a Cambridge Handicap Sweepstakes ticket.

"Well we need some new shoes, some pillowcases, and sheets," she said, but beyond that she had no plans.

There are five children in the family, and J. A. Atherton, the husband, did not halt his work on the old tractor when the news came today.

Mrs. Atherton explained she never had gambled but this once.

Sweepstakes Tickets Seized.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 31 (AP).—Postoffice authorities today seized more than 500 letters containing $1 tickets on a foreign sweepstake issued from a hotel in Canada in the name of War Charities.

Calling for prizes aggregating $500,000, the tickets, Superintendent of Mails John R. Warren said, were in packets of six addressed to many prominent Memphians, including physicians and church workers. Warren said he did not contemplate further action other than the seizure of the letters.

Anti-Nazi Movement Begun in Baltimore

Baltimore, Oct. 31 (AP).—Karl Wittelsberger, vice president of the Junger Mannechor, a German society, said today he planned to organize an anti-Nazi group with the support of older members of the German colony here. He and some 20 others last night refused to sign a pledge he construed as recognizing the Swastika, the Nazi emblem.

Guilty of Aid To the Hungry, Hopkins Says

(Associated Press.)

The sharp political controversy over the use of Federal relief and emergency funds reached a new high yesterday with a Democratic statement that "hunger is not debatable" and a Republican charge of vote buying directed at the White House.

Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, gave the first answer. He said if feeding the hungry was "playing politics," he would "plead guilty."

The Republican Senatorial-Congressional campaign committee almost simultaneously issued a statement citing what it ermed "two more incidents in the Administration's vote-buying campaign." President Roosevelt's announcement yesterday of a Federal pay raise next July and a statement by the RFC of plans to pay $60,000,000 to depositors in a closed Detroit bank were cited.

Hopkins spoke after his Relief Administration had advanced $598,488 in relief funds to Maine yesterday, close after a Republican charge that the solitary omission of that State, which has voted, indicated political use of the Federal funds. His aids explained Maine had been left out when $135,00,00 was distributed to the other 47 States because Gov. Louis J. Brann's estimates of the State's needs had not been complete.

The relief administrator then issued this statement:

"With the smug complacency which apparently goes with the chairmanship of the National Republican committee, Mr. Fletcher (Henry P. Fletcher) has seen fit to accuse me of playing politics because I am feeding the hungry, clothing the naked and sheltering the destitute, regardless of their sex, age, creed, color, race or place of residence.

"If that be politics, I plead guilty, but decline to enter into argument with Mr. Fletcher. Hunger is not debatable."

The Republican committee said the two new advances of Federal funds had been announced yesterday "with customary New Deal brazenness."

"Today," it added, "the President made a personal announcement that Federal wage cuts would be restored in full eight months hence, but the announcement was timed to gain the utmost effect from the 92,000 employes in the District of Columbia, who may vote by absentee ballot and the 500,000 Federal workers in the States who will be presumed to vote right in return for this benefaction.

"The cost of this gesture averages $70 a head, which is much higher than Tammany quotations in New York, but infinitely less than the amounts expended by the New Deal to corral the farm vote.

"The second episode in today's bid is an advance of $60,000,000 by the RFC to liquidate a closed Detroit bank, whose 600,000 depositors will no doubt be informed by New Deal orators of the gratitude they owe the President.

Chairman Farley of the Democratic National committee also replied to the Republican charges in a speech at Wilmington, Del., tonight, with an assertion that "human suffering is no less in campaign times than in other times."

"It happens that the payments are coincident with the imminence of an election," Farley said, "They are paid as they fall due. They were paid at approximately the same time last year, when there was no election and they will be paid next year, when there is no general election."

Another New Deal spokesman took a different slant at the talk about the disbursement of Federal funds. Secretary Wallace, at his press conference, expressed regret at the use of farm benefit payments as campaign arguments.

"I think it is a bad precedent which was long ago started by the Republican party," said Wallace. "Politicians of whatever party seem unable to rise above the temptation of using Government expenditures as reasons for persuading voters."

As the final week of the campaign waxed warmer, Chairman Byrnes of the Senate Compaign Funds Investigation Committee made public correspondence suggesting a "conspiracy" between Republican candidates in Pennsylvania to conceal expenditures.

Byrnes, a South Carolina Democrat, gave out a letter to Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, in which Byrnes said Donald Russell, committee investigator, had been informed that Pinchot had evidence of such a conspiracy.

It was, Byrnes said, a statement "prepared by two gentlemen, which statement discloses the existence of a conspiracy between Senator Reed and Mr. Schnader to conceal the expenditures" in behalf of Reed.

Reed is running for reelection as a Republican and William S. Schnader is the Republican candidate for Governor. Byrnes called upon Pinchot to furnish his committee with any information he might have on the case.

Politicians on both sides noted with interest announcement by Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, that he would be unable to campaign in Wisconsin for Senator La Follette, who is running for reelection as a Progressive.

Seeks Divorce for Desertion.

Alleging desertion, Augustus Anderson, of Mount Rainier, Md., yesterday filed suit for absolute divorce from Mrs. Helen A. Anderson, of Cherrydale, Va., in Prince Georges County Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro, Md. The couple was married in April, 1932, and have no children.

Exposition Finale Played in Chicago To Packed House

Chicago, Oct. 31 (AP).—To the booming of cannon, the blaring of bands and the shrieking of whistles, a Century of Progress played its grand finale today to a packed house.

Under dismal skies and a chilling rain the last thousands began tramping down the gay and garish avenues. At midnight these "last-nighters" saw the vast flood of light and color forever quenched, then "curtain" forever on this most successful of expositions. On the darkened lake front a curtain of fire dropped, spreading before the Halloween revelers a gigantic screen of fireworks.

The 16 millionth visitor to the 1934 fair entered the gates, to be feted and laden with gifts by the exposition. Like the first visitor of 1933, it was a Chicago woman—Mrs. Helen Reid, 65.

W. A. Harriman Named by NRA

Succeeds George A. Lynch as Administrative Officer.

Appointment of W. Averell Harriman as NRA administrative officer was announced yesterday by the Blue Eagle governing board.

He will succeed Col. George A. Lynch, who will return to his Army post at Governors Island, N. Y., after more than six months at recovery headquarters on leave of absence.

"This is a job for a younger man who doesn't mind working days, nights and Sundays," Lynch observed.

Harriman is board chairman of the Union Pacific Railroad and has had wide experience at NRA, including service on the Industrial Advisory Board and as special assistant administrator.

Rauch Named to Board.

Officials also announced selection of R. S. Rauch, of Philadelphia, a B. F. Goodrich Co., director, as a member of the Industrial Advisory Board.

Decision to have five industrialists devote full time to the advisory board, supplementing those who merely attend meetings, was reached several months ago at a meeting of outstanding business men in Hot Springs, Va. Rauch is the third member chosen for permanent service since adoption of the new policy. The other two full-time members are William P. Witherow, Steel Products Co., president, and R. B. Shepard, St. Paul merchant.

Father Not Thrilled.

As for Sergt. Maj. Remington, he got more "kick" out of winning $20 on the World Series.

"I can appreciate that kind of money," he said. "I guess I'll just put my share away and forget it."

Sergt. Maj. Remington's been in the Marine Corps 24 years. Always he's dreamed of the day when he would retire to live on half pay.

"I'm an old-timer," he said. "Long ago I stopped dreaming of what I would do when I made my first $25,000."

Luckier, perhaps, than Mary Booth or her father, was W. Campbell Armstrong, of 2801 Chesterfield place and the RFC. Mr. Armstrong had a ticket on Caynamas, one of the favorites. He sold a half share in it for a "very good price." The horse failed to run in the money.

Mr. Armstrong said he promised the man who bought half his ticket he would keep the price a secret.

"I am very satisfied," he said, however. "I feel very lucky and now I can do a little work, I hope."

Blue Boy 'Satisfies' Lottery Ticket Holder

Baltimore, Oct. 31 (AP).—Blue Boy ran like most outsiders ran, but Adam Krats is "satisfied" anyway.

Krats, Baltimore milk agent, had a ticket on Blue Boy in the Irish Sweepstakes, which was won by Wychwood Abbott. If Blue Boy had won, Krats would have received $150,000.

As it is, he receives $2,000 and yesterday turned down an offer of $5,600 for the ticket. "I don't know what happened to Blue Boy," Krats said, "but I am satisfied. I have $2,000, which will fix us up for Christmas."

Are your evenings at the bridge table made miserable because you still play the old Dubb One-Two-Three System! bid one . . . should make two . . . go down three? Do you shudder with embarrassed uncertainty when your partner bids two no-trump? Won't your wife speak to you on the way home? Are you haunted for days afterward by the memory of those spades you failed to discard . . . that good ace you trumped? Ah, ha, we suspected as much! You are a sufferer from that dread disease, B. I. (Bridge Inferiority).

But do not despair! You, too, can once again resume your place in Society. You will be in demand almost as much as the Man Who Can Speak to the Waiter in French. Men will respect your opinion . . . and buy your drinks. Women will admire you . . . and ask you to hold their hands. And you don't have to Clip a Coupon to accomplish all this! Just read (and follow) the bridge advice of Ely Culbertson and Frank Lord in The Washington Post.

Bridge (do we need to tell you?) is no longer just a game . . . it's a Social Necessity. And if you respond incorrectly to a doubled three-spade bid you'll never again be invited to Baroness Broadbeam's gilt-and-crystal manse. You won't even be allowed to sit in with the boys in the Back Room down at Joe's Place.

If you want to be welcome everywhere . . . read Culbertson. He'll teach you bridge tricks that even Hoyle never suspected. Culbertson has written more about bridge than Edgar Wallace wrote about Scotland Yard. He has met challenge after challenge without suffering defeat (ask Sidney Lenz!) and recently, he vanquished a British team and demonstrated conclusively that London bridge is falling down. After studying his method for a while, you'll play so well that even your wife will want you for a partner.

Too, Frank Lord, who is probably Washington's best known player, writes a column about this city's bridge circles and tournaments in The Sunday Post. His keen analysis will solve your problems.

Today . . . before you deal another hand or attempt another finesse . . . read Culbertson's advice. Then, tonight . . . amaze the Little Woman by making the correct play for the first time in your life. And after all . . . it's nice to squelch the post-mortemers by telling them what Culbertson thinks about the situation in hand.

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 31 (AP).—The National industrial recovery act today was held unconstitutional by Judge W. I. Grubb, in U. S. District Court, who dismissed an indictment against a lumber dealer charging violation of the code of fair competition for the lumber and timber products industry.

The action of Judge Grubb was under an agreement by attorneys representing the Government and the defendant to pave the way for an appeal to the United States Supreme Court to determine the validity of the statute.

Judge Grubb handed down no written decision, but merely sustained the demurrer to the indictment offered by Jerome T. Fuller, attorney of Centerville, which was based on alleged unconstitutionality of the recovery act and the code for the lumber industry.

The demurrer held that the NRA unlawfully delegates legislative and judicial powers to the President, and that it illegally deprived the defendant of his property without due process of law. The defendant also contended the Government had no authority to regulate the production of lumber, since it is purely an intra-State activity.

The indictment in question charged W. E. Belcher, owner of several lumber mills in Alabama, with violating the lumber code by paying less than the prescribed 24 cents an hour minimum wage and working his employes more than the maximum 40-hour week.

Alabama Ruling Facing Test in Supreme Court

(Associated Press.)

A major piece of New Deal legislation moved closer to its ultimate test—Supreme Court consideration—last night as the Justice Department prepared to challenge the ruling of District Judge W. I. Grubb, of Alabama, that the recovery act is unconstitutional.

Assistant Attorney General Harold M. Stephens, director of the legal defense of the NRA, commenting on Judge Grubb's decision, said: "It is highly desirable that we get the Supreme Court's opinion on the recovery act as soon as possible."

"The act expires next June," he added, "and its constitutionality should be decided upon soon in order that Congress can determine whether it should make any changes."

Legal skirmishing over the New Deal already has either moved into or toward the Supreme Court tests embracing the gold payment suspension act, the petroleum code and the railway retirement act.

Decisions on both the gold and oil suits are expected by midwinter.

Court Blocks Knoxville Sale

TVA Buying of Public Service Co. Hits Legal Difficulties.

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 31 (AP).—Closing of the deal for the Tennessee Valley Authority to purchase the Tennessee Public Service Co.'s properties at Knoxville by tomorrow midnight was halted today by a circuit court order.

Knoxville is the first large municipality to bid for the authority's "yardstick" power program.

Today's court ruling, issued by Judge E. F. Langford, prevents completion of the sale of Tennessee Public Service Co.'s properties at and around Knoxville to the TVA pending a review of the State utilities commission's approval of the transaction. Counsel for the authority said it will be impossible to close the deal after tomorrow.

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 31 (AP). Flinging down the gauntlet to critics of the Tennessee Valley Authority's program, David L. Lilienthal, power director of the authority, today told an audience here "it is as useless to buck this economic tide as it is to seek to stop the tides of the sea."

Speaking before the Rotary Club, Lilienthal stated it was generally said "there are two places where opposition to TVA has centered; one is in the financial district of New York, in the so-called Wall street group, and the second is said to be in Birmingham."

Two possible courses of action, one of opposition and one of cooperation, were outlined by the speaker, who warmed to his subject with: "I say in all frankness that whichever course Birmingham chooses, the Tennessee Valley regional program is going ahead. TVA is riding the economic tide of our times."

Wilmer to Speak At Rally Tonight

Joseph A. Wilmer, Republican candidate for Representative from the Fifth Congressional District of Maryland, will be the principal speaker at a Republican rally at 8 o'clock tonight in Branchville (Md.) Volunteer Firemen's Hall.

William A. Duvall, president of the Berwyn District Republican Club and candidate for county commissioner, will open the meeting. Dr. Thomas E. Latimer, Republican State central committee chairman, is expected to preside. Several other State candidates have been invited.

The entire slate of Republican county candidates will attend a turkey dinner at the Branchville M. E. Church South and proceed to the meeting. Democratic candidates also will attend the dinner.

Winners in Model Plane Contest Get Medals

Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the Air Corps, yesterday decorated two Washington youths with medals for winning first and second places in the National airplane model contest. J. W. Barry won a gold medal and $200 for his reproduction of a Curtiss Sparrowhawk. J. Edward Reeves received a silver medal and $100 for his model. There were 500 entries from all parts of the country in the contest. Presentations took place in the Munitions Building.

Representatives of the meat cutters' union, meeting in Cincinnati, announced that its proposed Statewide strike in A. & P. stores would be postponed indefinitely.

Truckers Dispute Ends.

The announcement followed a conference participated in by Leon B. Lamfrom, attorney representing 45 commission houses; I. E. Goldberg, spokesman for the drivers' union, and H. L. McCarthy, director of the Federal Regional Labor Board.

They drafted an agreement providing a wage scale of $27 a week for drivers and $24 a week for helpers, a 48-hour week, and an open shop in which the union will be recognized as a bargaining agent. All strikers are to return to work tomorrow.

Originally the union demanded a wage scale running from $32 to $36. The union yielded on its demands for a closed shop.

Labor Board Sends Agent to Milwaukee

(Associated Press.)

Hopeful that the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co.'s directors would approve a proposal to reopen its Cleveland stores, the Labor Department yesterday ordered M. E. Sherman, a conciliator, to attempt to settle a butchers' strike in Milwaukee, directed at the same company.

Evidencing his continued desire for the industrial truce he proposed in his last fireside radio talk, President Roosevelt at his press conference yesterday said he hoped mediation efforts would be carried to a successful conclusion. He is being kept posted on developments.

Board Ready For Action.

The Labor Relations Board stood ready to take any action it thought necessary to prevent a threatened A. & P., meat cutters strike in Cincinnati. It was said at the board that the Cleveland settlement, if agreed to, might be the basis for halting walkouts in other links of the company's Nation-wide chain.

Representatives of the Cleveland unions involved in the dispute there left for home last night, to lay the peace proposal before their locals. They declined to comment on the board's suggestion that the stores be reopened, that employes discharged last Saturday night be taken back without discrimination, and that future disputes be submitted to arbitration.

Sweepstakes Tickets Seized.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 31 (AP).—Postoffice authorities today seized more than 500 letters containing $1 tickets on a foreign sweepstake issued from a hotel in Canada in the name of War Charities.

Calling for prizes aggregating $500,000, the tickets, Superintendent of Mails John R. Warren said, were in packets of six addressed to many prominent Memphians, including physicians and church workers. Warren said he did not contemplate further action other than the seizure of the letters.

Anti-Nazi Movement Begun in Baltimore

Baltimore, Oct. 31 (AP).—Karl Wittelsberger, vice president of the Junger Mannechor, a German society, said today he planned to organize an anti-Nazi group with the support of older members of the German colony here. He and some 20 others last night refused to sign a pledge he construed as recognizing the Swastika, the Nazi emblem.

Guilty of Aid To the Hungry, Hopkins Says

(Associated Press.)

The sharp political controversy over the use of Federal relief and emergency funds reached a new high yesterday with a Democratic statement that "hunger is not debatable" and a Republican charge of vote buying directed at the White House.

Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, gave the first answer. He said if feeding the hungry was "playing politics," he would "plead guilty."

The Republican Senatorial-Congressional campaign committee almost simultaneously issued a statement citing what it ermed "two more incidents in the Administration's vote-buying campaign." President Roosevelt's announcement yesterday of a Federal pay raise next July and a statement by the RFC of plans to pay $60,000,000 to depositors in a closed Detroit bank were cited.

Hopkins spoke after his Relief Administration had advanced $598,488 in relief funds to Maine yesterday, close after a Republican charge that the solitary omission of that State, which has voted, indicated political use of the Federal funds. His aids explained Maine had been left out when $135,00,00 was distributed to the other 47 States because Gov. Louis J. Brann's estimates of the State's needs had not been complete.

The relief administrator then issued this statement:

"With the smug complacency which apparently goes with the chairmanship of the National Republican committee, Mr. Fletcher (Henry P. Fletcher) has seen fit to accuse me of playing politics because I am feeding the hungry, clothing the naked and sheltering the destitute, regardless of their sex, age, creed, color, race or place of residence.

"If that be politics, I plead guilty, but decline to enter into argument with Mr. Fletcher. Hunger is not debatable."

The Republican committee said the two new advances of Federal funds had been announced yesterday "with customary New Deal brazenness."

"Today," it added, "the President made a personal announcement that Federal wage cuts would be restored in full eight months hence, but the announcement was timed to gain the utmost effect from the 92,000 employes in the District of Columbia, who may vote by absentee ballot and the 500,000 Federal workers in the States who will be presumed to vote right in return for this benefaction.

"The cost of this gesture averages $70 a head, which is much higher than Tammany quotations in New York, but infinitely less than the amounts expended by the New Deal to corral the farm vote.

"The second episode in today's bid is an advance of $60,000,000 by the RFC to liquidate a closed Detroit bank, whose 600,000 depositors will no doubt be informed by New Deal orators of the gratitude they owe the President.

Chairman Farley of the Democratic National committee also replied to the Republican charges in a speech at Wilmington, Del., tonight, with an assertion that "human suffering is no less in campaign times than in other times."

"It happens that the payments are coincident with the imminence of an election," Farley said, "They are paid as they fall due. They were paid at approximately the same time last year, when there was no election and they will be paid next year, when there is no general election."

Another New Deal spokesman took a different slant at the talk about the disbursement of Federal funds. Secretary Wallace, at his press conference, expressed regret at the use of farm benefit payments as campaign arguments.

"I think it is a bad precedent which was long ago started by the Republican party," said Wallace. "Politicians of whatever party seem unable to rise above the temptation of using Government expenditures as reasons for persuading voters."

As the final week of the campaign waxed warmer, Chairman Byrnes of the Senate Compaign Funds Investigation Committee made public correspondence suggesting a "conspiracy" between Republican candidates in Pennsylvania to conceal expenditures.

Byrnes, a South Carolina Democrat, gave out a letter to Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, in which Byrnes said Donald Russell, committee investigator, had been informed that Pinchot had evidence of such a conspiracy.

It was, Byrnes said, a statement "prepared by two gentlemen, which statement discloses the existence of a conspiracy between Senator Reed and Mr. Schnader to conceal the expenditures" in behalf of Reed.

Reed is running for reelection as a Republican and William S. Schnader is the Republican candidate for Governor. Byrnes called upon Pinchot to furnish his committee with any information he might have on the case.

Politicians on both sides noted with interest announcement by Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, that he would be unable to campaign in Wisconsin for Senator La Follette, who is running for reelection as a Progressive.

Seeks Divorce for Desertion.

Alleging desertion, Augustus Anderson, of Mount Rainier, Md., yesterday filed suit for absolute divorce from Mrs. Helen A. Anderson, of Cherrydale, Va., in Prince Georges County Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro, Md. The couple was married in April, 1932, and have no children.

Exposition Finale Played in Chicago To Packed House

Chicago, Oct. 31 (AP).—To the booming of cannon, the blaring of bands and the shrieking of whistles, a Century of Progress played its grand finale today to a packed house.

Under dismal skies and a chilling rain the last thousands began tramping down the gay and garish avenues. At midnight these "last-nighters" saw the vast flood of light and color forever quenched, then "curtain" forever on this most successful of expositions. On the darkened lake front a curtain of fire dropped, spreading before the Halloween revelers a gigantic screen of fireworks.

The 16 millionth visitor to the 1934 fair entered the gates, to be feted and laden with gifts by the exposition. Like the first visitor of 1933, it was a Chicago woman—Mrs. Helen Reid, 65.

W.A. Harriman Named by NRA

Succeeds George A. Lynch as Administrative Officer.

Appointment of W. Averell Harriman as NRA administrative officer was announced yesterday by the Blue Eagle governing board.

He will succeed Col. George A. Lynch, who will return to his Army post at Governors Island, N. Y., after more than six months at recovery headquarters on leave of absence.

"This is a job for a younger man who doesn't mind working days, nights and Sundays," Lynch observed.

Harriman is board chairman of the Union Pacific Railroad and has had wide experience at NRA, including service on the Industrial Advisory Board and as special assistant administrator.

Rauch Named to Board.

Officials also announced selection of R. S. Rauch, of Philadelphia, a B. F. Goodrich Co., director, as a member of the Industrial Advisory Board.

Decision to have five industrialists devote full time to the advisory board, supplementing those who merely attend meetings, was reached several months ago at a meeting of outstanding business men in Hot Springs, Va. Rauch is the third member chosen for permanent service since adoption of the new policy. The other two full-time members are William P. Witherow, Steel Products Co., president, and R. B. Shepard, St. Paul merchant.

Mary Booth Wins Sweepstake Prize

ents and a $3,000 earned income, will pay $59,428, and a $75,000 ticket would demand tax payment of $18,928.

Father Not Thrilled.

As for Sergt. Maj. Remington, he got more "kick" out of winning $20 on the World Series.

"I can appreciate that kind of money," he said. "I guess I'll just put my share away and forget it."

Sergt. Maj. Remington's been in the Marine Corps 24 years. Always he's dreamed of the day when he would retire to live on half pay.

"I'm an old-timer," he said. "Long ago I stopped dreaming of what I would do when I made my first $25,000."

Luckier, perhaps, than Mary Booth or her father, was W. Campbell Armstrong, of 2801 Chesterfield place and the RFC. Mr. Armstrong had a ticket on Caynamas, one of the favorites. He sold a half share in it for a "very good price." The horse failed to run in the money.

Mr. Armstrong said he promised the man who bought half his ticket he would keep the price a secret.

"I am very satisfied," he said, however. "I feel very lucky and now I can do a little work, I hope."

Blue Boy 'Satisfies' Lottery Ticket Holder

Krats, Baltimore milk agent, had a ticket on Blue Boy in the Irish Sweepstakes, which was won by Wychwood Abbott. If Blue Boy had won, Krats would have received $150,000.

As it is, he receives $2,000 and yesterday turned down an offer of $5,600 for the ticket. "I don't know what happened to Blue Boy," Krats said, "but I am satisfied. I have $2,000, which will fix us up for Christmas."

Are your evenings at the bridge table made miserable because you still play the old Dubb One-Two-Three System! bid one . . . should make two . . . go down three? Do you shudder with embarrassed uncertainty when your partner bids two no-trump? Won't your wife speak to you on the way home? Are you haunted for days afterward by the memory of those spades you failed to discard . . . that good ace you trumped? Ah, ha, we suspected as much! You are a sufferer from that dread disease, B. I. (Bridge Inferiority).

But do not despair! You, too, can once again resume your place in Society. You will be in demand almost as much as the Man Who Can Speak to the Waiter in French. Men will respect your opinion . . . and buy your drinks. Women will admire you . . . and ask you to hold their hands. And you don't have to Clip a Coupon to accomplish all this! Just read (and follow) the bridge advice of Ely Culbertson and Frank Lord in The Washington Post.

Bridge (do we need to tell you?) is no longer just a game . . . it's a Social Necessity. And if you respond incorrectly to a doubled three-spade bid you'll never again be invited to Baroness Broadbeam's gilt-and-crystal manse. You won't even be allowed to sit in with the boys in the Back Room down at Joe's Place.

If you want to be welcome everywhere . . . read Culbertson. He'll teach you bridge tricks that even Hoyle never suspected. Culbertson has written more about bridge than Edgar Wallace wrote about Scotland Yard. He has met challenge after challenge without suffering defeat (ask Sidney Lenz!) and recently, he vanquished a British team and demonstrated conclusively that London bridge is falling down. After studying his method for a while, you'll play so well that even your wife will want you for a partner.

Too, Frank Lord, who is probably Washington's best known player, writes a column about this city's bridge circles and tournaments in The Sunday Post. His keen analysis will solve your problems.

Today . . . before you deal another hand or attempt another finesse . . . read Culbertson's advice. Then, tonight . . . amaze the Little Woman by making the correct play for the first time in your life. And after all . . . it's nice to squelch the post-mortemers by telling them what Culbertson thinks about the situation in hand.

Green House Flower Show Is Previewed

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The preview of the annual chrysanthemum show at the Department of Agriculture greenhouses yesterday morning was a most beautiful sight, even more beautiful than in former years, for numerous varieties have been added to the already remarkable collection, and new colors have been blended to make the showing more brilliant.

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture had invited a group of official and diplomatic ladies to view the show before it was opened to the public, and a pleasant hour was spent viewing the pink, yellows, gold, bronze, orange, red flame and white of the blossoms which ranged in size from single blooms on seven-foot stems, to the pots of tiny sprays which hung from the roof of the greenhouse, and trailing delicately down to other flowers.

Mrs. Roosevelt in Black Crepe.

Mrs. Roosevelt arrived accompanied by Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, of New York, who with Mr. Wilmerding is a guest at the White House. The First Lady wore a black crepe frock with a collar and jabot of bright blue, a soft black hat and a silver fox scarf. Mrs. Wilmerding wore black also, a coat trimmed with Persian lamb and a hat to match.

Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, wife of the Chief Justice, was also an interested observer and wore a black coat trimmed with mink and a rust colored felt hat. Mrs. Henry A. Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, were other guests. Mrs. Swanson was accompanied by Mrs. John H. Russell, wife of Maj. Gen. Russell, Commandant of the Marine Corps. Mrs. Russell wore a smart suit of black with a topcoat of gray and black tweed trimmed with black fur and a smart black hat.

Mrs. Harry Baxter, daughter of the Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern, arrived with Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, who has recently returned from her home in Chicago. Miss Mary Bendolari, who accompanied Mrs. Goodwin to Chicago, has taken the guest house of the Goodwin estate at Lake Forest for the winter, and has joined the ranks of working girls and is designing shoes for one of the large factories.

Yesterday Mrs. Baxter wore a frock of wine-colored wool with a black hat, and Mrs. Goodwin was in a frock of gold crepe with a brown antelope hat, the gold and brown tones being favorites and most becoming to her titian hair.

Many From Diplomatic Set.

Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, made an interested round of the flowers, and stopped for a few moments before leaving to chat with the hostess.

From the Diplomatic Corps there was quite a group of ladies, who were delighted with the great variety of chrysanthemums, particularly the large yellow Japanese chrysanthemum which has been named for Mrs. Roosevelt. The names of the blooms read very much like a few pages of American history, and recall to the observers many friends of former years who have left Washington.

Among the diplomatic ladies were Senora de Calderon, wife of the Ambassador of Spain; Mme. Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland, who was accompanied by Mrs. Harold B. Butler, wife of the Director of the International Labor Office in Geneva, who is visiting in the Capital; Mme. de Bianchi, wife of the Minister of Portugal, who wore a striking costume of brilliant blue velveteen, which stood out among the paler tones of the flowers; Mme. Djalal, wife of the Minister of Persia, wearing a suit of rich beige with a square-crowned hat of brown felt trimmed with bands of deep, coral-colored ribbon, and Princess de Ligne, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of Belgium, who was in brown corduroy.

Others there were Mrs. Wilson Compton, Mrs. Stanley Reed and Mrs. Harry Hopkins.

The Laughlins Back Next Week

Former Envoy to Spain Will Open Home for Winter.

The former United States Ambassador to Spain and Mrs. Irwin B. Laughlin, accompanied by their daughter, Miss Gertrude Laughlin, will return next week and open their home for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Laughlin have given up Fairacres at Hot Springs, Va., which they leased for the summer from Mrs. Benjamin Jones, of Pittsburgh, and are spending a few days at the Homestead Hotel, Hot Springs, Va., with Mrs. Laughlin's sister, Miss Louise Iselin, of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Laughlin's son, Mr. Alexander Laughlin, has returned to school in England.

Yonker - Lloyd Bridal Service Performed Here

The wedding of Miss Madeline Yonker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward George Yonker, to Mr. Fergus Lee Lloyd, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Alderman Lloyd, of Columbus, Miss., took place at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the home of the bride's parents on Thirty-first street.

The drawing rooms were decorated with lace ferns, palms and white chrysanthemums. The aisle to the improvised altar was marked by white satin standards which held baskets of calla lilies.

Mr. Yonker gave his daughter in marriage. She wore a gown of ivory satin and lace made on simple lines. Her veil of tulle, which fell below the waist, was caught into a cap of rare old lace, and she carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Yonker Matron of Honor.

Mrs. Edward Blair Yonker was the matron of honor, and Miss Barbara Wells was the maid of honor. They were gowned alike in stratosphere blue crepe made with coachman's capes and small turn-over collars. The capes and skirts were edged with three ruffles of a darker blue velvet. They carried muffs of the velvet trimmed with rust chrysanthemums.

Mr. Edward Blair Yonker served as best man and the ushers were Mr. George Hamilton McNeil and Mr. Phillip Field Herrick.

Reception Follows Ceremony.

Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception. Mrs. Yonker, mother of the bride, was wearing a gown of fuchsia crystelle velvet and a shoulder corsage of orchids.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd left on their wedding trip. The bride was wearing a smart suit of rust wool trimmed with beaver and brown hat accessories.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Yonker, of Richmond, Va.; Mr. John A. Lloyd, of Raleigh, N. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Lloyd, of West Point, Miss., and Mrs. Robert H. McPherson, of Columbus, Miss.

Canal Zone Chief To Come to Capital

The Governor of the Panama Canal Zone, Col. J. L. Schley, sailed from Balboa, Tuesday, on the Santa Rosa for New York, where he will attend the November meeting of the board of directors of the Panama Railroad.

Later he will come to Washington to attend a hearing at the Bureau of the Budget. He will return to the Canal Zone in December. During his absence Col. Clarence S. Ridley, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., is acting Governor of the Zone.

Buffet Supper Given For Charlotte Brown

Mr. Talton Turner, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Talton Turner, of San Francisco, entertained at a buffet supper Tuesday in honor of Miss Charlotte Brown, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ashby Brown, of Warrenton, Va. Miss Brown is spending the winter with her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Gallagher, at Wardman Park Hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Gallagher will present her to Capital society this season.

Mr. Turner later took his guests to the Halloween ball at the Shoreham Hotel.

Recinos Will Attend Newbery Prize Banquet

The Minister of Guatemala, Senor Dr. Don Adrian Recinos and Mme. Recinos have made reservations for the first Newbery Prize Banquet, which is being sponsored by the Torch Club, of Wilson Teachers College, at the Mayflower Hotel, November 9.

Dr. Recinos' particular interest in the banquet lies in the fact that the winning Newbery book of 1924, "Tales from Silver Lands," by Charles J. Finger, has for its background the "silver lands" of South America.

Debutantes Given Halloween Party

Mrs. Tilghman Entertains for Daughters and Others.

The guests were Miss Betty Angus, Miss Mary Katharine Bentley, Miss Charlotte Brown, Miss Katharine Brown, Miss Mary Winifred Brown, Miss Mary Elizabeth Damon, Miss Marjorie Jane Dampman, Miss Dorothy Howe, Miss Moss Love, Miss Margaret McMullen, Miss Emily Maddox, Miss Betty Marsh, Miss Randolph Richardson, Miss Diane Rowland, Miss Mary Katheryne Spinks, Miss Stellita Stapleton, Miss Louise Waller, Miss Elizabeth Zimmerman, Miss Benedicta Gannon and Miss Polly Cook.

Miss Mabelita Mead To Wed Lewis Feick

Mr. and Mrs. Royal Delamater Mead have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mabelita Carolyn Mead, to Mr. Lewis Wesley Feick, of Washington and New York.

The wedding will take place this month.

Honored at Luncheon

Hessler-Henderson, Inc.

MISS MARY ELIZABETH TILGHMAN, whose mother, Mrs. Charles Tilghman, entertained at luncheon in her honor yesterday at the Mayflower, when the guests were a group of debutantes of the season.

Deb's Diary

Who, What and Where —as She Sees It.

DEAR DIARY:

Walking downtown yesterday morning I passed Stellita Stapleton's home on Massachusetts avenue — and what a happy sign—for after several months of being shut up, once again it has taken on the appearance of being happily inhabited.

Frances and Betsy Simpson are informally buffet-ing again Sunday evening. Three questions arise in my mind—will Jerome Johnson finally break down and sing for us—will murder be played—and last but not least, what color scheme will Billy Bulldog be favoring?

Minister of Rumania Fetes Princess Bibesco

The Minister of Rumania, Mr. Charles A. Davila, entertained at dinner yesterday at the legation in honor of Princess Bibesco, who is spending several days at the Mayflower Hotel before leaving for New York, prior to sailing for her home in Rumania.

Prince George Valentin Bibesco, who spent a few days in Washington several weeks ago, when he attended the Federation Aeronautique Internationale congress, of which he was president, sailed for Europe some time ago.

Dwight Davis Leases The Meredith's Home

The former Secretary of War, Mr. Dwight Davis, has leased the house of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Meredith at 2446 Kalorama road, for the winter. Miss Cynthia Davis and Miss Helen Davis will spend the winter in Washington with their father.

Chevy Chase Women To Give Card Party

The social section of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club will give a card party from 2 to 5 p. m. today. Three homes will be opened for this occasion. Mrs. Arthur C. Nesbit will entertain at her home on Woodbine street. She will be assisted by Mrs. George Lewis, Mrs. George A. Finch, Mrs. Harrison Fitts and Mrs. Ralph Berry.

Mrs. F. F. Espenschied will be hostess at her home on Stuyvesant place. She will be assisted by Mrs. Albert Merz and Mrs. Frederick Hingsburg. Mrs. Eugene McLachlen will open her home on Raymond street for the afternoon. Her assistants will be Mrs. Joseph DeVeau and Mrs. Burr Edwards.

Mode Changes For Blankets And Comforts

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THERE seems to be an epidemic of dressing up bedrooms this season, says a salesman in charge of spreads, blankets and comforts in a downtown store.

Standing in the midst of much newly arrived merchandise he pointed out the new style trends, the vastly different designs, and even several new colors that differentiate this year's stock from last year's.

On one side were some blankets, bought at a special price—selling at one, too. These are tempting any way you look at them. One side is a soft orchid, the other a dull gold, or one side rose, the other blue. They are all wool with satin-bound edges.

There were also comforts on display, stacks of them, in exquisite color combinations. One, a dull cedar color faced with eggshell, is especially attractive. The comforts are celanese taffeta, elaborately quilted.

He displayed a model bed covered with a lovely brown and eggshell spread which brought out the deep mahogany color of the wood. It illustrates, he said, the present trend in bedroom furnishings of playing up the wood tones.

Swagger Hats and Scarfs.

If you don't look like Punch or Judy in the swagger hats and scarfs featured in a local shop, the chances are you'll look too chic for words. They're that way. They either suit you to the proverbial "T" or else——

There are some in soft velvet, which are easily pulled into a becoming shape. Scarfs to match carry out the color scheme while they're keeping your neck warm.

Ideal for campus wear or sporting events are those woolly turbans and scarfs in bright checks and plaids, all colors under the sun. Slightly more conservative are the sets made from a suede-like material, which is said to stand the rain and snow remarkably well.

Something New in Bath Sets.

Those giddy polka-dot packages with the long silk tassels, which you've probably noticed in a certain store, are the newest things in bath sets. All in one package and all for 59 cents you have a dusting powder, bath crystals, and a large velour puff.

There's nothing like the luxury of stepping into a sweetly scented bath, and out into a cloud of fragrant powder. In these sets you have a choice of four scents, jasmine, rose, lilac and carnation.

Flannel Robes.

Striped flannel robes are popular with anyone who likes to come home in the evenings, slip into something warm and comfortable, and spend a leisurely, lazy time. Dutiful wives who arise early on chill mornings to prepare their husbands' breakfasts find a flannel robe a cozy kind of attire. And then there are the daughters away at school. Ask them if a flannel robe isn't an indispensable part of a college wardrobe. Economists are enthusiastically acclaiming those on sale now in a local store for only $3.95.

New Lipstick on Market.

There's a new lipstick said to be equivalent to an all-day tattoo. If you rub some on your lips in the morning it will still be there that night, its sponsors say.

In order to prove their statement they offer you a trial size which costs 10 cents. If you find it all they claim, come back and they will give you 10 cents' credit on a new, large lipstick.

Most women have sought for many years a permanent rouge as assiduously as Diogenes looked for an honest man. If at last they find a truly indelible lipstick, their discovery should mark an epoch in the cosmetic mart.

Nail Polish Sets.

An imported nail polish set, which comes beautifully boxed in blue, once sold for $1.50. That included polish and polish remover. Now the identical set is reduced to 49 cents.

The polish comes in two delightfully soft shades, light and medium. It goes on smoothly and lasts for ages without the usual breaking and peeling off.

Beauty Budget.

A widely known beauty expert is going in for budgets. Almost everyone, she says, regulates expenditures according to some kind of scheme. In order to make it easier for them to buy just the things they need she has a representative in Washington who studies your skin, and prescribes accordingly, placing you on a kind of beauty budget.

With the purchase of one of her budget packages you are entitled to a free facial.

Nut Meat Choppers.

Nut meat choppers play important parts in the home helper's role. They are small bulbous jars to which miniature grinders are attached at the top. The nuts are poured through this and fall after they're ground into the jar. They are ready then for delicious icings, candy, salads and sandwich spreads.

Electrical Buzzer Provides an Educational Game for Young Boys.

By Alice Fox Pitts.

AT THE AGE OF 8, the average boy begins to show an interest in things mechanical and electrical, but his skill is still undeveloped. He can, however, have toys which will pique his interest and pave the way for increased achievement as he grows older.

A game that answers questions by means of an electrical buzzer usually appeals. The questions are printed on a card, "In what country is Quebec?" "What kind of animal is an otter?" and so on. The answers appear on a series of illustrated cards, fitted into a frame, each of which has a hole through it for an electrical contact. The player pokes a metal-tipped wire into various holes, when he touches the card bearing the correct answer, the buzzer buzzes. Educational and exciting! When he has tired of the game as such, he is likely to take it apart and learn a bit about electricity. And his next step probably will be to hook up the buzzer to serve as a doorbell for his room.

Rubber stamps, where each letter is set separately, afford entertainment. One small boy used the stamp he received at Christmas to do away with the necessity for writing individual thank-you letters. "Thanks for the present," he stamped on each sheet of note paper and signed his name. Efficient from his point of view, his labor-saving device proved amusing to fond relatives who received the rubber-stamped thanks. From a stamp of this sort, it is another step to a toy typewriter at the age of 10, and a printing press at 12.

One boy of 3 of my acquaintance, spent a winter working on a puppet show. He enjoyed the carpentry involved in making the stage. He modeled crude puppets, which his mother dressed, and he gave shows for the neighborhood children at a cent a piece for admission.

Finding entertainment for the boy of 8 is largely a matter of using imagination and trying him out on different toys until you discover his particular inclinations.

What Today Means

"Scorpio."

IF NOVEMBER 1 is your birthday the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. until noon, from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m.

A new month starts on this day under some very auspicious conditions, which might justify an optimistic feeling that business as a whole will show a big improvement over preceding months. Your results may depend on the amount of vigilance and energy you use, for both will be required to achieve success. On this November 1 avoid giving expression to any discordant thoughts or pessimistic utterances, for they may react unfavorably and prevent your accomplishing something you have in mind.

It probably will prove good judgment both from a social and business standpoint if you devote some of your time to your friends and relax from the stress and strain of routine duties. Married and engaged couples, as well as those seeking the road that leads to matrimony and who have found one they wish to have as a traveling companion, will avoid trouble if they do not try to be evasive if asked a direct question regarding some personal action.

If a woman and November 1 is your birthday, you are not only practical but also capable of planning in such a way that your efforts will bear fruit. You have the gifts of being able to carry out orders without resorting to numerous questions or arguments. You should prove invaluable to an employer in a seceretarial capacity, or as manager in a department of either an office or store. If nature has blessed you with a voice, you should have it cultivated, for as a singer or actress you might gain recognition. A matrimonial career need not interfere with a business or professional one, providing your husband offers no objections.

If a man and November 1 is your natal day, you should have the ability to direct the actions of others. Sooner or later this ought to be recognized and rapid advancement should follow. Military life, engineering, the pulpit and journalism offer opportunities which should not be ignored. Married life is likely to prove more than satisfactory.

Women Will View Shoals Development

Two Vote League Leaders Off for South Today.

Two leaders in the National League of Women Voters, Miss Belle Sherwin and Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, will leave today for a ten-day motor trip in the South, which will include an inspection of the Tennessee Valley Authority project. Their itinerary calls for an inspection of developments at Norris, Wheeler and Wilson Dams.

Their trip, which is a personal undertaking, is the outgrowth of their specialized interest in Muscle Shoals' development since 1921, when the League of Women Voters first indorsed the principle of Government operation of Muscle Shoals. This is the first Muscle Shoals trip for Miss Sherwin, who was president of the league for ten years, but Mrs. Baldwin is making her second inspection. Mrs. Baldwin, who as chairman of the league's living costs committee, directed the league's study and support of the Muscle Shoals question, made her previous trip in 1927.

(Pattern No. 634.)

The dress is one-piece. Those easily made and graceful puffed sleeves are joined to drop-shoulder armholes. The skirt is simple and slender from the waist to just above the knees. Low flares, provided by circular insets, give a graceful rippling hemline.

They Have Caught Billie Possum.

There is a great deal of difference in the size and taste of persimmons, just as there is with apples or potatoes or watermelons. Some persimmons are big and soft and juicy, while others are knotty little things, and are as dry as chips.

Down in Mr. Man's field where he had his crop of peanuts, there was a great big tree that bore nice, juicy persimmons that were as big as small apples, and Billie Possum said that he didn't know any others that were as good. So one night when there wasn't anything specially to do at Blackie's house or anywhere else, Billie thought that he would go over to that tree and get a good supper. He came up to the field from the side next to the creek, and when he got to the fence he stopped and listened for any noise, but he didn't hear any, and so he climbed over and went to the tree. Then he stopped and listened again, but he didn't hear a soul, and so he climbed away up 'most to the top of the tree, where the biggest persimmons grew, and went to work to get his supper.

You know that lots of dogs that live in the country learn to like persimmons almost as well as possums do, and it was that way with Rover Dog. He had been to this same tree many a time and eaten the persimmons that had fallen on the ground; and now it so happened that he and Billie Possum had both gotten hungry for these good persimmons at the same time. Billie hadn't eaten a dozen persimmons before he heard somebody trotting along the path from Mr. Man's house and coming right toward his tree. When he swallowed that big persimmon, and turned to see who was coming, he nearly fell out of the tree, but it was lucky that he didn't, for here came Rover Dog loping along, and he wasn't any distance from the tree! Too late to climb down and run away, for now Rover was right under the tree, and what was worse, in a few seconds more he was telling the world that he had treed a possum, for he had smelled Billie's tracks.

Yes, he certainly did do some howling, and it didn't take long for him to bring Mr. Man down to see what was the matter. And he soon saw what the noise was all about, for the leaves had all fallen from the tree, and the moon was shining too, and there was Billie just as plain as day! Nobody was with Mr. Man, but he always talked to his dog just as he would to a man, and he said: "Well, I certainly am not going to cut this tree down, so I will just climb up and bring that fellow down alive, and I will fatten him up till Thanksgiving, and then mix him with our turkey and other things for dinner."

So Mr. Man climbed up the tree and caught Billie by the back of his neck and brought him down. He almost had to beat Rover Dog to keep him from grabbing and biting Billie; but at last he got him to the house, and he put him in a chicken coop out near the crib, and he piled logs of wood on and around the coop, and fixed it so there was no way in the world for Billie to get out. Then he went to the house and told Mrs. Man that there was one possum that wouldn't ever bother their chickens any more.

How to Keep Well

Sinus Disease.

FOR a clear understanding of what is meant by sinus disease, we must recall that there are many spaces in the human head that are lined with mucous membrane. These areas drain, or should drain, into the nose. The individual with prominent cheek bones may not be aware that the bones inclose rather large hollow spaces, known as the maxillary sinuses.

The bony protuberances above the eyes are usually not signs of great brain development, but are the outer walls of spaces in the frontal bone of the skull. They are known as the frontal sinuses.

Directly back of the upper portion of the nose are the ethnoid and sphenoid sinuses, lying in fairly close proximity to the brain itself.

We are all familiar with the discharges that pour out from the sinuses during an acute cold. At first watery and thin, due to congestion of the mucous membrane and the dilatation of blood vessels, the discharge, in the presence of profuse bacterial growth, becomes more and more pus-like and thick.

The drainage canals from the sinuses into the nose are easily stopped up, and infection may be dammed within the sinus spaces with the formation of abscesses. In some few cases such abscesses may destroy the thin bony walls and infect important adjacent structures or even the brain itself.

If an infection in one or more sinus cavities drains freely, and if the blood of the body is in such a condition that it can assist in overcoming the bacterial invasion, the acute process usually subsides within a few days. If, on the other hand, pus forms and drainage is stopped, the infection may remain for weeks, months or even years. We then have the condition known as chronic sinus disease.

Within the last few years much light has been shed upon the manner in which sinuses become infected. It has been shown that the lining membrane is exceedingly sensitive to cold, exposure and reduced body resistance. The individual may have fairly well mastered a sinus infection only to have it blaze anew because of prolonged exposure or any indiscretion leading to lowered body resistance. The lack of humidity, to which we are all subject in the wintertime, because of breathing overheated and insufficiently moistened air, dries out the respiratory membranes and increases the likelihood of bacterial infection.

Book Explains Art of Cooking In All Phases

New Edition of Boston School Recipes Is Published.

By Dorothea Duncan.

SINCE 1896 "The Boston Cooking School Cook Book" has been a first aid to housewives. It has given to women throughout the country the famous old recipes for which Boston has been famous since the time of Priscilla and the Pilgrims. Boston baked beans and brown bread, Boston cream pie and gingerbread have become National dishes because Fannie Merritt Farmer's cook book has supplied recipes for everyone.

Now we have a new edition of "The Boston Cooking School Cook Book," which combines all phases of the art of cooking and menu planning in a simple and understandable form. All the good old favorite American dishes, plus delicious recipes of foreign origin have been included.

The book will appeal to the beginner as well as the expert cook. Each of the 3,059 recipes included has been carefully tested and indexed so that it can be quickly found. The recipes and the 121 menus have been chosen to suit all tastes, and the limited or extensive budget. The book is modern in every detail.

Its greatest feature is that it is practical. The first few chapters are given to the explanation of food values, cooking terms and methods. Simplified, time-saving methods of cooking, charts telling how to measure accurately, and time and temperature schedules for cooking are just a few of its valuable, helpful features.

Baked beans are probably Boston's most famous dish, and the following recipe is given:

Boston Baked Beans.

1 quart pea beans
¾ pound salt pork
1 tablespoon salt
1 tablespoon to 1 cup molasses, according to taste
½ teaspoon mustard, if desired
3 tablespoons sugar
Boiling water

Pick over beans, cover with cold water and soak overnight. Drain, cover with fresh water, heat slowly (keeping water below boiling point) and cook until skins burst—which is determined by taking a few beans on the tip of a spoon and blowing on them, when skins will burst if sufficiently cooked. Drain beans. Scald pork and scrape. Remove one-fourth-inch slice, and put in bottom of bean pot. Cut through remaining pork every half inch, making cuts one inch deep. Put beans in pot and bury pork in beans, leaving rind exposed. Mix salt, molasses and sugar, add 1 cup boiling water and pour over beans; then add enough more water to cover beans.

Cover bean pot and bake 6 to 8 hours in slow oven (250 degrees F.), uncovering the last hour of cooking, so that rind may become brown and crisp. Add water as needed. If pork mixed with lean is preferred, use less salt.

Washington Terrapin.

1 terrapin
1½ tablespoons butter
1½ tablespoons flour
1 cup cream
½ cup chopped mushrooms salt
few grains cayenne
2 eggs, slightly beaten.

Melt butter, add flour and pour on the cream slowly. Add terrapin meat with bones cut in pieces, entrails cut smaller, liver separated in pieces, eggs of terrapin and mushrooms. Season with salt and cayenne. Just before serving add eggs.

Foreign recipes have a place in the book, too. Scotch shortbread has become just about as popular in this country as it is in Scotland, and here is the recipe as Fannie Merritt Farmer's cook book gives it:

Scotch Shortbreads.

1 cup butter
½ cup confectioner's sugar
2 cups bread flour
¼ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt

Wash butter, add sugar gradually, and flour sifted with baking powder and salt. Roll, shape and decorate. Bake 20 to 25 minutes in moderate oven (350 degrees F.), or until delicately brown.

JENNIFER HALE

By Rob Eden

Sought for the murder of David Corey, Jennifer Hale escapes to Seattle under the name of Mary Dixon, but is apprehended, and on being arrested is taken back to Los Angeles. While in Seattle, she has met Kent Severn, who falls in love with her; he believes her innocent and determines to spend his last cent defending her. For this decision, his father disinherits him.

THE train climbed through the green virgin forests of Oregon, and crossed bubbling streams that tumbled down from mountains. Its wheels hummed over bridges and roared through gorges. Through the open window of the engine cab came the tangy scent of fir and pine. But the engineer was used to that. He had been riding 96 for 20 years and the smell of fir and pine no longer interested him, if it ever had. What did interest him was that this train he was guiding carried a murderess.

"No, she can't!" Sally was the daughter of the pilot of 96, and Sally had never done anything wrong in her life. Sally was his pride. That she should be compared to Jennifer Hale even in looks was odious. His hand trembled on the throttle.

In the observation car a large middleaged woman with a florid face tackled the conductor. "Is it true, conductor, that this train is carrying Jennifer Hale?" The shocked accents of her voice amused the conductor, but his face was imperturable as he answered in the affirmative.

Passengers Are Curious.

"But, conductor——" her face grew even more crimson.

"It's perfectly safe, don't worry." The conductor had served murderers and murderesses before. They had to travel, didn't they? Always pretty good passengers at that, quieter than most, quieter than convention passengers.

"Are you sure she's guarded?" Two other women were leaning over listening intently to every reply of the conductor.

"Doesn't seem enough. She hasn't a gun?"

"No, madam. She's been thoroughly searched."

"Could we see her, do you suppose?" The woman's eyes gleamed. The trip promised to be interesting.

The conductor shook his head. He was getting tired of telling passengers they couldn't see Jennifer Hale. Most of them had asked if they could. Even his oldest charge, a man of 93, who had come aboard in a wheel chair, wanted to see Jennifer Hale.

Must Eat Something.

In drawing room A, car 10, Jennifer Hale sat on the green velour seat looking out the window. Sometimes she saw the trees, and sometimes the trees were a green blur that faded into the blue blur that was the sky.

She wasn't alone—she hadn't been alone since she had been arrested. Across from her was Mrs. Seeger, the chief matron of the King County Jail.

At the request of the Los Angeles detectives, Mrs. Seeger was accompanying the prisoner south, glad of the chance for a vacation. She enjoyed these breaks in her regular routine, and Jennifer Hale was a good prisoner. No trouble yet, although she was watching her every minute.

"I'll order a cup of tea for you," she said kindly. "You must have something to eat."

Jennifer thanked her. She wasn't hungry — she wasn't — — Sometimes she felt as if she were suspended in space, neither seeing nor breathing, nor living. That her life had stopped abruptly, and that she was dead and yet not dead. Living-dead, if there was such a thing. At times, when the two detectives were questioning her, the immensity of the charge she had to face came rushing to her—but when she was alone with Mrs. Seeger, she was just living-dead.

The tea came and the porter, Bill, took his time arranging the table between the two seats and putting the tray on it. As he performed his tasks his eyes seldom left the girl's face, and when reluctantly the tea was poured and he could find nothing more to do, he still lingered. Finally Mrs. Seeger dismissed him sharply.

"If only people wouldn't look at me so—" Jennifer murmured, taking a sip of the hot tea to please the matron. The crowds in Seattle, at the jail, at the railroad station. The conductor of the train. The waiters.

Missed the Motion.

"You'll have to get used to it," Mrs. Seeger assured her. She liked Jennifer, but then she liked most of her prisoners. She could usually find something about them all that was pleasant.

The girl bit her lips. Get used to having people leer at you? Stare at you? Get used to women screaming "Murderess!" Already she was dreading the time when the train would pull into Los Angeles. The crowds there—more reporters.

The train stopped for a few minutes, and Jennifer missed the singing wheels and the motion that seemed to dull her brain.

Mrs. Seeger hastily pulled down swelling until the wheels started to move again and she started to breathe.

Every place they stopped it was like that. And this was only the second day. . . .

Word From Kent.

A knock came from the door of the adjoining compartment which Detectives Linden and Tracy occupied. Mrs. Seeger unlocked the door, and the two men strolled in. Linden was carrying an opened telegram in his hand.

"Tea? Well, now, you should have invited us in." Then he laughed as if his joke were a good one. "Telegram for you, Jennifer."

She reached for the torn envelope and the message slipped into her lap. One word, "Love," and the signature, "Kent." The message was sent from Roseburg.

"Boy friend isn't forgetting you anyway. That's the second you've had," Tracy said, taking a seat on the couch. The first had been from Portland. "You can go and get some air, Mrs. Seeger. We want to talk to Jennifer for a while."

Jennifer paled as Mrs. Seeger left. She knew what was coming for Tracy and Linden had been in the drawing room often since the trip began.

"Now, Jennifer, you know you killed David Corey. What are you trying to lie to us for?" Linden began. As soon as he tired, Tracy would continue. Sometimes they stayed in the drawing room half an hour, sometimes as long as three hours.

Proclaims Innocence.

"I didn't kill him," Jennifer repeated as if by rote. "I didn't kill him." Her lips were so used to the words by now. She had said them over thousands and thousands of times since she had been arrested. As she leaned her head back on the cushions, she thought how much easier it would be if she could only answer what they wanted her to answer.

At 6 o'clock—the ordeal wasn't so long this time—when the two men were going into the diner and Mrs. Seeger was back with her charge, Linden turned to Tracy, "We'll get a confession yet before we get to L. A. She's weakening. I can see it." Tracy agreed with him.

At 11 o'clock that night, Jennifer moved uneasily in the lower berth. Her right hand was handcuffed to the springs, and Mrs. Seeger was asleep on the couch. She felt that Kent was very near. He was. His roadster was waiting for the long train to glide past. Beside his car was another, a small coupe, but in the darkness Kent wasn't paying any attention to it.

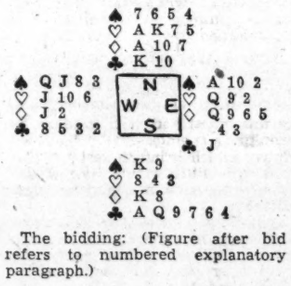
Forsaking Overtricks.

"And you call yourself a good player!" said a voluble onlooker after watching the South player on the hand below make exactly three no-trump. "Five-odd is an absolute laydown, and you brilliantly managed to find the play to make two under par."

South did not bother to answer, quite properly feeling that the kibitzer was beyond help. The line of play which South adopted on the hand, which admittedly made him lose two tricks that he would not ordinarily have lost, is one that would be chosen by any half-way sane player. The primary consideration should always be the fulfillment of the contract; overtricks should be disregarded if their development risks loss of contract.

North, Dealer
East and West vulnerable



The bidding: (Figure after bid refers to numbered explanatory paragraph.)

North	East	South	West
1♡	Pass	2NT(1)	Pass
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—South, of course, should have responded with two clubs, and North would then probably have been the eventual Declarer at three notrump. However, South was one of those players bitten with the notrump complex.

Wests opening lead was the spade three, which East won with the Ace, returning the Ten. South perforce won the trick with the King. Counting his tricks he saw that he had one sure spade trick, two diamond tricks, two heart tricks and three club tricks—only eight would insure the fulfillment of the contract, and the best hope of obtaining it lay in the club suit. South realized immediately that if the club suit broke 3-2 or even if the club Jack dropped on the first round, six club tricks would be certain. However, if the club suit did not break and the West player held four to the Jack, he would eventually be able to get one trick, and if the opening lead was away from five spades, three more spade tricks would be taken and the contract defeated.

South decided to make a sure thing safety play. At trick 3 he led a low club from his hand and finessed the Ten in Dummy. This play by South guaranteed the fulfillment of the contract of three no-trump against any possible division. If the club Ten in Dummy won the trick, four club tricks would now be guaranteed and probably six. If the club Ten lost to the club Jack and the East player had a spade to return, West could naturally have only two left and three-odd would again be assured since South's clubs would now be solid. If the West player held five spades originally, East of course, after winning with the club Jack, would have no way of putting his partner in. All in all, South's play was fool-proof. It guaranteed the fulfillment of a game, no matter how the cards were divided, and furthermore would only sacrifice overtricks less than one-half of the time.

Actually in this particular instance South's play was a losing one. East won with the Jack but had a spade left to return, and the defense was thus able to take four tricks. However, the play did assure South of game against any distribution.

Novel Fashions In Bridal Gowns Are Introduced

NEW YORK, Oct. 31 (AP).—Orange blossoms and lace still come first to the mind of the young woman who is planning her bridal gown, but this season these accessories may appear in unexpected places.

One recent bride made a youthful picture as she walked to the altar because of the ingenious way the flowers and the lace were introduced. Her headdress was a Juliet cap of fine old point lace, to the back of which a tulle veil was attached. She wore the wreath of orange blossoms around the high neck of her ivory satin gown.

Another fashionable bride of the early fall chose a cloth of silver gown, veiled in white tulle. The full skirt ended in a voluminous train. A fitted bodice and short, puffed sleeves gave a period note to the dress.

The bride's attendants were dressed in a style resembling that of the bride. The gowns were of turquoise tulle over cloth of silver, made with short, puffed sleeves and train. Instead of hats they wore gardenia wreaths, to which were attached short tulle veils.

There are any number of period gowns which make picturesque wedding attire. Extremely popular are the Dante-esque or monastery gowns with cowl necklines and the waistline defined with a heavy silken rope, knotted at the side or front.

Embattled Mrs. Bass Wages Unceasing War on Narcotics

By Elizabeth Young.

IF SHE HADN'T married George Bass, whose profession was law, whose avocation was politics, whose home was Chicago, whose age was much more than hers, whose intellect was matured, and whose mental companionship was both stimulating and sympathetic, life might never have been the progressively enthralling experience it has been for Elizabeth Merrill Bass.

And then again, it might. For genius is skyborn and will arise. And Elizabeth Merrill Bass—or Mrs. George Bass, as she prefers to be known—has a genius for living on the battle front of life.

Her Presidential appointment a year ago as first and only woman supervisor of a district division of the Federal Narcotic Bureau—and District No. 9 at that, second in importance in the Nation—was simply another milestone in a spirited career as woman pioneer in national enterprises.

There is a terse four-letter word for describing the physical and intellectual hardihood of Mrs. Bass, and it is this quality—sometimes euphoniously phrased "intestinal investiture"—which for years has induced men, with paradoxical confidence and reluctance, to include her in their political and governmental counsel.

She's White-Haired Today.

She's white-haired today, but her hair is worn in an impudent bob, curling in saucy Anita Loos fashion about her face. She's voguish and feminine in her dress and wears a gardenia, but there's a challenging quality in her low, deliberate, almost guttural voice. She looks at life through a woman's eyes, but reacts to what she sees with masculine objectiveness.

She looked, as one of Chicago's acknowledged civic leaders, at the solidly Republican Middle West just after Illinois had conceded the right of franchise to women, and avowed herself a Democrat. Why?

"Because I believed the Democratic party was the only home at that time of liberal thought and expression; because, in my opinion, the Republican party has always muffed every chance it ever had to take women into full political partnership, and because I believed, under the party system, that was the only way of making my brand-new ballot an effective weapon," Mrs. Bass, who is here from Chicago on official business, explained blandly, an I-dare-you-to-quote-me expression dancing mischievously in her canny blue eyes, when interviewed yesterday at her room in the Mayflower Hotel.

Campaigned for Wilson.

This bold stroke, coupled with her genius for leadership and organization among women, already demonstrated through her work as president of the Chicago Woman's Club, railroaded her into an unprecedented position—for a woman—in the Democratic campaign to reelect Woodrow Wilson in 1916. She was asked to be chairman of women's campaigning in the 12 States of the Union where woman suffrage prevailed. Eleven of these 12 States, "meaning the woman's vote," says Mrs. Bass, went Democratic.

"Wilson always believed, and it was true, that the women of the country reelected him," said Mrs. Bass. "Women believed in Wilson and believed in his ideals on peace and war."

Then Mrs. Bass was asked to serve on the Democratic National committee, the first woman to serve on the governing body of one of the great political parties. When America entered the war in 1917 she was asked to serve on the Woman's Liberty Loan committee for the duration of the war. Was it coincidence that this committee promoted the sale of over 40 per cent of all Liberty bonds sold, despite the fact the men's committee preempted the right to solicit big business?

Underwood & Underwood.

Headed Convention Session.

After the war, when the nineteenth amendment gave National suffrage to women, Mrs. Bass, still National chairman of the Democratic women's organization, was called upon to preside at a session of the National Democratic convention in San Francisco in June, 1920—the first woman so honored.

By this gesture, with Mrs. Bass as the symbol, the Democratic party took women into full political partnership with men.

"Until that moment we had been on sufferance," she said.

Nothing in the political scene has afforded Mrs. Bass more amusement than the consistently contradictory attitude of Western and Southern men toward enfranchisement of women.

"With the whole South dead against it to a man; with the West all for it, wasn't Mrs. Fenton, from Georgia, the first woman to sit in the United States Senate, once woman got the vote? Wasn't it Texas that elected Mrs. Ferguson governor twice? Isn't Hattie Caraway, quiet little homebody from Arkansas, the only woman sitting in the Senate today?

"It's just the Southern gentleman's lovely, sweet, gallant, chivalrous way of treating women. 'Does mama want to be a Senator?' he asks. 'Well, so she shall.' But out West, the woman in politics has to fight for everything she gets, and she gets very little. Look at Ruth McCormick Simms when she ran against Lewis. She was licked. Simply licked."

"Never Out of Politics."

Although she withdrew from active participation in politics during the protracted illness of her husband, which resulted in his death in 1930, Mrs. Bass, as she says, has "never been entirely out of politics."

It was her quiet, confident and effective work as Chicago woman's leader in the "F. D. R. B. C." (Franklin D. Roosevelt before-the-convention) movement which again turned Democratic party leaders' eyes in her direction when the Roosevelt regime needed an able supervisor for the Federal Narcotic Bureau's Ninth District.

With Chicago in this geographical division, which embraces Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, that district ranks second to New York in strategic importance in enforcing Federal laws restricting importation and distribution of narcotic drugs.

Physical courage, intellectual vigor and honesty, moral integrity, warm sympathy and human understanding were items required of its supervisor, who deals inevitably with criminals and derelicts. The appointment went to Mrs. Bass.

Gives Drug Problem Solution.

What she knew of the history, immemorial and contemporaneous, of this oldest and most insidious of mankind's enemies—"* * * the sleep flower which bringeth rest * * *"—was very little at the time of accepting the appointment, Mrs. Bass confesses.

What she knows now, one short year later, is another story, and too long to tell here. The jottings of a reporter who uses some shorthand filled 16 pages of man-sized manuscript.

Her relentless intellectual invasion of the nether-world of narcotic drug addiction has convinced Mrs. Bass that competitive greed of great nations for export income—from raw material and manufactured product—is unquestionably responsible for the world-wide evil.

"Unchecked, it could destroy civilization in a generation. The underworld, almost to a man, is both addict, and, in a small way, peddler . . . to earn enough to satisfy his craving. The addict is a liar, a thief and a very potential murderer. There is a true saying 'Every addict makes another addict.'"

The cure? International covenant rigidly limiting production of the poppy to a quantity sufficient only for the world's medicinal and scientific needs. The United States has been leading advocate and champion of this amazingly simple—and, according to Mrs. Bass, only—solution for two decades.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH:

As a grandparent, I have been interested in your recent discussion of the unwanted parent. Hickok says: "No man can be either a good citizen or a good Christian who neglects the helplessness and dependence of an aged parent." It is the measure of the civilization of a society.

* * * *

What is a neglected parent to do? A woman accustomed to the home may adapt herself to a changed condition more readily than a man whose only refuge is a club where he is lonely and neglected. It is not good for an old person to live alone and the prospect of an asylum is not inviting.

It is better that the old should render service in some cooperative way and be able to feel they are not merely encumbrances and derelicts. They have earned support by a lifetime of service.

* * * *

An association of elderly people to be mutually helpful seems desirable. I do not mean merely playing cards, but a company animated by an informal purpose, to find means of alleviating the sorrows of age and becoming a social influence. They could cheer each other and promote acquaintanceship. Will not some philanthropic person start such a club? Thanking you for your most helpful and stimulating column, yours,

SEPTUAGENARIAN.

Project for Philanthropist.

DEAR SEPTUAGENERIAN: I am hoping that, out of this continuing discussion of the social problem presented by the elderly, economically dependent person, some program may be developed locally for bringing happiness and a conviction of usefulness into their lives.

* * * *

No other group of persons are in a better poistion to become, as you say, a social influence for the better. It is a project to which some philanthropic person might well give serious consideration. M. H.

Here's Helping Hand.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: An other interested reader approaches, fully aware of the truth expressed by Abe Martin: "Somehow, a rich grandmother is never in the way." It is our desire to assist those who are hungry for indenpendence and possess earning ability. There are daily applicants to this address for housekeepers, and mothers helpers, which requests we have been turning over to the bureaucratic agencies. We shall be glad to help the deserving. You may publish this letter, but please reserve the address and telephone number. With all sympathy for unwanted mothers, I am, C. S. W.

DEAR C. S. W.: I shall be glad to give your address and telephone number to any persons who may wish to avail themselves of your neighborly and humanitarian proffer of assistance in helping them to find economic independence.

Does Clapping Spoil Hands?

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: At some concerts the audience applauds by clapping of hands very forcibly and prolonged. I enjoy the music and would like to express my appreciation of it, but I am informed hand-clapping enlarges the hands. Do you think it does? OLGA.

* * * *

DEAR OLGA: To tell you the truth, I had never until this minute reflected upon the possibility of hand-clapping enlarging one's hands. I should think it would never enlarge them to any perceptible degree. The next time you attend a concert, why not make a survey of the nosiest hand-clappers, as well as those who refrain from such demonstration, and see whose hands are largest? M. H.

Lansburgh Style Parades Today Most Elaborate in Shop's History

Glittering Evening Clothes Will Predominate, With Smart Tunics Also on View.

AN AIR OF excitement is speeding up the already lively tempo at Lansburgh & Brother department store today. The reason is the store will present the most ambitious fashion show in its history this afternoon.

For the last few days buyers and stylists have been on a mannequin hunt. They sleuthed through every department in the big establishment, eyeing young sales women with as close scrutiny as the late Ziegfeld bestowed upon a prospective chorus. They chose a blonde from "notions," a red-head from "lingerie," a brunette from "glassware," and so on down the list until a comely flock had been corralled.

Then came the fittings, the building of the stage and runway, the dress rehearsal. Now everything is ready for the two parades to be given this afternoon. At 3 o'clock the first mannequin will slither across the stage to the lilt of a dance orchestra's music. Although between 60 and 65 costumes are to be exhibited, the running time of the show will be only an hour or even less. Second performance will begin at 4:45.

Evening Clothes to Dominate.

Evening clothes, in all their glittering splendor, will dominate the parade. Many smart daytime models, especially tunic dresses, also will be shown. Accompanying hats, gloves and coats will add to their interest.

Most expensive gown to be exhibited is a green and silver lame formal ensemble, a copy of a Lanvin original. The price is $110. A square neckline is achieved by the draped bodice, which has something of the classic in its appearance. The fairly low decollete can be made decorous with a matching swagger coat. Swagger and lame may sound like an incongruous combination, but Lanvin knew what she was about when she devised it. The green and gold ensemble is something to accelerate feminine pulses. Masculine ones, too, for that matter.

Most inexpensive evening gown in the fashion parade is a demure black taffeta with turquoise taffeta pleatings arranged in a stand-up frill around the drop-shoulder line. An antique-looking turquoise pin, about the size of a pear and framed in dull gold, is set in the center of the bodice at the base of the neckline. Turquoise taffeta also lines the full skirt. The price of all this is $16.95.

The coat illustrated at the right is one of eight daytime wraps to be shown. Made of a heavy, ribbed woolen in the new Shawnee brown, it has deep cuffs and collar of beaver. Shawnee can best be described as a shade between rust and rum brown.

Every Woman Can Have Fine And Soft Skin

Balanced, Sensible Diet, Exercise and Cold Water Required.

By Frances Mangum.

Frequently one hears women with "leathery faces" lament that "it's in the family and there's nothing I can do about it." To blame the fates or heredity for anything of this sort is simply one easy way of putting off a cure. Coarse skin can be remedied with consistent endeavor.

Most children are born with pores so fine they are invisible to the naked eye. Then along comes that adolescent period when the skin coarsens and unless it's given the proper care the pores become abnormally large. When this happens it is a matter of major importance to keep the face thoroughly cleansed to avoid the sifting of dirt into these open pores and the resulting blackheads. Children even at the age of 12 should be taught to wash their faces thoroughly several times a day and to use a good cleansing cream every night.

Every effort should be made to purge the skin of any extraneous matter likely to become imbedded. If this is carefully attended to the skin will regain its normal texture.

But there are hundreds of women who were not taught this skin care at an early age and who have large pores and coarse complexions as a result. Before they can effect a cure they must look into the causes. They will find that impaired digestion, poor circulation and heavy, improper foods, are reasons. Added to these, of course, are the ravages of sun and wind. In the face of so many reasons it would seem doubtful that any women could have soft, fine skin except for the fact that so many do.

There are three magic ways of refining the skin. First of all is a balanced, sensible diet. That simply means fewer rich desserts, and less oily, greasy foods and fried meats. Next comes exercise. It is highly essential to exercise the skin to keep up circulation. Patting in creams is one means, and applying stimulating lotions is another. Last is the cold water factor. Rinsing with clear, cold water promotes circulation and helps tighten the pores, and makes the skin firm. It is a simple beauty ritual, but one which no woman should neglect.

Women Take Crossing Job To Aid Young

NEW YORK, Oct. 31 (Spl.).—Mothers who doubtless once warned their small children the policeman would get them if they weren't good have now become policemen themselves.

At least it looked that way recently to persons who happened to walk by the Ethical Culture School at Sixty-third street and Central Park West, where a stylishly dressed woman was directing traffic from her post in the middle of Central Park West.

The first to carry out this unusual project was Mrs. M. Goodman, of 336 Central Park West. She is leader of a group of mothers who have resolved to see that children who attend the Ethical Culture School will have a chance to cross the street safely both at noon and at the dismissal hour.

This gesture is the result of a first-class feud between the school and the New York Police Department, beginning when the department, appealed to through its West Eixty-eighth street branch, pleaded inability to send its regular man to the intersection for the next five school days because of registration week.

Emblem Plea Refused.

Officials at the school called attention to the fact this is National Safety Week, and for this reason extra precautions—rather than no precautions at all—should be taken to insure the safety of children going home from school. But this argument had no effect on the department.

The school officials then asked for an emblem of some kind that could be worn by a temporary traffic man of their choosing. But even this plea was refused.

It was then the mothers decided if nobody else would give their children protection, something had to be done, and done quickly, particularly in view of the fact Monday's dismissal hour was coming on, when several hundred children from 3 to 11 years old were about to walk out on the streets of New York with no traffic guidance whatever.

Protest Continues.

Accordingly, the mothers decided they would have to take complete charge of the situation and be the traffic policemen themselves. But Mrs. Goodman had no sooner taken up her post that she discovered the life of a cop is by no means easy. Between consignments of children, she spent most of her time trying to stop traffic and then get it started again. But despite her rather harrowing experiences, mothers are still determined to serve all this week, one to a shift, at noon and at 4:30 p. m.

Thus the protest against the police department continues and will continue, according to Dr. J. A. Baer, business manager of the school, as long as the department considers registration booths and other affairs more important than the protection of children in private schools.

India Gets Idea Of Americans From Tabloids

Mae West is more widely known in India than is Jane Addams, according to Lieut. Pasupuleti G. Krishnayya, president of the Pachiyappa College, University of Madras, who is now working for his Ph.D. degree at the New York University School of Education.

The natives of India form their conceptions of America from sensational articles and pictures and from fly-by-night travel books, Lieut. Krishnayya points out.

"We have heard about Babe Ruth, but not about John Dewey," he said; "about the Chicago stock yards and the slums of New York, but not about the Rocky Mountains and the great American desert; about night clubs and speakeasies, but not about the symphonies; about John Dillinger and Al Capone, but not Justice Holmes and Dr. Millikin."

The standardization of American life has particularly impressed the Indian educator. Detroit, he said, gave the Americans their desire for speed; Grand Rapids provided their furniture; Hollywood their styles in love, and New York their culture.

This Gentleman Prefers Brunettes

Blondes Offer Tresses to Science—in Vain.

Beautiful blondes from all parts of the world have been offering locks of their golden tresses to the advancement of science, little dreaming they are making a nuisance of themselves.

Prof. Albert J. Kelly, of McGill University, has had a formal order recorded at the main office of the university not to accept any more c. o. d. parcels addressed to him since he has replaced the one fine hair that broke in a meteorological measurement machine several months ago.

It started when Prof. Kelly was explaining to a reporter what had happened to one of his delicate machines. "A red hair or a brunette hair would be too coarse," said the professor in answering the query of his preference for a blonde hair.

The reporter, thinking he was doing science a noble service, wrote a quarter of a column about the little incident, and since that time Prof. Kelly has had a decided aversion for blonde hair.

Most Heads of Families In N. Y. Foreign-Born

Only 46 per cent of the heads of families of New York City are American-born, according to a recent survey by the research bureau of the Welfare Council of that city. Of this group 17 per cent are native white of native parentage, 24 per cent native white of foreign or mixed parentage, and about 5 per cent are either colored or persons of other races. Of the foreign-born the largest number, 201,168, were born in Italy. Russia furnished the second largest number, with 195,113.

Shoppers Told To Select Good Quality and Cut

BUYING a ready-to-wear dress has now become a procedure requiring its own special technique. To shop successfully, a woman must have something more than a sense of style and a nose for bargains.

The shopper should seek to obtain quality in the cut of a dress, Miss Clarice L. Scott, clothing specialist of the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, points out.

"A good quality dress fits neatly and keeps its shape," Miss Scott said. "This means that every piece is cut accurately and with the right grain of the material."

Bureau Offers Suggestions.

The Bureau of Home Economics gives the following advice to women who would shop for dresses to the best advantage:

"After you have decided that a ready-made dress is the color and style you want and that it is made of a fabric you like and believe to be durable, the next step is to go to the fitting room and try it on. Even if you are only buying a house dress, try it on, because size labels are no assurance of the right fit. For example, you may find size 18 a perfect fit in one line of dresses, but too small in another.

"But be sure to sit down in the dress before you buy it. See how it pulls and whether there is any undue tightness in the back below the hips. Try reaching up. Do the sleeves or armholes bind? The chances are, if they do, that the seams will give at these points when you wear the dress.

Women Marksmen Lured by Living Targets; Big Skeet Shoot Is Considered Next Season

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

WHILE SKEET CONTINUES, many women are shooting at living targets. Seasons are opening, in all directions, for game that ranges from snipe to raccoons.

The second woman to hold the honorary position of United States deputy game warden, Elizabeth C. Lester, of Oklahoma City, has just been appointed. The other United States warden, Mrs. Edith P. Doyle, has held office for some time in Maryland.

In Connecticut, Edith A. Stoehr, who has been warden of the women's fishing preserve in the Branford River, now is a State-appointed game warden. She has charge of a section of the Farmington public shooting grounds, which the State has reserved for women gunners. The plan for providing a place where women novices may gain practice in shooting will be furthered by Miss Stoehr's detailed instruction.

In skeet circles, there is talk about a big skeet shoot next season, under sponsorship of the Amateur Trapshooters Association. Gunners of the West and Middle West feel that too few can go East for the usual big annual shoot, and that the National Skeet Association should be more centrally located.

The plan under discussion is the holding of a skeet shoot about two weeks before the Grand American, using the A. T. A. grounds and equipment. The A. T. A. is willing to join forces in this way. Several skeet shoots in the South have already agreed to the plan. Vandalia Field, near Dayton, Ohio, is considered a favorable location for the proposed skeet shoot.

Now that women have proved themselves mistresses of skeet they are putting their skill to good use as the game season opens. Above are two devotees of the sport with rifles poised at the proper angle.

Automatic GAS HEATING

Gas Heating eliminates the inconvenience and annoyance of fuel ordering and storing, leaving your basement clean and free for use as a recreation room, club room, lounge or den.

Automatic GAS WATER HEATING

Every home should have a constant supply of hot water available for dishes, cleaning, the laundry, baths and hundreds of other daily uses. An Automatic Gas Water Heater keeps it always on tap.

Automatic GAS RANGE

New 1934 Gas Ranges do as much to lighten daily tasks as any other modern home improvement. Ovens turn on while you are away, cook the meal and turn off automatically when the meal is done to a turn. A far cry from the ranges of mother's day!

Automatic GAS REFRIGERATOR

Electrolux, the Gas Refrigerator, has become immediately popular because of its silence, its lack of machinery, its long life and dependable service. Visit our showrooms and see these modern appliances on display.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

CONGRESSIONAL letters that indorse persons for Government jobs have become like the inflated German mark of the early 20's—impressive but practically worthless.

BAKER.

Literally tons of such letters have poured out of the Senate and House Office Buildings onto the emergency agencies during the past year. Armed with these (blank cartridge) missives, thousands of job seekers have descended upon various Government offices.

For instance, 90 per cent of the more than 70,000 applications at Agricultural Adjustment Administration are supported by indorsements from one or several Senators and from 1 to 25 Representatives. If each applicant had only one letter, consider how much time, how many stenographers, how much paper were required to turn out 50,000 or 60,000 such as the following stock recommendation:

"Director of XYZ Administration:

"Mr. Silo Cornstalk, of Lickskillet, Missibraska, who is residing temporarily at the above Washington address, is an applicant for a position in the XYZ Administration.

"Mr. Cornstalk is a young man of fine character, and is highly recommended to me as an able and efficient clerk for general office work. He has had several years' experience in this line in Lickskillet, and if given a position of this kind he would render excellent service, I am certain.

"Your sympathetic consideration of his application will be greatly appreciated.

"Sincerely yours,

"(signed) Senator . . ."

Now, as Mr. Cornstalk got a similar letter from his other Senator (in the event, of course, if the other Senator was a Democrat), the total at AAA rises to more than 100,000 letters. Add to that the similar letters from the Representative from his district and two or three other Representatives from adjoining districts (sometimes the whole State delegation) the total sails rapidly toward the million mark.

Getting up into war debt figures, multiply the totals at AAA by more than 30,000 applications at FERA; 60,000 at PWA; 50,000 at NRA; 40,000 at HOLC; 20,000 at FCA; 10,000 at FDIC, and to unreported hundreds of thousands of applications at Library of Congress, General Accounting Office, CWA, and dozens of other offices in whole or part noncivil service, the number of Congressional letters of indorsement reaches a stupendous total.

"What in the name of this month's grocery bill," the weary job seeker asks, "are we to do to get a job if letters from our Senators and Representatives won't get results?"

Personal telephone calls and visits to the personnel directors by the members of Congress or their secretaries have been found virtually the only effective procedure on landing a job.

Ways of how the job seekers can save square miles of shoe leather and avoid centuries of benchwarming in anterooms of personnel offices will be told tomorrow.

Court Reporter Needed.

Applications for the position of court reporter for service in the New York customs court are being accepted by the manager of the Second United States Civil Service District, Civil Service Commission announced yesterday. The entrance salary is $2,900 a year, less 5 per cent under the economy act and 3½ per cent toward a retirement annuity.

Applicants must have had at least two years experience as official court reporter or in some position, the duties of which were to take verbatim stenographic reports of hearings that had the formality of court procedure, and where the difficulties and varieties of vocabularly encountered were commensurate with those of court reporter. Additional information may be obtained from the Second District office, Federal Building, Christopher street, New York.

Chartering of two new units were announced yesterday by the American Federation of Government Employes immediately after the return to Washington of E. Claude Babcock, president. The new units are Lodge No. 150, Los Angeles, and Lodge No. 151, San Fernando, Calif.

Please Cash My Check.

I've got a dozen bills to pay,
But what's the use—aw, heck!
The Government paid me today,
But I can't cash my check.

I've carried it all over town;
Like anchors 'round my neck
The darned thing weighs me down and down,
For I can't cash my check.

The Government has lots of dough
Of which mine's just a speck.
And yet, no matter where I go,
I can not cash my check.

A. CHASANOW (F),
Hydrographic Office, Navy.

For the first time in two years the civil service reemployment register total has fallen below 600, the Civil Service Commission reporting the total this week at 585. Names of 45 persons were removed last week, while 13 were added, two being in the District. Of the 585 on the list, 197 are reported as serving in temporary positions.

Treasury employes in Washington and the field will be granted time off to vote on election day next week. The time off will be granted without loss of annual leave, provided that in no case such time may exceed two hours. Navy Department was the first unit to take such action. It is expected other departments, offices and agencies will follow suit.

Minnesota in 'Red' By $9,000,000

Treasury Overdraft Has Reached Legal Limit.

St. Paul, Oct. 31 (AP).—State Treasurer Julius A. Schmahl today announced the State treasury overdraft had reached $3,000,000, the limitation set by statute.

Including this overdraft, the general revenue fund is now $9,000,000 in the "red." The remaining $6,000,000 is in outstanding certificates of indebtedness.

Between now and January 1, Schmahl, said, approximately $6,000,000 will be needed for operation of the State government. Of this amount, the October tax settlement is expected to supply about half, while the State executive council is to meet tomorrow to lay plans for a bank loan for the remainder.

The State Legislature convenes in January.

Baby Princess Named Margaretha

Stockholm, Oct. 31 (AP).—Socialism curtsied to royalty today, and Sweden witnessed the spectacle of a social democratic government holding a special meeting to name a new princess.

A daughter born last night to Princess Sybilla, wife of Prince Gustaf Adolf, the King's grandson, shall be called Princess Margaretha Desiree Victoria, the Swedish cabinet solemnly decided.

For the sake of brevity and for all ordinary purposes, however, the new princess will be Princess Margaretha, according to the cabinet's decision.

University Club Dinner Dance Is Gay Event

The Halloween dinner dance at the University Club last night was the first one of a series of monthly dances that will be sponsored by the dance committee of the club this winter. More than 150 members and their guests attended the ball, which was preceded by many interesting dinner parties. The entire clubhouse was a scene of festivity. The guests were presented with Halloween caps and noise makers. The dining room decorations were representative of Halloween, the centerpieces being of rich colored chrysanthemums and the walls hung with autumn leaves through which the traditional witches and pumpkins "peeked" and the night owls "hooted." A string orchestra added to the joyous occasion.

The ballroom was likewise in a festive arrangement typical of the season, with shocks of corn stalks, autumn foliage and numerous "spooky" arrangements.

Among those who entertained were Dr. Edward J. Grass with a party of 10; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley P. Smith, party of 12; Mr. Frank J. Kelly, party of 12; Mr. Albert E. Stephan, table of 16; Mr. W. S. Ross, a group of 8; Mr. and Mrs. Vladimir S. Kolesnikoff, 8; Mr. and Mrs. Claude M. Houchins, 4, and Mr. Loren P. Oakes, 10.

Others who were entertaining in separate parties and at the "club table" included Mr. John C. Fischer, Mr. Jesse R. Smith, Dr. and Mrs. Hugh B. Meloy, Capt. W. V. Renner, Dr. and Mrs. Frank B. Netherland, Mr. H. J. Saunders, Mr. Frederick W. Catlett, Mr. Allen M. Smythe, Col. W. B. Stacom, Maj. William R. Baldwin, Mr. Lewis Lofton Moneyway, Mr. William H. Courtney, Mr. F. W. Heitfield and Mr. James William Sommerville.

Film Writer Divorces Former Football Star

Los Angeles, Oct. 31 (AP).—Adela Rogers St. Johns Hyland, writer for and about the movies, was granted a divorce today from Richard "Dick" Hyland, sports writer and former Standford University football player, on charges of mental cruelty. They married March 28, 1928, and separated last February 17.

No alimony was asked by Mrs. Hyland, but she was awarded custody of their 5-year-old son, Richard Rogers Hyland. She is the mother of two other children by her first marriage to Ivan St. Johns, movie magazine editor.

A Record for Chicago Marriages.

Chicago, Oct. 31 (AP).—The Cook County clerk's office today reported 3,680 marriage licenses were issued in October, the largest figure for the month in ten years.

Ballet to Be Greeted By Brilliant Audiences

Two brilliant audiences will assemble to greet the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe at the National Theater, Sunday afternoon and evening at 2:30 and 8:30 o'clock.

The Ambassador of Spain, Senor Don Luis Calderon, will entertain a small party of guests at the ballet. Among others who will be present are the Senator and Mrs. James J. Davis, Mrs. Adolph Caspar Miller, Mrs. William Aspinwall, Mrs. C. C. Hartigan and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wardman.

Mrs. Belo and Sister Guests at the Shoreham

Mrs. Alfred H. Belo and her sister, Mrs. Hearne A. Adams, of New York are guests at the Shoreham for several days while in Washington to visit Mr. and Mrs. Chester Lockwood. Later they will go to Asheville, N. C.

Mrs. Belo, her sister and Mr. and Mrs. Lockwood have nearby camps at Saranac Inn in the Adirondack Mountains, where they spend the greater part of each summer.

Mrs. William Taylor Guest in Washington

Mrs. William E. Taylor, of Florence, Italy, who came to Washington from Hot Springs, W. Va., and has been at the Shoreham, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. Blackiston Wilkins, also of Florence, who have taken a house here for the winter. At the end of her visit here, Mrs. Taylor will go to New York. She will return to Italy after Christmas.

Strict Rules May Disrupt Milk Traffic

New Jersey's Inspctors Examining Herds in Maryland.

Centerville, Md., Oct. 31 (AP).—Stringent regulations laid down by Pennsylvania and New Jersey boards of health may cause Queen Annes County milk farmers to make their milk into cheese instead of shipping it to Philadelphia distributors.

Shippers here disclosed today that farmers have been considering the plan since the new regulations were announced recently.

They said, however, it was expected most of the Shore dairymen eventually would be divided into two classes—those who meet the Pennsylvania and New Jersey regulations and those who can not or will not meet them.

Meanwhile Newark, N. J. authorities, where much of the Shore milk is distributed, have stated that milk which does not measure up to their requirements will be refused from Philadelphia distributors. New Jersey milk inspectors are examining dairy herds here and in neighboring counties and investigating conditions under which milk is obtained and shipped.

Under the new regulations, dairymen must haul manure at least 50 feet from the cow stables and the yard must be kept clean.

After protests were sent to Philadelphia distributors, farmers this week were informed they must comply with the regulations or lose their licenses to ship milk under board of health rules.

County agents of the University of Maryland extension service say only two classes of milk will be bought if dairymen comply with the regulations. One will be milk in bottles to be sold families, for which the highest market price will be paid, and the other will be milk bought for conversion into table cream, butter and ice cream. A price of approximately $1 per can will be paid for the latter class, an increase over former prices.

C.C.C. Ambulance Damaged in Crash

Frederick, Md., Oct. 31 (AP).—A Civilian Conservation Corps ambulance speeding toward Washington with two appendicitis victims collided with an automobile here today. No one was injured.

The ambulance, operated by Charles Heiser, an assistant leader at the Fort Frederick CCC camp near Hagerstown, was disabled in the crash and the patients were taken to Walter Reed Hospital, in another ambulance.

Police said the ambulance ran past a red light and struck a car driven by Leonard Thomas, colored. Heiser assumed responsibility for the accident, and no charges were preferred against either driver, police said.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 31 (Spl). A $10,000 damage suit of Theodore Rockwell, a minor, against Lewis Harper, also a minor, began yesterday in Circuit Court here with the defense claiming a triple fracture of the jaw sustained by Theodore Rockwell at the hands of Lewis Harper was nothing more than the result of a boyish prank.

Plaintiff contended the Rockwell boy was unsuspectingly seized from behind by the Harper boy while Rockwell was playing ball at a school; that the Harper youth squeezed Rockwell until the latter was unconscious and fell, striking his jaw in a fall.

Tax Contested By Chain Store

Fredericksburg Company Demands Refund and Future Exemption.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 31 (Spl.).—Suit opposing the municipal tax on chain stores was filed here today by the Sanitary Grocery Store in the Fredericksburg Corporation Court.

The action asks for a refund by the city of the $1,000 in chain store taxes which the grocery company has paid under protest the last two years. Exemption from future payments also is sought. Judge Frederick C. Coleman set December 5 as the date for the trial.

The city ordinance under which the protested taxes have been paid requires an annual fee of $250 for each business establishment in excess of one operated here by any one individual or corporation. The ordinance was adopted two years ago.

Corporations other than the plaintiff who have been taxed under the law are the Standard Oil Co., Texas Oil Co., American Oil Co., and the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. These companies have paid more than $4,000 under protest.

One-Man Pay Roll Embroils NRA and Md. Store Owner

Baltimore, Oct. 31 (AP).—George M. Trinite has had a falling out with the NRA.

Trinite is owner, operator and employe of a stationery shop here. In fact, he says, he is the whole pay roll.

The difficulty: Trinite says he has been getting a bill for $3.50 every month for code administrative costs. The bills—all unpaid—now total $24.50, he says.

Trinite says the NRA has been asking what his mechanical pay roll is. He contends he tells the NRA that there is no pay roll, that he is the whole shop.

Code authorities here contend that Trinite has to have an annual pay roll even if he is the only one on it.

Notorious Jail-Breaker to Be Given Up by Illinois, Governor Says.

Chicago, Oct. 31—(AP)—Assurance that Jack Hart, Maryland lifetermer, would be returned to Baltimore within 10 days was given J. Bernard Wells, Deputy State's Attorney, of Baltimore, by Gov. Henry Horner today.

During an hour's conference with the State Executive, Horner was in touch with members of the Illinois Pardon and Parole Board and with State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney, of Cook County, who a year ago obtained Hart's conviction on an assault charge.

Hart twice has escaped from prison in the East, and Horner agreed, said Wells, to expedite his return there.

"The Governor told me he appreciated the insistent effort made by State's Attorney Herbert R. O'Conor, of Baltimore, to gain custody of the prisoner, and would turn Hart over to O'Conor's messenger within 10 days. Possibly he will be sent back to Baltimore before the end of this week."

Governor Horner already had signed an extradition warrant and his removal would be automatic once the State Board of Pardons has acted.

Just what form the release from Joliet prison would take was not made clear, Wells said, Governor Horner merely promising his influence in granting custody to Maryland. The Governor, however, was expected to call a special meeting of the Parole Board shortly and an agent of Maryland will be summoned as soon as appropriate action has been taken here.

Va. Town Elects Red Cross Heads

W. W. Baxton President of Fredericksburg Group.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 31 (Spl.).—W. W. Braxton has been elected president of the Fredericksburg Chapter of the Red Cross at the organization's annual meeting.

Other officers named were, Mrs. F. M. Chichester, vice president; Miss Sadie Tyler, secretary; Mrs. J. Conway Chichester, treasurer, and Mrs. Ada Hawkins, assistant teasurer. The executive committee will consist of Miss Anna Braxton, Mrs. Hawkins, Miss Katherine Long, Mrs. A. W. Embrey, jr., Mrs. Lily Braxton Wallace, Capt. G. M. Harrison, and W. S. Chesley.

Reports disclosed that during the past year the chapter spent $550.45 for relief and distributed 763 articles of clothing. Families aided totaled 115, reports showed.

Girl's Assailant Rushed to Prison

State's Attorney Acts for Safety of Prisoner.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 31 (AP). John H. Dennis, 34, colored, today was starting a two-year sentence in the Maryland House of Correction upon conviction of attempted criminal assault on a 9-year-old white girl.

Dennis was sent to the prison two hours after his trial was completed here on orders of State's Attorney J. Lloyd Harshman, who said rumored threats of violence against the prisoner had prompted his action.

Dennis pleaded guilty after hearing the girl's testimony.

Oyster Beds Ready Today For Dredging

Abundant Supply of the Bivalves Expected by Industry.

Crisfield, Md., Oct. 31 (Spl.).—The season for dredging of oysters will open in Maryland waters tomorrow. Captains and owners of the larger vessels have been busy several weeks repairing boats and getting equipment in order so they may be on the oyster rocks promptly.

Because of the limited supply of oysters available from the tonging areas up to the present time, shipments have necessarily been light, but with the opening of the dredging season the outlook for one of the most prosperous seasons in the history of the industry is freely forecast by both packers and catchers.

There are about 40 oyster packing houses that operate here during the season, but the majority of them do not open until after the dredging season begins. When the oyster season is about at its peak, around Thanksgiving and from then on until after Christmas, more than 1,500 people are employed in Crisfield.

The past few cool days have stimulated the market to a great extent. Dealers have reason to believe the cool weather will last.

Oysters in the Crisfield territory, it is said, are of a fine quality and in splendid condition this year. Shell stock from the Nanticoke River, Fishing Bay and Hall's Bar, in the Upper Tangier Sound, are in the local market daily, and there are many being brought here from Manokin River.

George G. Gibson, of River Springs, temporary captain of the patrol boat Bretton Bay, of the State Conservation Department, said he believed oyster beds in the Potomac, Wicomico and Patuxent Rivers are better stocked this year "than in the past 20 years." Gibson said oyster boats are bringing in loads of from 8 to 20 bushels daily at a sale price of 30 to 35 cents a bushel.

The charter members are the officers and Everett R. Stull, Grace A. Stull, Cora M. Fisher, Norval M. Stull, Ralph Hubbard, John W. Baer, Alfred Hayes, Lula May Hayes, Margaret Kiser, Cora Putman, Nellie C. Fisher, Virginia Keech, Ross V. Smith, Myrtle Hubbard, George D. Bartgis, Merle N. Thompson, John W. Thompson, Marjorie M. Thompson, W. Lois Thompson, John W. Hoffman, Marguerite Hoffman, Ella H. Hoffman, Earl Hoffmaster, Raymond W. Hubbard.

Officers of the new grange will be installed Friday night by State Master Thomas Roy Brooks, of Bel Air.

News Briefs of Maryland

Hagerstown—Thomas Lucas, 24, walked into a garage here, jammed his fist through a glass case, then walked across the street into a store and punched the proprietor on the nose. Lucas was given ten days in jail by Justice Richard H. Sweeney in city court.

Leonardtown—Five county schools will participate in the tercentenary pageant, "Maryland," which will be given here the latter part of November by the St. Mary's Academy. The pageant was written by the Rev. Henry S. Spalding, S. J.

Pocomoke City—Improvement of city playgrounds by the razing of old school buildings here is being completed with funds granted by the Public Works Administration. New buildings recently built house the high school and elementary pupils who formerly attended classes in the structures now being torn down.

Frederick—James M. Goodwin and Harold Schneider, both of Hagerstown, led State Policeman Niles Falkenstein a 60-mile-an-hour chase through the business district here before they were captured on charges of having stolen the machine, and speeding, and reckless driving. The men were arrested 30 minutes after the car was reported stolen.

Hagerstown—A political rally and mass meeting under the auspices of the Young Men's Republican League of Washington County will be held in the armory Friday night. J. Cookman Boyd, former member of the Baltimore park commission and the nominator of Harry W. Nice at the Republican State convention, will deliver the principal address.

State Senate Aspirant Sues Election Chief

Marylander Says Garrett County Official Lied on Requirements.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 31 (Spl.). Asking $10,000 damages, Hugh Carey McMahon, of near Grantsville, Garrett County, has filed suit in Circuit Court at Oakland against J. Frank Browning, president of the Garrett County board of election supervisors, claiming his name was kept from the ballot as an independent candidate for State senator as a result of false information furnished by Browning.

McMahon, who is represented by W. Carl Richards, contends he sought information from Browning August 11 regarding the time limit for independent candidates to file with the board, and that he informed Browning he intended to enter the campaign for the State Senate.

Browning advised him, McMahon declared, that he could file any time prior to the primary election September 12, and the certificate of nomination would be filed in time to comply with the law.

McMahon contends he presented himself before the Garrett County election board September 11, the day before the primary, and attempted to file. Browning refused to accept the certificate on the ground it should have been filed 15 days before September 12, McMahon claims.

Judge Albert A. Doub, in Circuit Court here last week, denied McMahon's petition for a writ of mandamus to have his name placed on the ballot.

The Court of Appeals later handed down a decision in a similar case from Somerset County, rejecting the appeal of an independent candidate who did not file within the time limit.

11 Compensation Cases to Be Heard

Virginia Commisioner to Make 4-Day Tour.

Richmond, Oct. 31 (AP).—Eleven cases arising under the Virginia workmen's compensation act will be heard on a tour by Charles G. Kizer, of the State industrial commission, between November 7 and November 11.

Maj. Kizer's itinerary includes three cities and four towns. It follows: Lexington, November 7; Warm Springs on the morning of November 8 and Staunton in the afternoon; Harrisonburg in the morning of November 9 and Woodstock in the afternoon; Winchester in the morning of November 10 and Front Royal in the afternoon.

Cape Henry Park Attack Answered

Chairman Denies Charges Area's Beauty Impaired.

Richmond, Oct. 1 (AP).—William E. Carson, chairman of the State conservation and development commission, said today that charges the State park development program at Cape Henry is impairing the natural beauty and wild life of the area are based upon the findings of "an impractical idealist who made only a one-day study of the area."

He said National Park Service executives have approved every phase of this seashore park project despite the charges contained in a report attributed to a technician of the park service.

Dr. H. P. H. Agerborg, wild life technician of the State park division of the National Park Service, was termed the "impractical idealist." He was quoted as charging that the park was being "cityfied."

Proxy Race!

Illness Fails to Check Woman's Campaign.

Baltimore, Oct. 31 (AP).—Baltimore has a political candidate by proxy.

Mrs. Lorraine A. Byron, Republican candidate for the House of Delegates in the Third Legislative District, has been unable to carry on her campaign because of severe illness which put her in a hospital. So she inaugurated the campaign by proxy.

"I expect to be on the firing line to give an account of myself election day," the statement told voters.

Hotel Stands Firm On Jewish Guests

New Chamberlin Manager Raises Ad Question.

Old Point Comfort, Va., Oct. 31 (AP).—J. Wesley Gardner, general manager of the new Chamberlin Hotel, today raised the question of whether his hotels should be denied the privilege of advertising that they cater to "a Christian clientele" while hotels are allowed to advertise "kosher" or "dietary laws observed."

The question was raised in an open statement made by the hotel manager as an answer to recent criticism made to United States Senators Carter Glass and Harry Flood Byrd by Rabbi Louis D. Mendoza, of Norfolk.

The Norfolk rabbi's protest against the Chamberlin's advertising policy, indicating Jews were unwelcome, drew promises of action from Senator Byrd and a statement of criticism from Senator Glass.

7,000 Parade In Mummers' Holiday Fete

Crowd of 50,000 From Cumberland Valley Comes to Cheer.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 31 (Spl.).—Seven thousand persons, 30 musical organizations and more than a score of elaborate and comic floats tonight featured the annual Mummers Parade, while a crowd estimated at 50,000 persons from all parts of the Cumberland Valley came to cheer.

It was the greatest Mummers Parade ever staged in Hagerstown. Sixteen years ago, the first parade was held on Halloween night.

The event, while staged here, was by no means a local one only, for many who marched came from towns within a radius of 50 miles.

Parade Is Colorful.

The parade, getting under way at 8 o'clock following a program in the public square before a grand stand erected there, was led by mounted police and the color guard from Company B, Maryland National Guard, of this city. This was followed by Mayor I. M. Wertz of Hagerstown, and the president and officials of the Alsatia Club, which sponsored the parade.

Following was the Municipal Band of Hagerstown heading the children elaborate division, and the children's comic division headed by the Hagerstown Junior Y. M. C. A. Band.

The adults' elaborate section was headed by the Myersville Band, and the adults' comic division by the Wynne Band, of Waynesboro, Pa.

Organized bodies were next in line, headed by the Waynesboro (Pa.) High School Band. The first division represented all organizations in special dress and the second division lodges and fire companies in regular uniform of the organization they represented.

25 Floats in Line.

Floats, both elaborate and comic, about 25 in number, were headed by the Brunswick and Harmony Bands. Other bands and drum corps appeared in other sections of the parade.

Following the parade, a street dance, a feature for several years, was staged in the public square with thousands participating. Afterward a dance was given at the State armory.

The public square, from where the parade was reviewed, was brilliantly lighted and decorated, hundreds of colored pennants flying from a high pole erected in the center.

Aviation was depicted in one group of marchers in the organized bodies, the Prior Girls Club with a score or more pretty girl members in line, attired in striking white aviation costumes.

Approximately $600 in cash prizes was divided among the first, second and third prize winners in each division.

Nijinskaia Is To Direct the Play's Dances

It Noted Nijinsky's Sister; Loew's and Thanksgiving; Amusement Jottings.

By Nelson B. Bell

No artistic opportunity is to be overlooked, no stone left unturned, to make the forthcoming screen production of Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" the thing of beauty that the first serious essay at spectacular Shakespearean fantasy since the advent of sound and dialogue to the screen deserves to be.

This is indicated, primarily, by the recent announcement that the Warner Brothers had placed Max Reinhardt under contract to direct this production and was emphasized yesterday by the further announcement that one of the world's greatest dancers has been engaged to supervise all of the shimmeringly lovely dances to be introduced during the action of this fairyesque bit of imagery.

Is Dancer, Actress, Coach

A gold-medal graduate of the Imperial Russian Ballet, Nijinskaia is not only a great dancer, but an actress of the first rank, an infallible discoverer of terpsichorean talent and a coach who is able to impart to her students the most intricate and delicate nuances of involved choreography.

Nijinskaia has interrupted an eminently successful European tour to accept the contract to come to America as associate of Max Reinhardt in the production of one of the Bard's most picturesque works.

She will sail from Paris as soon as may be and is expected to arrive in New York not later than November 20. She will proceed at once to Hollywood and assume her advisory duties in the filming of the "Dream."

The assumption that the Warners' projected combination of Shakespeare and Reinhardt was devised primarily as a publicity stunt which never would come to practical fruition seems to be punctured by the lengths to which the Freres Warner are going to make this a picture which will occupy a place in the history of the cinema that will be entitled to be catalogued and labeled by that much-abused word "epochal!"

The career of "The Drunkard" goes on apace. Having completed their successful engagement in this famous old Phineas T. Barnum melodrama in Baltimore, the Dillard Roof Players return home just in time to put on a benefit performance of the venerable, old play atop the Willard in the scene of its initial Washington triumph, the proceeds to be given to the family of the late Allen B. Wilson, victim of a gangster killing in which he should have played no part, whatsoever.

The performance will be given tonight at the specific behest of Managing Director Harry P. Somerville of the Willard and will be enacted by the original cast and specialists.

And that isn't all. The same cast will present "The Drunkard, or the Fallen Saved" in the auditorium of the National Press Club on Friday night, November 9, at 8:30 o'clock, under the auspices of the N. P. C. Post, No. 20, of the American Legion. At both of these performances there will be the customary free beer and pretzels, olio specialties and community singing following the fall of the final curtain.

Thanksgiving and Loew.

The happy thought has occurred to the ladies and gentlemen connected with the publicity department of the Loew interests in Washington that Thanksgiving and Loew's Fox and Palace theaters somehow are, or ought to be, synonymous.

This all comes about, one imagines, from the list of future bookings that these earnest ladies and gentlemen are able to make public at the moment. They point out, for example, that "The Merry Widow," at the Palace tomorrow, and "Transatlantic Merry-Go-Round," ditto at the Fox, inaugurate a succession of attractions that will, to all intents and purposes, knock your eye out. Maybe both of them.

"Marie Galante," with the new foreign star, Ketti Gallian, and Spencer Tracy are due for an early booking at the Fox. Warner Baxter and Conchita Montenegro will be seen shortly in "Hell in the Heavens." "Music in the Air," with Gloria Swanson and John Boles; "The White Parade," with Boles and Loretta Young, and George M. Cohan, in "Gambling," are also due for early bookings at the Fox or Palace.

M-G-M Is Ready.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have ready for release William Powell and Myrna Loy in "Evelyn Prentice." Greta Garbo will be seen in "The Painted Veil," in which she is supported by Herbert Marshall and George Brent. "Biography of A Bachelor Girl," starring Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery, is another early release. Other M-G-M pictures which are coming through at early dates include "Backfield," with Robert Young and Betty Furness, and "Repeal," with Carole Lombard and Chester Morris.

From United Artists, Loew's is receiving "We Live Again" with Anna Sten and Fredric March; "The Private Life of Don Juan," with Douglas Fairbanks, sr. and Merle Oberon, and "Our Daily Bread," with Tom Keene and Karen Morley.

Paramount pictures, scheduled for November release for Loew's showings, include "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" starring Pauline Lord, W. C. Fields and ZaSu Pitts; Joe Penner and Lanny Ross in "College Rhythm" and "Wagon Wheels," with Gail Patrick and Randolph Scott.

It does look like quite a list, at that. And Thanksgiving isn't so far away, either!

When Maurice Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald, or vice versa, to be polite about it, are seen dancing the famous waltz in "The Merry Widow," at the Palace beginning tomorrow, it will probably recall to many minds the silent version of the picture produced many years ago by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in which John Gilbert and Mae Murray, or vice versa, to be polite about it, did the same dance.

Only it wasn't Gilbert who did the dancing, but Phillipe Borgia, now appearing with his uartner, Marjorie Enters, at Pete Macias' Heigh-Ho. When M-G-M decided to make the silent version of the Franz Lehar hit, they looked around for someone to teach Gilbert the intricacies of the dance. Borgia was dancing at the Coconut Grove in Los Angeles at the time, and was chosen as the ideal instructor. But Gilbert was too temperamental to bother about it. He could not spare the time to learn how to dance with grace and float through the air with the ease of the man on the flying trapeze, so to speak. So Borgia's temples were shaved, a duplicate uniform was produced and it was he who danced with the Murray, except in the close-ups. Later on, Miss Murray chose Borgia for her partner on a National tour in which they did all of the dances on the stages of the principal theaters of the country that they had done together in the film. So now you know.

"Pocahontas."

An Indian play makes most children think of wigwams, buffalo hunts and war whoops, but those who see "Pocahontas" will encounter many surprises, for when that play comes to the National Theater this Saturday morning, November 3, as the first play of the new season of the Children's Theater of New York, it will be seen that the life, manners and customs of the Indians of Eastern Virginia—the "John Smith Indians"—differed materially from the plains redskins popularized in "wild West" fiction.

"Pocahontas" was written by Clare Tree Major, director of the Children's Theater of New York, in collaboration with Mrs. A. S. Beistle, after extensive research. Settings, costumes, dances and ceremonials are designed from descriptions in contemporary literature, with particular reference to Capt. John Smith's own account of life among the Indians at the time of the founding of Jamestown. The existence of the tribes federated by that great leader, Powhatan, was very different from that of the wilder tribes farther west.

The play is written with accuracy and color and will give Washington children a new insight into Indian life in the Eastern United States.

Halloween Note.

You certainly looked funny with that false face on last night. Or was that a false face? Uh-huh? What say, Oscar?

Return to Local Screens Friday

New Film Hits Lend Charm to Incoming Week

Palace, Earle, RKO-Keith Foremost With Elaborate Musical Romances.

"The Merry Widow," that sensationally successful operetta of almost three decades ago, comes back to life in cinematic form as chief feature of the screen bill at Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. It also may be said to mark the rejuvenation of the genius of Ernst Lubitsch, director, as a master of mass movement, color, action and the narration of interesting plot.

So elaborated has Lubitsch contrived to make his "Merry Widow" that the original version practically is doubled in plot, visual scope and beauty of embellishment. All of the old "Merry Widow" is there, plus a new musical background, great diversity of scene and a magnificence of investiture that makes the picture one of the real achievements of the year.

The cast is led by Jeanette MacDonald and Maurice Chevalier, who once more are united under the direction of Lubitsch, and includes such supporting artists as Minna Gombell, Edward Everett Horton, Una Merkel, George Barbier, Sterling Holloway, Herman Bing, Donald Meek and hundreds of others.

"Happiness Week" they are calling it at the Earle Theater, beginning tomorrow, and the designation is not entirely amiss. "Happiness Ahead," the principal screen feature of the bill, is a happy selection to introduce the joint capabilities of Dick Powell and Josephine Hutchinson, who makes her debut in the cinema in this subject. The story unfolds an engaging comedy-romance that slightly tangles the interests of multimillionaires and window washers, with some delightfully lilting songs tossed in along the way. Frank McHugh, John Halliday, Marjorie Gateson, Dorothy Dare, Allen Jenkins and Ruth Donnelly are foremost among the supporting players. The new stage bill will be headlined by Jimmy Savo, greatest of the living pantomimists, whose "River, Stay Away From My Door" is a gem of silent interpretative inspiration. "Sidewalk Cafe," a new musical revue, rounds out the stage portion of the bill.

* * * *

Comedy, drama and music, offered by the largest all-star ensemble that has come along in many a day, are said to leave their indelible stamp upon "Gift of Gab," the screen feature announced to inaugurate a week's run tomorrow at the RKO-Keith Theater. Edmund Lowe, Gloria Stuart and Alice White are foremost in the story interest of the piece, with such artists surrounding them as Phil Baker, Victor Moore, Hugh O'Connell, Henry Armetta, Helen, Vinson, Ethel Waters, Ruth Etting, Gene Austin, Beale Street Boys, Gus Arnheim's Orchestra, Roger Pryor and scores more.

* * * *

Soaring to still greater heights of popularity, "One Night of Love," the tremendously effective operatic romance starring Grace Moore, with Tullio Carminati, Lyle Talbot, Luis Alberni and many others of note, continues another week at the Metropolitan, beginning tomorrow.

* * * *

"Love Time," a gay, colorful and idyllic love story of a great composer, opens tomorrow at Loew's Columbia Theater. Pat Paterson, Nils Asther, Henry B. Walthall, Harry Green, Herbert Mundin, Lucian Littlefield, Henry Kolker, and others of known talent contribute to the effectiveness of this camera rendition of the romance of Franz Schubert. Many of the most beloved of the Schubert compositions are introduced logically and charmingly during the play's action.

* * * *

The unnamed attraction opening a week's engagement with the customary Sunday matinee at the Gayety has as its star Nadja, described as Russia's cleverest dancer. She will be surrounded by a group of recognized singers, dancers and comedians and supported by a comely chorus of 16 dancing and singing beauties.

Phillies Sell Bartell to Giants for $100,000 Cash and Four Players

G. W. Seeks More Diversified Attack, With Leemans a Marked Man

Blondy Ryan Is Included In Deal

John Vergey, Watkins, Rookie Pitcher Are Also Traded.

Star Shortstop in League 7 Years; $115,000 More Invested.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31 (AP).—In a deal estimated by club officials to involve $100,000 in cash and players, the New York Giants tonight announced the much discussed acquisition of Dick Bartell, star shortstop of the Philadelphia Nationals, as the first big move toward bolstering the former world champions for 1935.

The Giants turned over four players and an estimated $75,000 in cash for Bartell, outbidding at least two other National League clubs, St. Louis and Chicago.

Blondy Ryan in Deal.

The players going to the Phillies are Utility Infielder John (Blondy) Ryan, Third Baseman Johnny Vergez, Outfielder George Watkins and John Puzzello, right-handed pitcher who performed with the Richmond (Va.) and Nashville (Tenn.) clubs last season.

There was no surprise in the players let go by the Giants. Ryan was a hero of the 1933 championship team, but his play fell off this year. Vergez, in three years with New York, has been the victim of injuries and tough luck. Watkins failed to measure up to expectations after being obtained in a trade with the Cardinals.

Bartell, a "fighting" type of player and much admired for his aggressiveness, is 27 years old. He has been in the big leagues for seven years. He broke in with Pittsburgh in 1927, after being picked up from the semi-pro ranks at Butte, Mont. He was traded to the Phillies after the 1930 season. He has a life-time big league batting mark over .300 and probably will be the lead-off man for the 1935 Giants. His presence at short will cause Travis Jackson to shift to third.

New Talent at $115,000.

Since their collapse in the closing stages of the last pennant race, the Giants have invested $115,000 cash in new talent, according to Jim Tierney, club secretary, who announced the deal with the Phillies.

"President Charles A. Stoneham gave Manager Bill Terry a free hand to make the best possible moves, designed to give the Giants another pennant winner," said Tierney. "We have been trying to get Bartell for some time and apparently our bid was the highest."

Tierney said the club also had made substatial investments in purchasing Frank Gabler, pitcher, and Al Cuccinello, second baseman, from Nashville of the Southern Association, as well as Billy Meyers, shortstop, from Columbus of the American Association.

Navy Shows Power Against Reserves

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 31 (Spl.).—A long offensive drill again featured the practice session of the Navy football squad in further preparation for the game with Washington and Lee here Saturday.

Rehearsing scoring plays was the chief work of hte day. The varsity, with two sets of backs alternating, made an impressive showing against a strong combination of B squad players speed. Power plays, and a mixture of passes, were reeled off again and again with telling effect. The scrubs just could not stop the regulars.

Of the reserve backs, the work of Thomas, a half, and Evans, full back, was especially noteworthy. Thomas, who is fleet and shifty, looms as the relief man for Buzz Borries. He has shown marked improvement in the last three weeks.

The advance ticket sale indicates a capacity crowd for Thomason Stadium, which means more than 22,000 as was in the case of the Maryland game.

Washington College Risks Clean Record

Chestertown, Md., Oct. 31 (AP).—Washington College's undefeated and untied eleven, with the scalps of three ancient rivals already dangling from its collective belt, will meet Susquehanna University here Saturday in the final home game of the season.

Coach George Ekaitis will have 24 men, averaging 172 pounds per man, available from which to pick his starting line-up. Wilbur Tuffman, flashy line bucker from Cumberland has recovered from his recent injuries and will be ready to start, as will fleet Gib Young, quarter back, whose 101-yard gain against Hopkins aided the Shoremen to beat the Jays two weeks ago.

Pimlico Sees Black Helen Win Again

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, Oct. 31.—The ancient Hilltop race track, which first felt the sting of horses' hoofs in 1870, welcomed the thoroughbreds for the fall session today. Only a few scattered thousands were in the stands despite the fact that an above-average program was offered under ideal weather conditions.

Although it did not occupy the usual feature position on the card, the third race drew principal interest due to the appearance of Black Helen, E. R. Bradley's filly, in her first test at a distance. The daughter of Black Toney, owning six straight victories in sprints, opposed five other juveniles and merely breezed around the mile and 70 yards course.

Pulling Up at Finish.

Jockey Don Meade did not have to ask Black Helen for her true speed at any stage of the race and was pulling up at the finish as Gillie, the Greentree Stable hope, and Legume, the property of Breckinridge Long, labored along in their battle for second money.

In maintaining her unbroken record, Black Helen stamped herself as the favorite for Saturday's running of the $7,500 added Waldron Handicap at a mile and a sixteenth. She proved that she can hold her speed at the longer routes and looms a possible Bradley representative in next year's Kentucky Derby.

The time of 1:43 4-5 was not startling, but was impressive. Black Helen finished apparently full of run and it will be interesting to see what she can do in a topflight field and fully extended.

Black Helen was the subject of some heavy wagering. She went as low as 1 to 6 on the approximate odds sign and finally paid a $2.50 mutuel.

Identify Easy Victor.

The favorite players came right back with another success in the fourth race. Identify drew the bulk of the play and the son of Man o' War ran accordingly. With Jockey Rosengarten doing the booting, Identify was never headed during the mile and a sixteenth journey. Speedmore ran his heart out in an effort to match speed with the win-

Stake Race Is Won by Britisher

Four American Entries Trail Through Heavy Mist.

NEWMARKET, Eng., Oct. 31 (AP).—Wychwood Abbot, handsome 3-year-old English-bred colt, brought sudden riches to three American holders of Sweepstakes tickets today by coming from behind in the closing strides to win the historic handicap. It was the last big race of the present season.

The winner, one of the co-favorites, paid 9 to 1, and led Commander III, another English-owned horse, by a half length at the finish. Commander III in turn was a head in front of Highlander.

American Horses Trail.

The four American-owned entries never figured in the running. A. C. Bostwick's Mate held the spotlight briefly prior to the start, when he was five minutes late starting for the post. He held up the entire show.

The Irish Hospital sweepstakes, held in connection with the Cambridgeshire, distributed £250,000 in prize money on Wychwood Abbot. Of this huge total, £100,000 went to ticket holders in England; £90,000 goes to the United States and the remainder to other countries.

Installed along with Spend-a-penny as favorites in the overnight switch in betting odds, Wychwood Abbot did the mile and an eighth in 1:49 3-5 to equal the Cambridgeshire record set by Disarmament in 1931.

Mist Blankets Course.

Owned by O. V. Watney, splendidly ridden by Jockey Perryman and carrying 118 pounds, Wychwood Abbot ran strongly through a dismal mist which blanketed the course. Perryman kept the cold close to the vanguard all the way and then produced a fine sprint to overtake and pass Commander II in a final downhill rush.

The four American horses, as well as Mary Tudor, the Frenchbred colt which was the favorite until last night, found the pace entirely too fast.

None of the Americans were among the first eight and all finished among the stragglers. Mary Tudor also weakened at the halfway mark and dropped well back into the field.

Mate Balks in Barn.

Mate, the only American-bred entry in the field of 33, had the other horses nervously stamping at the post as he leisurely cantered up after a 5-minute delay in starting from his barn.

Once the half-way mark was reached, the race was strictly between the three horses which placed. Highlander led for a time, only to be passed by Commander III which fell back into second place when Wychwood Abbot began his furious gallop down the stretch.

Spirituelle led through most of the first half, closely followed by Blue Boy. Then Highlander began his burst of speed which kept him in front until overtaken by Commander III and Wychwood Abbot.

Lund Breaks Thumb In Dummy Scrimmage

Minneapolis, Oct. 31 (AP).—Coach Bernie Bierman, of the University of Minnesota football team, said Capt. Francis ("Pug") Lund had chipped a bone in his thumb in dummy tackling practice yesterday. The injury was at first believed to be only a bruise.

Bierman said the injury would probably prevent Lund from participating in practice for Saturday's game against Michigan, but that he would be able to play by Saturday.

Bill Werber to Talk.

Bill Werber, local sandlotter who graduated to the Boston Red Sox, will be featured on WOL's weekly sports broadcast tonight between 8 and 8:15. He will discuss the transfer of Joe Cronin to the Red Sox and review his own exploits of 1934.

C. U. Stops Shepherd—But It's Only a Life-Size Photograph

Virginia Teams Face Major Battles

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 31 (AP).—While the wily fox, Glenn Thistlethwaite wracked his brains for a good scoring trick to use against the heavier Georgetown eleven, which plays Richmond's Spiders here Saturday, Washington and Lee's Generals polished up their passing attack for use against Navy's Middies at Annapolis.

Although there were reports from the Navy encampment that some three of the Midshipmen would be out with injuries, there was no indication that the one and only "Buzz" Borries, Navy's great ball carrier, would not be ready to carry on.

Spiders to Miss Dodson.

New grief cropped up in the camp of the Spiders with the announcement that Jack Dobson, one of the State's finest ends, who has developed into an outstanding punter, would be unavailable for use against Georgetown's undefeated eleven.

With a distinct weight disadvantage, Thistlethwaite had hoped to offset the deficit to some extent by Dobson's fine kicking. As it is, Jimmy West, who boots them far and handsome when he's at his best, is expected to do most of the punting.

V. M. I. vs. Indians

Meanwhile other Virginia teams had worries of their own. Virginia Military—due to win if for no other reason than that advanced by the well-known law of averages, will meet a determined William and Mary team at Norfolk.

Virginia Tech, whose lads now are beginning to realize that they'll have a tough job against the Cadets next Thanksgiving Day, will spend the Saturday afternoon in Southern Conference conflict with South Carolina's Gamecocks. The game looms as a close one, with the Techmen enjoying a slight edge if there is any edge.

Other games will pit Hampden-Sydney against St. Johns' at Lynchburg, Randolph-Macon against Bridgewater, Emory and Henry against Wake Forest, and Roanoke against the Apprentice School in a Friday night game at Newport News.

BERRYVILLE, Va., Oct. 31 (Spl.)—Kilmalogue, an aged bay gelding from the stables of William Ewing, won the thirteenth annual running of the Annefield Cup, the feature event of the Annefield race meet held this afternoon at the home of William Bell Watkins, Philadelphia and Clark County sportsman, near here.

A gallery of more than 1,000 horse lovers watched Kilmalogue, unfavored at the start, outrun a field of seven to annex the event by two lengths from Raymond Guest's Engineer II, a favorite. Dr. Lewis M. Allen's Petite Poule was third and Silver Pay, owned by J. T. Skinner, was fourth. Capt. Eward Johnston's Seafarin' Dan, C. Boyd Keyes' Raved On, and Bof's Randolph's Lipan Lad also ran.

The Kentmere Steeplechase saw but three horses go to the post after Mrs. T. H. Sommerville's entry failed to start. The race became a nip-and-tuck contest between Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Old Bachelor and Big Tip, owned by J. T. Skinner. Old Bachelor won, receiving the Kentmere Cup offered by Kenneth N. Gilpin, Boyce, Va., horseman.

Kentmore Steeplechase, eighth annual, 2 miles over brush—First, Old Bachelor, 172 pounds, Arthur Hughes; owner, Mrs. John Hay Whitney; second, Big Tip, 154 pounds, Mr. J. T. Skinner, rider and owner; Marune, 154 pounds, T. Mahoney, rider; owner, Mrs. T. H. Somerville, refused.

Annefield Cup, with Woodley Cup added, for maidens over timber, 3½ miles—First, Kilmalogue, 165 pounds, rider, Noel Lang; owner, William Ewing; second, Engineer II, 165 pounds, rider, N. J. T. Skinner; owner, Raymond Guest; third, Petite Poule, 165 pounds; rider, N. Haymaker; owner, Dr. L. W. Allen. Also ran—Silver Pay, Lipan Lad, Seafarin, Dan (fell), Gray Dawn (fell). Petite Poule was declared the winner of the Woodley Cup, as she was the maiden finishing.

Hornsby Puts All Browns On Block

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—The whole roster of the St. Louis Browns is on the block for sale or trade if negotiations will improve the club.

That is the statement of Roger Hornsby, manager, who is seeking to make his 1935 outfit a championship contender.

"We hope to climb high next year," Hornsby said. "We are depending on our younger talent—Alan Strange, Harland Clift, Buck Newsom and Ray Pepper and the others.

Want More Youngsters.

"We want some more players like those, and I expect to get some at the annual minor leagues meeting at Louisville. We anticipate adding several rookies to the club roster."

Hornsby revealed he had conferred, without success, with Clark Griffith, owner of the Senators, and officials of the Cleveland club.

"But we wanted younger men than they had to offer," Hornsby explained, "so nothing came of those meetings."

All For Sale.

Asked specifically about the possibility of Oscar Melillo, second baseman, or George Blaeholder, veteran pitcher, being offered for a trade, Hornsby said:

"The Browns will be on the open market. If a trade involving those two players can be engineered to benefit the Browns, they'll go."

He said those who were certain of jobs with the Browns next year are Grover Hartley and Charles O'Leary, coaches, and himself.

W. & L. at Peak Of Strength For Navy

LEXINGTON, Va., Oct. 31.—Coach Tex Tilson probably will be able to throw the full strength of his Washington and Lee eleven against the Navy at Annapolis Saturday in an effort to break the perfect record of the sailors. The squad came through the triumph over Virginia Tech's Gobblers in fair shape. George Glynn and Bill Ellis sustained minor injuries, although it is expected they will be able to get in the game Saturday.

All the strength possible will be needed by the Generals for the Midshipmen, who have rolled over their opponents this season in championship manner and who are pointing to avoid one of those feared "upsets" at the hands of the Virginia team. The football-wise hereabouts regard the Navy's team as one of the best in the East, but conceded the Generals "a chance" if they play the brand of football displayed against Princeton.

Tilson Corrects Errors.

Coach Tilson has put his charges through hard drills this week, with another hard workout scheduled tomorrow, polishing up on an attack for the Midshipmen and trying to correct a few of the errors brought out in the V. P. I. game, which the Generals won only by a flashing last-minute comeback.

That ability to come back strong probably will stand the Generals in good stead Saturday, but according to information here the Navy outfit is drilling hard in defense against the Washington and Lee passing attack, an attack that has proved valuable in the last two games.

Aerial Attack Groomed for Vandy

New Defense Is Devised; Frosh Gain Ground on End Sweeps.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

HAUNTED by the realization that their back field embraces only one real scoring threat, Tuffy Leamans, George Washington coaches labored feverishly yesterday to produce a four-man offensive for Saturday's game with Vanderbilt. Dusk settled upon the field before Coach Pixlee dismissed his men, and he intimated it will be dusk again today before they are sent to the showers.

Never one to carry all of his eggs in one basket, Pixlee is working to build up an attack that will match anything the vaunted Commodores may have to offer. He wants the rookie backs, who have displayed a marked tendency to be too conservative, to cut loose with the fireworks, take chances and play wide-open football.

Whereas Leemans, because of his previous feats, will be a marked man Saturday, he'll be very much in the ball game. But he'll have plenty of assistance this time. Teaming with him were Herb Reeves, half back; George Jenkins, quarter back, and Pete Breazel, full back, a trio of hard-running lads who can carry the ball.

To Emphasize Passing.

The Colonials also intend to make extended use of their passing game, which has been used but little thus far. The importance of the aerial game was minimized because George Washington has never been obliged to rely on it, but unless advance notices of the Vandy forward wall are incorrect, it will be an important item this week-end.

George Washington also will show a new defensive formation against Dan McGugin's eleven, one designed specifically to thwart Randy Dixon's widely publicized passing ability. Heretofore a 6-2-2-1 has been employed successfully, but the board of strategy feels that further precautions will be necessary.

Using the new formation against the freshmen yesterday the varsity stopped Vanderbilt's overhead game without much trouble. It was not quite as successful in stopping Ben Kaufman's end sweeps, however. Kaufman, a frosh back, personified Dixon, who, like Leemans, will be a marked player Saturday.

Bill Parrish, veteran end, was injured bringing Kaufman to earth on one of his runs. Parrish made a dive for the fleeing Kaufman's heels and was kicked in the ribs. The seriousness of his injury had not been determined last night, but it is thought that he will be ready for duty Saturday.

Detroit Boasts of Having Perfect Grid Team

DETROIT, Oct. 31 (AP). — The perfect football team — that's what fans in Detroit are calling the Detroit Lions, now tied with the Chicago Bears for the leadership of the National Professional League.

Power and speed and smart generalship on offense, with a stone-wall defense which has not allowed a point thus far this season, has convinced many close observers of the game here that the Lions constitute the greatest eleven ever assembled in their professional or amateur ranks.

The winning of games, and not the running up of scores, has been the goal of the Silver and Purple aggregation, and the coach, Potsy Clark. The New York Giants went down to a 9-to-0 defeat in the Lions' opener; then the Chicago Cardinals fell, 6 to 0.

Green Bay's Packers proved more troublesome, but three points from a field goal, with a forward wall that made the Packers look very weak on offense, was enough for a third victory. Lengthening their stride, the Lions beat Philadelphia's Eagles, 10 to 0, and then lashed out suddenly with a powerhouse attack to sweep Boston out of the way, 24 to 0. They took Brooklyn into camp, 28 to 0, and hung up victory No. 7 Sunday by romping over the Cincinnati Reds on their old stamping grounds at Portsmouth, Ohio, 38 to 0.

Only one team has been able to get the ball to the Lions' 20-yard line. The Brooklyn Dodgers had possession of the oval on that mark by a fumble. In three downs they lost as many yards. And the Lions' great line has been consistently strong. Bill McKalp and Harry Ebding at the ends, Jack Johnson and Capt. George Christensen at the tackles, Robert Emerson and Morris Bodenger at guards, and Chuck Bernard and Clare Randolph alternating at center have consistently bottled up backs, who, by reputation were expected to run wild.

Earl (Dutch) Clark, former Colorado College star and an all-America quarterback in 1928, has been brilliant, scoring three touchdowns in seven minutes against Brooklyn, and running the team and playing in a manner qualifying him for the title—"Ty Cobb of Pro Football." He counted 17 points against Cincinnati with two touchdowns, one an 82-yard run, a field goal, and conversion of points after touchdown.

Time Supply Wins $25,000 Narragansett Stake; Equipoise Runs Third in Sprint

Mr. Khayyam Is Second in Stake

Okapi, All Forlorn and "Ekky" in Thrilling Sprint.

NARRAGANSETT PARK, R. I., Oct. 31 (AP).—Two startling upsets, the $28,000 victory of the 13-1 Time Supply and the failure of the great Equipoise to finish better than third in a five-horse sprint field, shocked a crowd of 20,000 that witnessed the racing program here today.

Equipoise, who has been out of competition since May, due to a foot injury, has far to go before regaining his magnificent form. Tom Healy, his trainer, thought, however, he was in shape to trounce the mediocer competition lined against him in the day's secondary feature, the $5,000 added weight-for-age 6 furlongs sprint, and Healy was not far from wrong.

Was Slow at Start.

The sensational "Ekky," carrying 130 pounds with "Sonny" Workman up, was slow getting away and dropped back in the first few strides as Mrs. M. J. White's All Forlorn set a fast pace for the Brookemeade Stable's 4-year-old Okapi, which won by a neck after a stirring backstretch duel.

The white filly weakened during the last 70 yards and just barely poked her nose over the line ahead of the thundering Equipoise, who was a poor fourth going into the last turn. As he shot down into the stretch, Workman called upon the Whitney champion for one of his sensational spurts and "Ekky" responded nobly. The handicap champion seemed to gain strength with every one of his final steps, but the distance was just a bit too short.

By finishing third in this start, the forty-eighth in his spectacular racing career, "Ekky" earney only $500, a sum that boosted his all-time earnings to $334,450. The Whitney Stable announced itself as satisfied with his performance and his condition after the race, although "Ekky" appeared to be limping slightly when he returned to the judges' stand.

The feature event, the six-horse Narragansett Special, over the mile and three-sixteenths route for 3-year-olds and up, was expected to result in a stout tussle between the 8-5 cofavorites, Fred M. Alger's Irish former jumper Azucar, winner of last week's Washington Handicap at Laurel, and the Belair Stud's crack 5-year-old Faireno, each burdened with 126 pounds.

Neither showed the needed speed against their under-rated opposition and Time Supply, Mrs. F. A. Carreaud's 3-year-old brown colt, went to the front in the stretch to beat out the Catawba Farm's Mr. Khayyam by a length. C. V. Whitney's High Glee showed and the trailers were Azucar, Faireno, and D. A. Wood's Indian Runner.

Fall to Break Record.

To gain the $28,000 first award, Time Supply ripped off the distance in 1:57, two seconds over Discovery's track record, with Tom Luther in the saddle. Mr. Khayyam took $3,000 by placing and $1,500 or the best of the total purse of $32,500 went to the Whitney entry.

This stake event, last of the rich Eastern offerings, was put up to lure Equipoise, Discovery and Cavalcade to Narragansett. The Racing Association carried on, despite the collapse of its plans. Whitney refused to start "Ekky" because he thought he was not ready for a longer distance and the other two thoroughbred cracks are out of training.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIME SUPPLY, $29.00, $12.80, $5.30; MR. KHAYYAM, $7.00, $4.30; HIGH GLEE, $4.90.

TIME SUPPLY, under stout restraint while following in closest pursuit of the pace, moved up stoutly nearing the stretch, wore down HIGH GLEE and held MR. KHAYYAM safe at the end under brisk pressure. MR. KHAYYAM displayed good speed, was reserved off the early pace and closed stoutly on the inside through the stretch. HIGH GLEE went to the front soon after the start, was rated along under steadying restraint and continued stoutly to the end though unable to keep pace in the closing drive. AZUCAR, bumped slightly by INDIAN RUNNER going around the first turn, never could enter into contention though making up some ground through the stretch. FAIRENO, under steadying restraint and on the outside of the field in the run down the back stretch, was unable to improve his position when placed under punishment. INDIAN RUNNER was outrun.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NIGHT RETREAT, $57.70, $9.30, $4.30; ESCAPADE, $3.40, $2.60; REDSHANK, $3.10.

NIGHT RETREAT, jumping beautifully, was sent to the front after taking the fourth fence, opened a wide gap and stood the long drive gamely. ESCAPADE was rated along for two turns of the field, closed fast in the last quarter mile, but could not get up. REDSHANK moved up gradually and was next best. THE CHISELLER ran well for a mile, then tired.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. The Questionnaire. Purse, $800. For 2-year-old maidens. Start good. Won driving; place easily. Went to post at 2:09. Off at 2:15½. Winner, Greentree Stable's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CRISTATE, $13.90, $6.20, $4.70; JIM JOHN, $3.30, $2.80; JUDGE BLAKE, $3.90.

CRISTATE, away well, worked his way up, closed with a rush and won going away. JIM JOHN ran into a lively lead and appeared a sure winner in the stretch, but he stopped suddenly. JUDGE BLAKE was a keen contender from the start and ran a good race. TEN LAW came from far back. M. J. BRENNAN displayed good speed for 3 furlongs. This race just about put him on edge. FLIGHT OF GOLD ran a miserable race.

THIRD RACE—One mile and 70 yards. The Pikesville. Purse, $800. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:40. Off at 2:42½. Winner, E. R. Bradley's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK HELEN, $2.50, $2.20, $2.10; GILLIE, $2.70, $2.30; LEGUME, $3.00.

BLACK HELEN, a fine-looking filly, got away very fast, was sent to the front and rated along under wraps. She drew away easily in the stretch and at the end she was galloping. GILLIE worked his way up on the inside and finished fast. LEGUME broke on top and was hustled along from the start. DOWDY DELL was never a contender. BLACK ROSE ran well for six furlongs. SANCTITY was outrun.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. The Oriole. Purse, $800. (Claiming price, $3,500.) For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:03. Off at 3:11. Winner, M. L. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IDENTIFY, $2.70, $2.30, out; JESTER B., $5.40, out; SPEEDMORE, out.

IDENTIFY ran as if much the best. He easily outran SPEEDMORE going into the first turn and, rated along, drew away in the stretch. JESTER B. was hard ridden all the way and outgamed SPEEDMORE for the place. The latter attempted to race along with the winner and stopped badly. REBEL YELL was outrun.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. The Worthington. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:42. Off at 3:46½. Winner, J. R. Buchanan's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAPPY GO, $22.20, $5.50, $2.50; KAWAGOE, $2.70, $2.20; AJACCIO, $2.30.

HAPPY GO, a rapid breaker, rushed into a long lead early, saved ground and won easily. KAWAGOE was hard ridden the last 3 furlongs, but could not get to the winner. AJACCIO broke slow, worked his way up, but failed to show any speed. MISS MERRIMENT lacked speed and never threatened. KATE dropped out of it early.

SIXTH RACE—(First division.) One and one-sixteenth miles. The Woodberry. Purse, $800. (Claiming price, $1,500). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place easily. Went to post at 4:11. Off at 4:16. Winner, A. Hullcoat's ch. g. (4), by Time Maker—Curcus Girl. Trained by A. Hullcoat. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:47 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—REVONAH, $6.40, $4.20, $2.80; KINDACORN, $5.00, $2.80; PENCADER, $3.30.

REVONAH was sent to the front going into the first turn, showed good speed and just staggered home. KINDACORN, outrun for the first half mile, finished with a rush and would have won in another stride. PENCADER was well up all the way. DONT BLUSH finished gamely. OUT BOUND quit at the end of 6 furlongs.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. The Hobkirks Hill. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good, from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:45. Off at 4:50½. Winner, Mrs. A. P. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ACAUTAW, $9.10, $5.30, $3.40; CANDESCENT, $6.80, $4.60; STOCKS, $3.20.

ACAUTAW, placed close to the leaders in the early stages, gained command when put to a drive at the stretch turn and had enough in reserve to hold CANDESCENT safe. Latter had a lot taken out of her making STAROGAN into defeat, but held on willingly in the final drive. STOCKS, on the outside while bettering his position early, came through on the inside during the stretch drive and made up ground slowly. STROLL ALONG went prominently, but could not improve his position. STAROGAN had nice speed until reaching the home stretch. BROADSWORD showed a good effort. The others were unable to enter a forward position.

EIGHTH RACE—(Second division.) One and one-sixteenth miles. The Woodberry. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good, from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to the post at 5:15. Off at 5:16. Winner, Mrs. M. Nelson Bond's ch. c. (3), by John P. Grier—Priscilla. Trained by J. B. Bond. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JACK LOW, $10.50, $6.20, $4.20; TRIGLING, $7.90, $4.50; SIR BYRON, $5.90.

JACK LOW, moving into a contending position when straightened into the back stretch, was permitted to better his position gradually until reaching the pacemaker, took command midway of the home stretch and held on strongly to withstand TRIGLING. The latter, prominent in the early racing, came with good courage and fought it out stoutly. SIR BYRON responded to punishment in the last five-sixteenths, but could not gain in the closing furlong. LEGENDARY began slowly and was never a dangerous factor thereafter. BLACK NOSE had a lot taken out of him to take command and then he stopped. CANTORIA stopped after 6 furlongs.

Grid Mascot Killed.

Tyler, Tex., Oct. 31 (AP).—Peruna, the mustang mascot of the Southern Methodist University football team, is dead, the victim of a hit-and-run driver. The freak pony, only 28 inches high, had accompanied the team from coast to coast.

Emmitsburg High Wins.

Emmitsburg, Md., Oct. 31 (Spl.).—Emmitsburg High tightened its hold on the pennant in the northern division of the Frederick County high school soccer league by defeating Liberty, 10 to 0, yesterday, for its third consecutive victory.

Long Shot Wins Chase.

Night Retreat, making his first start in two years, provided a jolt for the favorite players in the steeplechase. Paying a $57.70 mutuel, Night Retreat defeated Escapade, the favorite, by a half length after leading virtually all the way. Escapade spent most of his time chasing the aged jumper, but could not make up the necessary ground. Redshank was a distant third. Two mishaps marked the race as Teakwood and High Kilted lost riders.

Closing with a rush, Cristate, a 6-to-1 shot from the Greentree Stable, won the second race from Jim John, with Judge Blake third in the field of 12. Jim John, under Meade's handling ran M. J. Brennan into defeat, but tired in the stretch as Arcaro came down to the wire with Cristate to win by a head margin.

Happy Go caused a surprise in the fifth race, a sprint, by taking the measure of the crack Kawagoe. The son of Happy Argo paid a $22 mutuel and was never headed. Wright, riding a masterful race, kept his charge going in the stretch as Kawagoe made a futile move.

Back Field To Be Put On Display

Coaches to Utilize Speed and Power Against Cavaliers.

MARYLAND intends to stay close to the ground Saturday when it comes to grips with Virginia in the feature attraction on the homecoming day program at College Park. Not that the aerial game will be slighted entirely, but Coach Jack Faber intends to utilize the speed and power of his vast collection of backs to the fullest extent.

But that isn't the only reason for Faber's plan. The youthful Terp mentor has one of the finest lines ever to sport the Black and Gold and he wants the old-timers sitting in the stands to see what the boys can do. He wants them to share in whatever glory comes of this game and this campaign.

Maryland's line beyond shadow of doubt can hold its own with the best in this sector. There's Lou Ennis, as fine an end, defensively and otherwise, as one could hope to see. Picked on The Post's All-District eleven and All-State team last season, Ennis this year is bidding for All-Southern honors, and next year it will be All-American.

Look at Farrell, a made-over guard, and Callahan, the tackles. Hard-charging, vicious tackling linemen who were towers of strength against Florida last week. Though Farrell is new to the berth, he has developed rapidly when critics thought he would fail and he'll continue to improve.

McGaw and Fletcher, the guards, fit in nicely with Faber's running attack. They can block, open up holes and tackle, and if guards could carry the ball they'd probably do that too.

Andorka a Star.

Bill Andorka, center, is one of Faber's prize-package of the season. A transfer from West Liberty (W. Va.) Teachers College, Andorka is the final link in a chain of linemen who by next season will be as impregnable as a Gibraltar. In many quarters Bill is looked upon as Maryland's best center since Zeke Bailey, all-time Maryland selection who received his sheepskin a decade ago.

Andorka is 6 feet tall and tips the beam at 170 pounds. Fast and alert, he's death on intercepting passes. You'll hear plenty of him before the season is over and much more next year.

University, Va., Oct. 31 (AP).—Virginia this afternoon stressed blocking and tackling before going into dummy scrimmage against Maryland formations. Fred Cramer, 200-pound tackle, has been given trial at guard where injuries have weakened the line. The varsity backfield today included Randloph Garnett, Vincent Cardwell, Griffith Dodson and Spencer Berger. It is feared Johnson will not be able to start Saturday.

Middleburg Hunt Will Open Today

Three Sprints Weekly Is on Big Schedule.

Middleburg, Va., Oct. 31.—The fashionable Middleburg Hunt will open its official season on Thursday with a meet at Middleburg at 10 o'clock. While cubbing has been in progress since August, with the coming of cool, crisp days, hunting will begin in earnest and the hounds will be taken out regularly three times a week. The meets will be at 10 a. m. except on November 17, when the start will be from Glenwood at 9 a. m.

Other hunting fixtures announced by the joint masters, D. C. Sands and Miss Charlotte Noland, are Saturday, November 3, Chilton; Monday, November 5, Groveton; Thursday, November 8, Lehan; Saturday, November 10, Bel Ray Gate; Monday, November 12, Hibbs' Bridge; Thursday, November 15, Mount Zion Church; Saturday, November 17, Glenwood; Monday, November 19, Dover; Thursday, November 22, Arcola; Saturday, November 24, Homeland Gate; Monday, November 26, Guinea Bridge, and Thursday, November 29, Foxcroft.

Wisconsin Coach Seeks Man to Replace Dehnert

Madison, Wis., Oct. 31 (AP).—Coach Clarence Spears was out looking for a new Wisconsin quarter back today to replace George Dehnert, who suffered a broken nose in scrimmage and who will be out of the Northwestern game. Eddie Jankowski was shifted from full back to the quarter back post and Clare Strain was moved up to the first team as full back. The Badgers spent their entire workout developing their pass offense.

British Bookies Hit Hardest in Years

The bookies declared themselves harder hit than on any race in the last 20 years, since the winner was coupled by many bettors with Enfield, the winner of the Ceasarewitch two weeks ago.

Betting was tremendous on the Cambridgeshire. One pool alone reached more than $100,000.

Long Winded

Stagg to Make 2,400-Mile Speech Tomorrow.

STOCKTON, Calif., Oct. 31 (AP).—Amos Alonzo Stagg, 72-year-old football coach at the College of Pacific, will make a "2,400 mile speech" Friday night to the alumni of Purdue University, gathered in Chicago for their annual banquet on the eve of the game with Chicago University.

Earlier years of his glamorous coaching career while at the University of Chicago, the famed shibboleth was "Stagg fears Purdue." Now, he says, he has plenty of opponents to "fear" on the West Coast.

National Flag Race Given Clean Bill

Heydler Says He Watched Players to Avoid Any Scandal.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31 (AP).—As an aftermath of the hectic pennant race in which the St. Louis Cardinals overhauled the New York Giants, President John Arnold Heydler of the National League revealed today how he kept all the games involving the contending clubs under close surveillance throughout the last two weeks of September to guard against any possibility of scandal, on or off the baseball fields.

Satisfied that the finish was "as clean as a hound's tooth," Heydler avoided publicizing the extraordinary precautionary measures he took until the suspicion developed that he had concentrated upon scrutinizing the performances of the Cincinnati Reds. Occupants of last place, the Reds were the victims of four straight defeats by the Cardinals at the close of the season, while the sixth-place Brooklyn Club was knocking off the Giants in the last two games of the campaign.

Not Suspicious of Reds.

"In response to its inquiry, I told the Cincinnati Club, through vice president Larry MacPhail, that there was no basis for any suggestion that we had cast suspicious eyes at the performance of the Reds," said Heydler today. "The facts are that I had reports immediately after every game participated in not only by New York and St. Louis, but by the contestants for fourth place; that I watched, personally, as many games as I possibly could in the East and that in several instances I had my confidential representatives watching not only what took place on the playing field, but off the field.

The league executive explained that he felt it was his duty, under the unusual circumstances, to safeguard against any untoward development and prevent the possibility of any repetition of the Dolan O'Connell scandal of 1924.

Ten years ago, after the Giants had won their fourth straight National League pennant under John J. McGraw, accusations were made that members of the New York Club had approached Heinie Sand, Philadelphia shortstop, with an offer of money to "lay down" in the closing games of the season between the two teams. The Giants didn't appear to need any help that year to clinch the pennant and those involved insisted it was all a "joke," but Commissioner Landis after secret hearings, banished Jimmy O'Connell, young outfielder and Cozy Dolan, Giant coach.

Letter Is Made Public.

In a letter to MacPhail, outlining the sweeping nature of his surveillance, Heydler wrote: "It was my purpose and duty to know every night (1) What was the character of baseball played against New York and St. Louis by otherwise hopelessly beaten clubs? Did they present their best line-ups and a fair rotation of their pitchers? Did they put forth their best efforts? (2) Were any decisions made that could possibly lead to a protested game or that could be construed as discriminating against either contesting club?"

"My personal reaction to it all I can only express by repeating what I have said to the press and at a recent sports anniversary dinner in Brooklyn. 'Far beyond the drama of our World Sries or the brilliant victory of the Cardinals on the one hand and the tragedy of the Giants' collapse, I consider the outstanding achievement of the season the way the National League championship itself was decided. In every particular, I am proud to say, that race was run clean as a hound's tooth. With so much going wrong in the world today, I tell you it is gratifying to pay tribuate to all those who contested in our memorable race. Every player, umpire, club and official can be proud of this season's work and of their honorable connection with professional baseball.'"

Gun Charge Holds Bell, Tennis Star

Police Question Him About $112,500 Transaction.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31 (AP).—Richard Berkeley Bell, 29, internationally known tennis player, was arrested today in his East Fifty-sixth street apartment on Sullivan firearms law charges after officers, there on another mission, said they found two pistols, a .38-caliber revolver and a .45 automatic.

The officers' visit was in connection with a complaint by Stanley Young, 21, of Chicago, involving financial transactions totaling $112,500 with two men whose names were not revealed by the police.

Bell, a dark-haired, slender Texan, was released on $500 bail bond a few hours after the arrest. He denied owning the guns.

G. W. Players Pick Their Man—From Vanderbilt Poster

Daily, before leaving the gymnasium for the practice field, the George Washington football squad scans a placard carrying the likenesses of the Vanderbilt players they will meet here Saturday. Coach Jim Pixlee devised the routine as a psychological aid and to prevent any chance of mistaken identity on the field.

Boxing Body's "Cut" of Gate Is Waived

THE District Boxing Commission yesterday assumed a Lady Bountiful attitude by waiving its customary 5 per cent cut of the gate receipts on tomorrow night's benefit boxing card at the Auditorium. The commission's portion of the gross gate will be assigned to Mrs. Allen B. Wilson, widow of the local newspaper route agent who was slain from ambush by gunmen.

The boxing chiefs were not the only ones who will make sacrifices for the benefit. Two colored welterweights, Buddy Hayes and Young Stone, also volunteered their services free on the card, which is headed by a ten-rounder between Frankie Hughes and Mike Frattini. The boys have been assigned to do a three-round stint of first flinging, boosting the scheduled number of rounds from 37 to 40.

Mays May Find Joe.

Johnny Mays, local welterweight, who was the first to volunteer to perform gratis on the card, may be assigned a spot on the bill if a suitable opponent can be found.

Many personages of Washington's political, business and social world have filed orders for large blocks of seats, causing a brisk advance sale. Promoter Joe Turner, however, emphasized that there are still available good seats in all parts of the Auditorium.

Frattini, who has been defeated but twice in 68 ring engagements, is expected to arrive in Washington sometime today. The youthful Italian held Andy Callahan to a draw in his last ring appearance and generally is conceded an excellent chance of upsetting Hughes.

Having three times previously attained a ranking among the world's first 10 welters, Hughes will be bidding for similar recognition tomorrow night. Should he turn back Frattini, atop of his recent startling upset of Mickey Serrian, he is almost a certainity to be reestablished as a contender for Jimmy McLarnin's title.

Frankie Wolfram, Canadian bantamweight champion, will risk his string of 21 consecutive wins against Billy Landers in an 8-round semi-final. Landers has won 34 of his last 36 fights.

In three 5-round bouts, LeRoy Dougan will meet Frank Minerva, Joe Green will square off against Tommy Horn, and Pete Bevans will tangle with Bob Lowry. Lee Rosen and Joe Firrone will be paired in a 4-rounder.

Soccer Champions Equal Point Record

Westernport, Md., Oct. 31 (Spl.). Equaling the season's record for the most number of points scored in a game, Bruce High School's soccer champions of the Western Maryland Interscholastic League closed their 1934 season in the county circuit yesterday by administering a 8-to-2 setback to Central High School, of Lonaconing, at old Potomac Park, Westernport.

"Indignant Reader" Elicits Gallico's Apology to Stagg

By Paul Gallico.

Stockton, Calif., Oct. 24.

"Dear Gallico:

"This is the first time, and, I certainly hope, the last time I must assume the role of 'Indignant Reader,' 'Fair Play,' or whatever way one signs this sort of letter. But when a person of your prominence in the sport world goes to the trouble to malign such a man as Coach Amos Alonzo Stagg on a Nation-wide scale, I find it necessary to take my typewriter in hand and get a few things off my chest.

I refer to your syndicated article in which you pan the Old Man for dismissing from his squad a star player who broke training rules by smoking. You write well (the old blarney, to be sure), when you write of things that you know about. But in this case you were 3,000 miles away from the scene and your only knowledge of the affair must have come from very brief wire reports that reached New York.

Stagg Wrongly Accused.

"You accuse Stagg of giving the announcement to the press and publicly denouncing the player, thus adding to his humiliation. But in this you were wrong. Stagg never made any public announcement of the youth's dismissal or the offense. He told the team in privacy, with all outsiders barred. The story was obtained from other sources, not from Stagg.

"Another point: At the start of the season, Stagg called his players together and outlined a program on training rules and man-to-man asked the players to abide by them or suffer the consequences. To a man, the players gave him their word they would obey the rules and not 'cry' if they broke them and paid the penalty.

"This player broke those rules and Stagg, being one of the few coaches in the country with courage to stick by his ideals though it may cost him some of the false glory the press and public are wont to give gridiron victories no matter what the cost or method might be, lived up to his word and dismissed the player.

"And you may believe this, or you may not, but it is the truth. The whole affair was the best thing that ever happened to the youth, despite the momentary humiliation. He was a prima donna, played the grandstand, thought his services were indispensable to the team and that he could get by with anything. His actions were having a detrimental influence on the morale and cooperative spirit of the players.

"And what did he do immediately? Well, because he was barred from the team, he chucked everything, quit college, gave up his education, all because he couldn't take it. And then what do you think happened? Two weeks later he was back at college, a chastened, wiser and much the better youth. He discovered he could take it.

"The unpleasantness had been forgotten. He is looking forward to the basket ball season and from present indications will overcome that 'grandstandism' that marked and marred his playing of last season to the detriment of the team as a whole. And then, too, he is looking forward to next football season when he will again be eligible. He has won the respect and friendship of his fellow players who were not so hot for him, and, more than that, he has won back his self-respect.

"Best for the Boy."

"You say Stagg's action harmed and humiliated the boy. But you were wrong, far wrong. The whole thing was about the best thing that could have happened to him and he is the first to admit it. Thanks for reading this, if you have, and please understand that it is written in all sincerity and without malice to correct a very false impression which your story has created about the 'Grand Old Man' and if you are ever out this way you might spare a little time for a talk with Stagg. I could go on for pages and pages (which I have) about the Old Man, but enough is sometimes too much, so will close. Sincerely yours,'

MEL BENNETT,
Stockton Record, Stockton, Calif.

"P. S. It wasn't Stagg who caught the boy smoking, but a professor who reported the matter to the coach. Questioned, the youth admitted, so there you are M. B."

Looks as though I owe Stagg an apology and here it is. But I still wish he had tasted that beer the day of his famous Yale victory, when the victory parade wound through a tap room, and that professor wouldn't snitch.

Alex. Gridmen In Charge of Goldman

Former G. W. Ace Takes Over Virginia A. C.; Fraters at Work.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Oct. 31 (Spl.).—Mike Goldman, former George Washington University star, has been selected by the Virginia Athletic Club officials to reorganize and pilot its football team. Goldman coached the Pirates last season and, through his untiring efforts and football knowledge, developed a great ball club. Incidentally, the Pirates won the city championship from the Virginians last year.

Under the direction of its new coach, the Virginia A. C. will hold its first practice Thursday night at 7 o'clock on the corner of King and Lee streets. All players connected with former Virginia teams are requested to report.

The action of Nick Colosanta and Gundy Davis, coach and manager of the locals, in turning over Baggett's Stadium to the Alexandria High School for its postseason encounter with Gonzaga eleven, drew a great number of commendable statements from leading citizens.

Thursday night at 7 o'clock a meeting will be held by the committee selected by school officials in the business offices of the Alexandria Gazette, to discuss plans for the game.

Important drills for the Pirates have been listed by Manager Dutch Wood for Thursday and Friday nights. Sunday, the Pirates journey to Annapolis for a tussle with the Cardinals of that city.

Chicago's Hopes Soar As 2 Injured Return

Chicago, Oct. 31 (AP).—Chicago's hopes of stemming Purdue's invasion soared tonight as the regulars went through a heavy scrimmage and the team physician announced that Clarence Wright and Prescott Jordan, guards, probably would be able to get into the game. A secret practice to polish up offensive plays preceded the scrimmage, which saw the freshmen, armed with Purdue plays, make a vain attempt to jar the regulars.

Baffled

Washington Grid Press Agents Have no Stars.

SEATTLE, Oct. 31 (AP).—An untied, undefeated major football team with no candidates for All-Conference or All-America football teams at this time of the year has been found in the University of Washington Huskies.

Sports writers, coaches and fans might be excused for not being able to point to one or two men who rate, but when the team's publicity agent can't make up his mind, then things are downright serious.

Hoover Leads In District Tourney

By Dave Herman.

J. F. HOOVER took a firm grip on the low net prize at the end of the first day of the annual District Government Department golf tournament yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club's course. He posted a 87—19—68. His 87 also was low in medal scoring.

Hoover paced some 30 golfers in the 18-hole event. At least 30 more golfers will play today, including District Commissioner George Allen, Capt. Howard Clark and Eddie Broke.

In second place were Lieut. Robert E. York, who had 100—30—70, and Maj. F. M. Davison, who shot 96—26—70. The scoring was high yesterday, but better medal scores are expected today.

YOUNG golfers who struggle in vain to break 80 would do well to take a lesson in patience from William Wade Hinshaw, former Metropolitan Opera star, now an avid golfer.

A big, strapping, healthy-looking man with the shoulders of a football hero, he reached the zenith of his golfing yesterday at Columbia by scoring a remarkable 73, 3 over par.

Twenty years ago Hinshaw was singing in famous German and American opera houses. Fifteen years ago he retired from opera singing, and devoted the next five years to producing and directing operas.

He has spent the last 10 years learning to sing out merry tunes of pars, birdies and eagles on the golf course. He has been successful, too, as attested by the fact that a few years after he took up the game he was shooting in the low eighties.

Is Ardent Golfer.

Hinshaw—and Mrs. Hinshaw will testify to this—plays golf every day, weather permitting. This has been true since 1931, when a friend of his recommended Columbia's Fred McLeod as teacher and touring companion. Since coming under McLeod's protective wing, Hinshaw has sliced ter strokes off his game.

He is a year-around golfer. During the early part of the winter he goes to Augusta, Ga., to play his golf, spending most of his time at Bobby Jones' famous course, with Ed Dudley, of Ryder Cup fame, his companion. In the spring and fall he is in Washington. In the summer he hies off to Vermont for three months of intensive golfing.

Hinshaw is long off the tee, and is especially straight with his irons and accurate with his putter, as he demonstrated yesterday when he shot the two nines in 37—36, with 2 birdies on the incoming side. He was down the middle on almost every hole.

So impressed is McLeod with Hinshaw's golf that he believes he is a good prospect to win next year's National seniors' golf championship.

Columbia Tough Course.

Long considered one of the toughest courses in the Middle Atlantic sector, Columbia has naver proved too tough for Hinshaw. He has scored a couple of 74's and 75's, but his 73 yesterday was really a marvelous job. It was made while he played in a foursome that included McLeod, Miller B. Stevinson, six-time club champion, and Albert Mackenzie, former Middle Atlantic titleholder. It was a red-hot foursome, with Stevinson supplying a 35—34—69, McLeod a 74 and Mackenzie a 76.

Their best ball was 60, and included 12 birdies. They don't score any better than that at Columbia. And Hinshaw was present to help out on plenty of holes, the thirteenth, especially, where he made the lone deuce.

Clyde Hall, of the Marine Corps, went over the top yesterday in the finals of the West Potomac golf tournament. He repulsed Harry Burroughs like the Marines did the Germans at Chateau Thiery, winning, 3 and 2.

His golf career not quite two years old, Hall showed plenty of zip with his woods, irons and putter, going out in 31 in Burroughs' 33 for a 2-up lead, and playing par golf for the next seven holes to close out his rival on the sixteenth green.

Al Houghton, Kenwood's professional, was at it again yesterday—hacking strokes off par. Houghton's latest effort is a 69 at Washington Golf and Country Club. Even par for the first nine with a 35, Houghton picked up birdies on the fifteenth and seventeenth after going over par on the fourteenth. On 11 other holes he was putting for birdies.

Houghton, whose 61 last March at Washington had the golfing fraternity ga-ga, played the best ball of Bill Middleton, Pete Pardoe and W. McCallum, and broke even, Pardoe held his own with Houghton for the first nine, shooting a 35. He finished with a 74.

The green of the seventeenth hole, a 270-yarder, is being rebuilt, and a temporary one has been installed. Meanwhile golfers will play the hole as a par three. Ordinarily it is a par four, and what the boys call a "good birdic hole." Work on the green will be completed by next spring.

A meeting of the nominating committee of the District Women's Golf Association is expected to take place Monday. A new slate of officers will be brought in by the five members of the committee, with Mrs. Howard Simons, of Manor, hinted for the presidential nomination.

As a prelude to the opening of the Turkey golf tournament at Rock Creek's course next week Al Price, Rock Creek pro, and Mel Shorey, of East Potomac, will meet Al Houghton and George Diffenbaugh at 2 p. m. Sunday in a special 18-hole exhibition match. Entries for the Rock Creek tournament close Saturday.

All-Star Grid Team Hard To Pick

Candidates Are Numerous in All Sections of Country.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—The race for all-America football recognition is as wide open today as it was when the thousands of potential candidates gathered for the first spring practice.

A study of stand-out performers covering every major team makes it clear that the fight for National honors is going to continue until the final whistle.

Every section has its heroes, particularly in the back field, and those whose business it is to sort all-America timber each year are in for many bad moments.

Consider the back field positions alone. Here in the East there are literally dozens of crack ball carriers. There's Buckler, of Army; Borries, of Navy; Le Van, of Princeton; La Rue and Munjas, of Pitt; Barbas, of Columbia, to name a few. The situation is even tougher in the Midwest, where every school boasts an ace and one must differentiate between such crack performers as Pug Lund, Duane Purvis and Jay Berwanger.

In the Southwest the praise is chiefly for Bib Wilson, of S. M. U.; Bill Wallace, of Rice, and Hilliard, of Texas. In the Old South the selector must decide among such worthies as Howell, of Alabama; Mickal, of Louisiana, and Cornelius, of Duke. And out West there's Nichelini, of St. Mary's; Christoffersen, of Washington State, and Bob Hamilton and Bobby Grayson, of Stanford. Out of this list, and it's only a partial one—one could pick two seaworthy all-America back fields.

The boys must be good, for they've completely overshadowed such 1933 stars as Cotton Warburton, Norm Franklin and the rest.

There are good ends almost without number: Erdelatz, of St. Mary's; Moscrip, of Standford; Borden, of Fordham, Vairo and Millner, of Notre Dame, Larsen, of Minnesota; Rooker, of Pitt; Dorin, of Navy, Poole, of Iowa State; Fuque, of S. M. U.; Gray, of Texasn; Hutson, of Alabama; Fenton, of Auburn; Smith, of W and L.

The same goes for tackles and among the aces are Theodoratus, of Washington State; Barber, of San Francisco; Harvey, of Holy Cross; Curtin, of Yale; Cutter, of Navy; Balbreath, of Illinois; Widset, of Minnesota; Pflum, of Nebraska; Mays, of Rice; Benton, of Arkansas; Tessier, of Tulane; Starbuck, of Florida; Throgmorton, of Vanderbilt.

There's one guard who is almost certain to get on everybody's All-America. He is Bill Bevan, of Minnesota, who is the backbone of the Gophers' forward wall. Other aces are Barclay, of North Carolina; Welch, of Auburn; Warner, of Bringham Young; Stillman, of Army; Ormiston and Hartwig, of Pitt; John, of Princeton; Byrnes and Zabristie, of Navy; Stamps, of S. M. U.

As is usual there are relatively few great centers. Heading the list now are Shotwell, of Pitt; Kalbaugh, of Princeton; Paterson, of Chicago; Lester, of Texas Christian; Robinson, of Tulane; Slemering, of San Francisco, and Clifford, of Army.

Illinois Squad Absorbs Final Hard Workout

The gold-shirted freshmen continued to open holes in the varsity line to let runners through for long gains. Toward the end of the drill, however, most of the Army plays resulted in pile ups at the line. Cadet passes also met with little success.

C. U. Coffin, Lost in 1913, Grid Prize Saturday

GHOSTS of yesteryear rustled about the premises at Catholic University yesterday when Bill Carr, superintendent of maintenance, unearthed the long-lost Western Maryland coffin that once was prized and cherished by C. U. undergraduates.

The story of the coffin here rivals that of the "little brown jug" of Michigan in hoary tradition. As Carr outlined its history, it was built by one of his carpenters prior to the first Terror-Cardinal game back in 1913. It was symbolic of what C. U. intended to do to Western Maryland's grid hopes that year and proved to be a correct omens as the Cardinals won 17 to 6.

Refused Prize in 1924.

Relations between the schools temporarily were interrupted until 1924, when the Westminster eleven returned for another battle and to win possession of the box. They succeeded in winning the game, 13 to 7, but rabid C. U. supporters, and they were rabid in those days, spirited the coffin away after a pitched battle with Western Maryland students.

Western Maryland pleaded, threatened and cajoled Catholic U. in its attempts to regain the box, but to no avail. Called up on the carpet of the prefect of discipline for their prank, LaFond and his jokesters admitted they had seized the prize but confessed ever they had lost track of it. It vanished in thing air, apparently, but Carr's discovery yesterday recalled that it was not thin air, but musty gloom enveloped it.

Found in Basement.

Carr unearthed the trophy in the basement of St. Thomas Hall, freshman residence, and appreciating its significance, he has had it restored to original form.

Tomorrow night at a monster pep rally scheduled in the C. U. gym it will be on display, and Saturday afternoon it will be borne in a pregame processional around the stadium. This time it will be presented to the winner of Saturday's game, which means, according to C. U. supporters, that it is going to remain at Brookland.

Meanwhile from Westminster comes word that the Terrors not only are confident of stopping the Cardinals, but also of keeping their goal line uncrossed. Bill Shepherd, the Nation's leading scorer, thinks he will add a touchdown or so to his total despite the fact that the Redbirds are pointing especially for him.

C. U. Plans Defense.

The watchword at Brookland is "they shall not pass, nor run either, for that matter." Big Bill Karpowich and Ed Conter, tackles, opine that there will be no gains through their territory, while Red Fleming and George Mulligan are determined that end runs will be disastrous for Harlow's men.

That leaves only two avenues open, through the middle or through the air. With Yanchulis, center, Lajousky and Anthonavage, guards, in the middle it is hardly likely they'll go through there. That puts it squarely up to the C. U. backfield, where the game will be won or lost.

Stocks Finish October With One-Tenth Rise

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—Stocks held a steady pace today as October made its exit quietly in financial markets.

The share list firmed in late trading, but final prices were no better than irregular. Transfers dwindled to 416,800 shares, the smallest since October 3. The total turnover for the month on the stock exchange was only 15,658,331 shares, against 39,372,212 in the same month last year.

Despite evidence of a little additional seasonal improvement in business, traders played a waiting game in nearly all markets. Foreign exchanges settled down to a narrow course along with domestic security and commodity markets.

Rubber Futures Break.

Announcement that the Federal Government would increase government salaries 5 per cent next July in anticipation of higher prices in the meanwhile, had little visible effect upon markets. Some brokerage quarters continued to stress the forthcoming elections as a restraint upon speculation.

The day's news seemingly did not make much impression on stocks. Oils hardened on improvement in the gasoline and crude price structure, but gains for the most part were only small fractions. Eastman Kodak rose more than 2 points on the news the company had sold part of its large silver holdings to the Government. Noranda Mines closed a point lower after touching a new 1934 low, around 31.

Timken Shares Advance.

The poor third-quarter earnings showing by United States Steel Corporation was offset by a little current steel improvement. The Iron Age estimated steel output had risen 1½ points to 26 per cent of capacity, the highest since the first week of August, and said prospects favored further pick-up in the next two weeks.

United States Steel, Bethlehem and American Rolling Mill edged fractionally higher. Santa Fe, Pennsylvania and New York Central were among rails improving slightly aided by indications rail traffic was holding fairly well in the face of seasonal influences toward decline. American Can, American Telephone Montgomery Ward, J. I. Case, General Electric, General Motors and other stocks of that caliber showed only small changes up and down at the finish.

The Standard Statistics Co. index for 90 stocks finished the month at 69.9, up one-tenth of a point for the day. At the end of September it stood at 72.3.

Undesirable Effects of Foreign Trade Fluctuations Revealed in Study of Conditions in United States, England, France and Germany.

(By Special Writer of The Post.)

During the first three quarters of the present year, the total foreign trade of the United States and Great Britain showed a marked expansion in terms of dollars and pounds, respectively, compared with the corresponding period of 1933, while the trade of France and Germany, measured in francs and marks, contracted sharply. Exports from the United States for the nine months to October 1 were 41 per cent higher than a year ago, while imports rose 19.8 per cent. The value of exports exceeded that of imports by $319,600,000, and for September alone the export excess amounted to $60,000,000.

This is a very large balance in view of the fact that total exports for the period amount to only $1,561,000,000—or 41 per cent of exports for the same period in 1929, when the favorable 9 months balance was $483,000,000. Great Britain's export gains are less pronounced and her merchandise balance has actually declined as compared with a year ago, since imports for the first nine months rose 10 per cent compared with 1933, while exports increased only 7.7 per cent.

In September this trend was reversed as imports remained stationary compared with September 1933, while British exports rose 5.4 per cent. During the year to date, however, imports exceeded exports by £208,000,000, an increase of 14.2 per cent in the unfavorable merchandise balance.

France, on the other hand, while suffering a sharp decline in the value of imports and a slight drop in exports during the period to October 1, managed to cut the size of her unfavorable trade balance from 8,142,000,000 francs to 4,594,000,000 francs As a result chiefly of curtailed buying of raw materials, total imports fell to 17,653,000,000 francs as compared with 21,607,000,000 francs for the corresponding period in 1933, and exports dropped to 13,060,000,000 francs compared with 13,472,000,000 francs in 1933.

Germany Presents Contrast; Balance Becoming Unfavorable.

Germany presents a contrast of another kind, with 1934 exports declining, imports increasing and a favorable merchandise balance becoming unfavorable. Imports for the nine months rose from 3,132,000,000 R. M. to 3,358,000,000 R. M. Exports declined from 3,608,000,000 R. M. to 3,091,000,000 R. M. and the trade balance which was favorable to the extent of 476,000,000 R. M. in the first three quarters of 1933 is unfavorable this year by 267,000,000 R. M.

It is evident from this showing that the changes in export trade are introducing new complications into international relationships. The United States, a creditor country, is currently adding to its favorable merchandise balance, thereby making payment of amounts due this country increasingly difficult and tending to strengthen the dollar (barring a capital flight). Great Britain, which has been making great efforts to build a surplus on balance in her current dealings with the world, is confronted by a larger adverse merchandise balance, which tends to defeat her purpose. In fact, in some quarters it is believed that the very small deficit on current international account estimated for 1933 may this year increase considerably as the result of the pronounced rise in imports attributed to better domestic business. France, on the other hand, while faced by an unfavorable balance of payments on current account during the last two years, is in a position to stand a heavy gold drain and is much more worried about the loss of export markets than about the effect of an unfavorable balance upon the franc. Inward capital movements have long concealed the fundamentally weak position of the franc as an international currency.

Effects of Rising Imports In Germany Bring Curbs.

The special circumstances which have forced Germany to curtail imports and have added to the obstacles to export expansion are of course well known. German exports began to decline in advance of imports; in fact, imports were rising from the middle of 1932 to the spring of 1934, accentuating the drain upon German exchange reserves and helping to bring about the drastic restrictions now in force. The unfavorable effect of these restrictions upon the export sales of other countries has not yet been fully realized.

If allowance is made for currency depreciation, the favorable trade balance of the United States seems less formidable. Similarly Britain's unfavorable balance, expressed in terms of gold, can be heavily deflated. It is also worth noting that the gold value of the exports and imports of both countries is sadly shrunken as compared with the values of former years. In view of the fact that the dollar is worth only 99 per cent of its former parity, the (gold) value of our export trade for the year to October 1 is less than 25 per cent of the total for the corresponding period in 1929. In case of Great Britain it is estimated that exports for the full year 1933 were worth about 34 per cent of the gold value of the exports of 1929.

For the United States the 1933 volume of exports was estimated to be about 52.5 per cent of that for 1929 and this year estimates for the first six months indicate a quantitative increase of 22 per cent over 1933. Thus, whatever the gold value of sales may be, it seems that American and British goods are being shipped abroad in larger quantities.

While the purchase of goods from countries with depreciated currencies is made easier in one respect for countries on the gold standard, the loss of export trade by these same countries tends to destroy their ability to purchase even at much lower gold values. At present the effect of trade fluctuations upon current balances of payment is obscured by the movement of capital funds from country to country, which has resulted in large shipments of gold without regard to commercial transactions.

Bond Market Turns Mixed As Month Ends

One-Tenth Drop Recorded on Larger Sale of $12,906,000.

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—All bond market categories were somewhat irregular today and, with the exception of United States Government securities, trading was relatively dull.

Transfers totaled $12,906,000, par value, against $9,808,000 yesterday. Of the day's aggregate, however, Federal issues accounted for some $6,380,000 compared with $3,190,000 in the preceding session.

Home Loans Advance.

While Treasury bonds registered declines of one thirty-second to ten thirty-seconds of a point, there was a turnover of nearly $1,000,000 in Home Owners loan 4s at an advance of twenty thirty-seconds. Home loan 3s were also one thirty-second higher and Liberty first 4¼s held a gain of three thirty-seconds.

Much of the activity in the Home Loan 4s, which are not now convertible into the fully guaranteed 3s and are guaranteed only as to interest, was attributed partly to buying by banks and individuals willing to speculate on the possibility of a call for redemption of this issue January 1. The 4s closed at 99.8. The retirement notice must come, if at all, no later than December 1.

Among Sizable Losers.

Among the few sizable losers were New Haven 4½s, off 3 at 44; Paramount Publix 5½s, off 2¾ at 55; Illinois Central refunding 5s, off 1⅜ at 89⅛; Warren Bros. 6s, off 1¼ at 40½; Union Pacific first 4s, off ⅞ at 106¼, and Rio Grande Western collateral 4s, off 4¼ at 42. Many loans were unchanged or only a shade up or down.

The foreign section was fairly steady. Brazilian government 6½s were up 2 at 33½; Colombian 6s advanced 1½ to 34 and Norway Kingdom 5s firmed 1¾ at 95. Most of the Germans were slightly improved.

Transfers of all listed bonds in October amounted to $277,743,000, par value, compared with $285,009,000 in September. The Standard Statistics Co. corporate average showed a gain of nine-tenths of a point on the month.

Curb's Prices Hold Levels in Lighter Sales

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—The curb market had a fairly good tone today, but trading volume continued small. Transfers approximated 84,000 shares, compared with 97,000 the day before.

The principal gains were recorded in specialties. Pivotal issues were very narrow. Prices were fairly even at the opening and a mild uptrend followed. The best price levels were generally maintained to the close.

Great Atlantic & Pacific 6 per cent preferred showed further recovery, finishing 4½ points higher. Murphy Co. showed a similar advance. Fisk Rubber preferred was up 2, while Singer Manufacturing, Hiram Walker, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore and Lake Shore firmed around a point each.

American Cyanamid B, Creole Petroleum, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Wright Hargreaves, Swift & Co., Swift Internacionale, Electric Bond & Share, Pan American Airways, International Petroleum and Newmont ended steady to fractions higher. Pittsburgh Plate Glass was a trifle easy.

Stocks—The market closed its books on October with losses and gains about even. An average gain of one-tenth of a point was recorded. Sales volume passed to 400,000-share mark.

Bonds—Late trading brought no change in the irregular course and the market closed with a net loss of one-tenth of a point. Home Owners' Loan Corporation 4s swung ahead one-half point without the aid of other Federal issues.

Curb—The exchange closed with fractions to one or two or more points higher. Early advances were maintained in later trading. Specialties, oils and industrials improved.

Wheat—Corn developed notable strength, but wheat parted company with it and closed lower. Easier foreign prices were blamed. Oats were mixed. December wheat sold at 95½; May, at 94⅜.

Cotton—Attention was centered on the crop situation and the market closed 6 to 26 points lower. December sold at 12.31; January, at 12.16.

Dollar—The United States dollar was steady on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $4.98; 6.59¼ cents to the French franc, and 40.25 cents to the German mark.

Wheat Slumps; Corn Develops More Strength

Chicago, Oct. 31 (AP).—Outdoing season low-price records, wheat in Chicago today parted company with corn, which developed notable strength.

Wheat underwent a fall of 2 cents a bushel in some cases, largely responsive to cheap offerings of French wheat and to weakness at Buenos Aires, where the Argentine government appeared to be removing trade restrictions at practically the same time the Canadian government seeks to increase regulatory measures at Winnipeg. Prospective freezing temperatures apt to enlarge feeding demand gave a stimulus to buying of corn.

The close for wheat was nervous, ¾ to ½ under yesterday's finish, May, 94⅜@94½; corn, ⅛ off to 1 cent up; May, 76⅞@77; oats at ⅜ decline to ¼ advance, and provisions varying from 5 cents setback to a rise of 32 cents.

Cotton Market

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—The attention of the cotton trade centered today on the new October crop position, and the weakness of that delivery had an unsettling effect on the general list. March contract sold off to 12:20, or 6 points lower, while October broke to 11.81, or 27 points below yesterday's closing quotations. Last prices were at or within a point of the lowest for the day, with the market ending barely steady at net declines of 6 to 26 points.

Exports today, 22,058, making 1,327,529 so far this season. Port receipts, 33,529. United States port stocks, 3,159,368.

Phone Service Here Boosted

Telephones serving the city of Washington increased 1,638 during the month of September to reach a grand total of 184,532, according to the report of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission.

This is an increase of nearly 11,000 over the number of telephones in active service at the same date last year, when 173,713 were in use. The net increase during the month of September was exactly 600 in advance of the increase during September, 1933, when 1,038 new phones were installed.

Telephone calls during September of this year were increased 890,000 over the same month last year, there having been 19,021,000 calls in September, according to John A. Remon, general manager of the company.

Operating revenues of the company for the month of September amounted to $788,842. Expenses, including interest, amounted to $638,637, leaving a balance before dividend of $150,220. Taxes for September amounted to $62,867. The cost of plant in service on September 30, 1934, was $35,837,331.

Holleman Gets Agency Here Of Home Life

Washington Is Listed for Quarter Million in New Insurance.

Vernon W. Holleman has been appointed general agent at Washington, D. C., for the Home Life Insurance Co. of New York, effective today, succeeding H. R. Bryarly, who resigned, because of his health, after 20 years in that post.

Mr. Holleman is one of the younger men in the business who has made an outstanding record. He started in life insurance with the Home Life in Mississippi, his home State, in 1927, after completing his studies at Millsaps College in Jackson, Miss.

He became one of the ranking personal producers of the Home Life, a member of its President's Club, and in 1930 was appointed supervisor of agents in the agency at Jackson. Active in social and civic affairs, he is a past president of the Mississippi Association of Life Underwriters.

In 1933, Mr. Holleman was called to the home office of the company to become agency field assistant in charge of recruiting, training and production work. He has been most active in planned estate work and has made many talks on that subject.

A quarter of a million dollars of new life insurance estates is assured Washingtonians as the result of the first three weeks of a "million dollar effort" by the Mutual Benefit Life of New Jersey.

It is expected that fully a million dollars of new capital will be guaranteed to wives and other dependents of this city and vicinity by December 31 as the result of the special effort of this one agency.

T. Janney Brown, of this city, has just received from the American Eagle Fire Insurance Co., of New York, a "long service" gold watch fob, the official decoration of the company's "Old Guard," in recognition of his connection with the company for the past 27 years.

The emblem of service was accompanied by a letter from Bernard M. Culver, president of the American Eagle, who expressed his appreciation of Mr. Brown's record of loyal and faithful service.

Power Output Is Increased

Week's Production Rises to 1,677,229 Kilowatt Hours.

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—Electric Power output last week totaled 1,677,229,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 1,667,505,000 kilowatt hours the previous week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The increase over a year ago was 3.4 per cent, against an increase of 3 per cent the week before.

The Pacific Coast region showed a loss of 0.5 per cent from a year ago, as compared with a gain of 4.6 per cent shown the week before, and the New England region was unchanged last week as compared with 1933, against a loss of 4.4 per cent the week before.

Regional gains from 1933 for last week were:

Middle Atlantic, 3.6 per cent, against 3.0 per cent; Central industrial, 2.5, against 1.3; West Central, 7.4, against 5.6; Southern States, 9.9, against 9.2; Rocky Mountain, 5.6, against 7.3.

Business Notes

Compiled By G. L. HERRMANN

On November 6, election day, and on November 12, in observence of Armistice day, the Board of Trade, the Chicago Stock Exchange and the Mercantile Exchange will not be in session.

Plans are going forward for the thirty-ninth annual convention of the National Association of Mutual Insurance Cos., to be held in Savannah, Ga., November 12-15.

J. S. Knox, sales counselor, was the principle speaker at this week's meeting of the Chicago Association of Manufacturers' Representatives held at the Palmer House, Chicago.

Aggregate sales 14.1 per cent larger and aggregate net profit 22.8 per cent lower than in the like 1933 period are shown for the quarter ended September 30 by the first 22 industrial companies whose reports show sales as well as profits or loss.

Chiefs of the three management divisions to be created for the Association of American Railroads are expected to be chosen by J. J. Pelley, president of the association, within the next few days.

The officers to be picked are three vice presidents to be in charge of finance, operations and accounting.

Orders for fall and Christmas merchandise placed in the country's retail stores this year will total nearly $3,150,000,000, a gain of $150,000,000 over 1933 season, according to estimate of T. L. Blanke, manager of merchandising division of National Retail Dry Goods Association.

Five-year public works program involving expenditure of $12,000,000, of which $7,000,000 would go for nonself-liquidating works and $5,000,000 for low-cost housing, is being recommended to President Roosevelt by PWA.

Canadian Bond Offering Rise to $539,074,237

New York, Oct. 31.—New flotations of Canadian government and municipal bonds during the first ten months of 1934 totaled $539,074,237, compared with $523,249,049 during the same period in 1933, and $285,977,437 in 1932, according to Wood, Gundy & Co., Ltd.

Of the total for this year, only $50,000,000 has been sold in this country, a refunding issue of notes of the Dominion sold in New York during August, $433,010,371 having been marketed in Canada and $56,063,866 in Great Britain.

Steel Output Rate Rises to 26 Per Cent

Increase in Capacity Is 1½; Highest Since Early August.

New York, Oct 31 (AP).—Estimating steel production the past week had increased 1½ per cent to 26 per cent of capacity, the highest since early August, the Iron Age noted in its weekly survey today that prospects were good for a further broadening of steel demand in the next two weeks.

Heavier pig iron production, enlarged demand from the automobile industry and a further strengthening of scrap prices were cited as indications of added bouyancy in iron and steel markets.

"New construction is tapering," the review adds, "PWA allotments for public works are now practically completed and no new funds are immediately available. Structural steel awards of 7,900 tons are the lowest since the last week of September.

"The Norfolk & Western will buy 10,000 tons of rails with its own funds. While it is understood that the Government is prepared to offer attractive interest rates on loans for rail purchases, the plans of most carriers are still indefinite.

"Inquiry from the oil industry has improved. Iron and steel exports in September, at 301,330 tons, were the largest of the year. Scrap alone accounted for 225,212 tons. The Iron Age composites for finished steel and pig iron are unchanged at 2.124 cents a pound and $17.90 a ton."

5th Bank Area Trade Makes Seasonal Gain

Fall Business Begins in Normal Volume With Farmers Better Off.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 31 (AP).—Business in the Fifth Federal Reserve District during the month ended October 15 showed seasonal advances over recent months and in most lines exceeded trade of the same period last year, William W. Hoxton, chairman and Federal Reserve agent of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, reported yesterday.

The district covered by the report includes Virginia and West Virginia, North and South Carolina, Maryland and the District of Columbia.

The bank reported that the textile strike retarded business in the Carolinas to some extent during the first three weeks of September, but that "on the whole, the strike had less effect than might have been expected."

Farmers Better Off.

"In bank circles, the rediscounts at the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond declined further between September 15 and October 15, while the circulation of Federal Reserve notes showed somewhat more than a seasonal increase. The bank increased advances to industry, but member bank reserve deposits declined moderately.

"Reporting member banks slightly increased their outstanding loans and their investments in securities, but both demand and time deposits registered small decreases.

"Debits to individual accounts, reflecting transactions passing through the banks of leading cities in the Fifth District, increased seasonally during the four weeks ended October 10 in comparison with the preceding four weeks, ended September 12, and also exceeded debits in four weeks ended October 11, 1933, by nearly 20 per cent."

Failures Much Lower.

The report said the commercial failures record of the district was the best in the country in comparison with last year and that failures were fewer and aggregate liabilities less last month than in any month since 1920.

Employment conditions were improved as result of the textile strike settlement during the period, but otherwise, the report said, there was little change in labor circles. Coal production decreased moderately, a seasonal gain, but was below the levels of last September.

Textile activity was restricted by the strike in September, with orders continuing relatively small and mills not generally back on full-time operation.

Walt Mason Himself

The Chest.

"Contribute to the Welfare Chest, this plan is surely much the best; haphazard giving is a frost; the coin that goes that way is lost. The Welfare folks investigate the merits of the luckless skate; if he's deserving he will find we are considerate and kind, and if he is a phoney bo, to outer darkness he will go. Contribute to the Welfare Chest, and when you have some busted guest, some wandering and hungry cuss, just send him right along to us. Your problems thus are simplified, and good is done on every side." It seems convincing, sane and wise, the logic of the Welfare guys and I consult my little hoard, and dig up what I can afford. Now when the busted gent appears, and asks for doughnuts, shedding tears, I'll bid him seek the Welfare Chest, and give that splendid scheme a test. It will be vain for homeless gents to try to borrow 15 cents. Haphazard giving is a snare that doesn't get us anywhere. But now the hungry pilgrim comes, and asks me for some seeded plums; he looks so ghastly and so tired, as though his sparkplugs weren't wired, he looks so feeble and outworn, like some one born and bred to mourn, that I forget the Welfare Chest, and all that's logical and best, and hand him out a joint of meat, a doughnut and a pickled beet, a pumpkin pie, some lima beans, and cake and dandelion greens, and after he has journeyed West I think about the Welfare Chest.

APPLE MARY By Martha Orr

GRAN'MA DO YOU THINK WE'LL EVER GET YOUR MONEY BACK AGAIN, AN' BE RICH LIKE WE USED TO BE?
I DOUBT IT, DENNIE BUT YOU CAN'T TELL.
I'M AFRAID IT'LL BE A LONG TIME BEFORE WE SEE THAT MUCH MONEY AGAIN! I STILL CAN'T UNDERSTAND HOW SO MUCH COULD GO SO FAST. IF OUR LAWYER HADN'T BEEN AN OLD FRIEND OF TH' FAMILY I'D SUSPECT HIM OF SOMETHING CROOKED
HELLO, TOM! HAVEN'T SEEN YOU FOR A LONG TIME. HOW'VE YOU BEEN? HOW'S THE WIFE?
NOT SO GOOD, APPLE MARY. I LOST MY JOB, AND HAVEN'T FOUND ANOTHER.
THAT SURE IS TOUGH! HERE, TAKE A COUPLE OF APPLES, THEY'LL BRING YOU LUCK!

On the Air Today

By George M. Adams, Jr.

WJSV found its haunted house . . . a ghost-frequented Colonial mansion at 1741 New York avenue. And braving the threatening shades of visitors from the nether world, who in life lent mystery to the dwelling through murder and suicide, Bob Trout put Ronald Dawson and his company on the air at midnight last night from the dining room of the mansion in a reenactment of its eerie tales.

They say one can not cross in front of its spiral staircase without stumbling over the ghost of a young girl who flung herself to her death. A murdered octoroon wails for the officer who dispatched her, and another young girl calls for her father, who killed her in a mad fit of anger . . . but WJSV and its staff found none of these phantoms . . . though several of Dawson's actors are said to have shuddered.

ANALYSIS and interpretation of election returns over Columbia's network from 10:30 to 11 p. m. on Tuesday, November 6, will be handled by Raymond Clapper, of The Washington Post staff, and H. V. Kaltenborn, C. B. S. news commentator.

Both men, experienced in their fields, will comment on the question of whether or not Pennsylvania can elect its first Democratic Senator since the Civil War and the possibility of a new Republican candidate emerging to oppose President Roosevelt in 1936. Election returns will be read through the courtesy of the Press-Radio News Bureau.

THE old necessity of twirling dials all evening long in eager search for dance tunes will prevail no more. It will be possible hereafter to plan a dance party and have it, due to a three-hour program of dance music planned for N. B. C. networks from 10:30 p. m. to 1:30 a. m., starting December 1.

Entitled "Let's Dance," the program will be aired in three separate units, alternating with popular dance music, and will require the aid of three band masters, three directors and one master director. A hookup of 57 stations will carry the broadcast through five hours of continuous playing to blanket the country's four time zones.

Your Announcer Is . . .

ROBERT E. (BOB) YOUSE, WMAL field general of the morning "trick." Opens the station, makes station "breaks" and lends his pleasing barytone voice to special broadcasts. Has been in and out of radio since 1924 with trio work at KJR, Seattle, where he announced until 1931, leaving to tour vaudeville. Came to WRC in March, 1933, and, after a month, was assigned to WMAL, where he has done sports, Armistice Day programs and a Cabinet member series. Graduate of Washington State College, where he played end on the football team, sang in the glee club and ran around the track. Announced for the college station, KWSC. Worked his way to the Orient as fireman on a steamer and arrived home to manage KFBL, Everett, Wash. Bob saw the light of day at Indianapolis, Ind., came to the District at the age of 3, but has lived mostly in the Northwest, working with practically every station in that area. Tall, brawny, curly-haired, Bob's delivery is cheerful, resonant. He likes his work, but feels a constant urge for the golf course.

CONTINUING its campaign to strengthen and brighten daytime spots, C. B. S. today launches a new air personality in the person of Jerry Cooper, young barytone, who will headline "Roadways of Romance" with music and dramatics from 3 to 4 p. m. on Thursdays.

Cooper plays the part of a musical comedy star, and Roger Kinne, barytone, will enact his friend. The first program finds them walking out on a musical comedy rehearsal after a heated argument. Each week will land them in a different country, enjoying life and strife.

MAURO-COTTONE, former Vatican organist, who has been bringing well-done versions of popular operas to A. B. S. networks on Thursday nights, presents today from 9 to 9:30 p. m. his version of Verdi's "Traviata." An American chorus will assist the soloists picked from the ranks of the best-known operatic performers. Eight selections from the opera will be sung. WOL carries the program.

BARBARA STANWYCK, noted young picture star, appears as Rudy Vallee's guest tonight at 8 o'clock on WRC in a specially written radio sketch entitled "Christmas." She will be supported by Gale Gordon, leading man for Mary Pickford, and Ann Stone, veteran mike actress.

Staying on the same spot, you will hear at 10 p. m. a tabloid version of "The Girl Friend," musical comedy hit, with Paul Whiteman's Music Hall. Helen Jepson, who is presently to sing with the "Met" opera, will fill the remainder of the full hour broadcast with operatic arias and favorite modern tunes.

Colonel Porter Succeeds Lane In Marine Post

Will Assume Duties Today; General Retires After 47 Years of Service.

Col. David Dixon Porter, U. S. M. C., will assume his new duties as adjutant and inspector of the Marin Corps today relieving Brig. Gen. Rufus Herman Lane, it was stated at the Navy Department yesterday.

Gen. Lane retires after more than 47 years service and upon reaching the statutory retirement age of 64 years. He will move to his model farm in Virginia.

In a letter to Gen. Lane on his retirement Secretary Swanson said, "Your term has been characterized by wise counsel, exceptional judgment and ability in handling difficult problems."

Gen. Lane entered the Naval Academy in 1887. He graduated in 1895 from Columbian Law School, now George Washington. He was awarded the medal of Military Merit for his services with the Military Governor of the Dominican Republic. He also holds the Nicaraguan Medal of Distinction and other commendations.

Col. Porter, the new adjutant and inspector, was appointed a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps in May of 1898. His father and his grandfather were both naval officers. He has served in the Philippines, China and Samar, Cuba and France. He has received more than a dozen high decorations including the Medal of Honor and the Spanish Campaign Medal.

Home Building Revival Seen On Wide Scale

Family Unit Shortage in U. S. Estimated at 500,000.

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—Widespread revival of home building to meet an estimated shortage of 500,000 family units in the United States was forecast today by leaders of the producers council, affiliated with the American Institute of Architects in a cooperative effort to speed housing development.

Diversion of Federal appropriations from public works to private construction was advocated by J. C. Bebb, president of the council, as a means of accelerating heavy building. He asserted that experts expected the building revival to reach boom proportions in less than three years.

Thomas S. Holden, vice president of the F. W. Dodge Corporation, declared there was a shortage of at least 500,000 family units, houses or apartments, and that another 2,500,000 units needed enlargement to eliminate overcrowding.

"Every one, from the President down, is now apparently ready to admit that recovery can not be said to be under way until private building construction is revived in a large way," Bebb said.

"The only way to revive it is to remove the present state of uncertainty as to the future and provide means for financing projects that are ready to go forward as soon as funds are available. • • •

"The next Congress undoubtedly will have a lot to say about further large amounts for public works. • • • However, in view of what has happened in that field, the construction industry is apparently very definitely of the opinion that any such appropriation by Congress should be devoted to encouraging private construction."

Bebb contended that Governmental assistance for private building, other than small-unit housing, would make available for the construction industry large credit resources now idle in banks.

Gen. Johnson Is Ill With Foot Infection

Gen. Johnson, who entered several days ago under the name of L. M. Benedict, was "in good shape now," hospital authorities said. He was expected to remain for three or four days more, "depending on his own wishes."

Youth Identified As Son of Palmers

New London, Conn., Oct. 31 (AP).—Robert Byron Price, tall, slim youth of Stuttgart, Ark., was identified today in Superior court by a surprise witness as the boy who was born 20 years ago to Mrs. Audrey Palmer.

The identification was made by Mary Jennings Brown, 37, colored, of Stuttgart, in the midst of a court fight through which Robert, 20, hopes to prove he is the son of Mrs. Palmer, former New York actress and her husband, Chales T. Palmer, wealthy New London manufacturer.

Robert seeks to obtain $1,500,000 from the estates of the manufacturer and the latter's mother, Mrs. Louisa Palmer, previously the witnesses had testified Mrs. Palmer, then known as Agnes Allen, came to the Stuttgart home of her half-sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Price, to give birth to the child. Robert was born four years before the Palmers were married and administrators for the two estates, defendants in the suits, contend he is the son of Mrs. Price and her husband William.

11-1-34 McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

James Shields, noted American soldier and political leader, served in the United States Senate as a Representative of three different States—Illinois, Minnesota and Missouri. Born in Ireland, he emigrated to this country in 1826 at the age of 16, and settled in Illinois, taking up law as a profession.

In the Mexican War he was a brigadier general, honored for exceptional bravery at Cerro Gordo. In 1848, at the age of 38, he was appointed Governor of Oregon Territory, but soon resigned to accept election to the Senate from Illinois on the Democratic ticket.

In 1855 he removed to Minnesota and three years later was again elected to the U. S. Senate. He went to California a year after his election. His political career was interrupted by the Civil War, in which he participated as a brigadier general of volunteers. He resigned from the Army in less than two years and settled this time in Missouri. There he was appointed to the Senate in 1879 to fill an unexpired term.

Norman Perdue, professional strongman, went on a milk diet for 11 days, then carried his 125-pound wife to the top of a 47-story skyscraper in 22 minutes—just to demonstrate the importance of milk in the diet. He later submitted to a physical examination to show that he suffered no ill effects.

Absentee Vote Denied Stork.

New York, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—A visit from the stork does not entitle one to an absentee vote, the board of elections ruled today, informing an expectant mother that "if you desire to vote it will be necessary for you to present yourself to the election officials at the polls on election day."
